Studds supports rail service

By Bob Tis
Special to the Mariner

Congressman Gerry Studds had harsh words for the Reagan administration Sunday. He was the guest speaker for a brunch at the Barnside Tavern in Hanover, sponsored by CO-OP 6, and hosted by the Hingham Democratic Committee.

Studds, up from Washington for the weekend, cited U.S. policy in Central America, spending on the STAR WARS project and AIDS as the major issues in the nation's capitol.

"Unfortunately the people who care and are worried about these issues are not in power right now," said Studds, who also stated that the President was "oblivious to reality."

Approximately 100 people attended brunch to hear this district's Democratic congressman touch on a variety of topics ranging from rail transit on the South Shore to education, local business and other more global issues. Studds maintained animosity for the Reagan administration at almost every turn.

"The current AIDS problem is criminally negligent. People are dying because they don't know simple facts," he said, adding that President Reagan has consistently cut money from the AIDS research budget since 1981.

"It is extraordinary," says Studds, "he is not held accountable for what he (Reagan) does or says."

Studds expressed his views against further support of the Contras. "If congress can't find the backbone to stop aid to the Contras then I'll be out of adjectives. It doesn't even take guts, not that many people are in favor of supplying weapons to the Contras," said Studds, a very captivating orator.

Studds has held office since 1973 and has always gone on record supporting direct rail service to Boston from the South Shore. "Four governors have come to me, and I've told them the same thing," he said.

"It might not solve all the problems of the expressway and it's going to take more money now than before, less of which will be from the federal kitty, since we waited so long. But we need it; I hope we get it."

Studds was also critical of the Reagan administration's policy. "The budget asks for another cut, this one for 45 percent in education. It used to be a broad bi-partisan consensus that we should help finance college educations."

Studds also touched on big business in Massachusetts. "When entrepreneurs can manipulate corporations that serve the public then it is time to ask some serious questions," said Studds, referring to a series of travel mishaps he had earlier in the week.

On impending welfare reforms Studds joked, "The President says he's for it, wait 'til he finds out that it costs money."

Studds addressed the problem of labor shortages on Cape Cod and the illegal alien problem. He thanked the CO-OP 6 for organizing the meeting and had great praise for the work they have done in unifying the local democrats.

"We've never had anything like this before," said Studds. "We've travelled a long distance."

Studds was also critical of the Reagan administration's education policy. "The budget asks for another cut, this one for 45 percent in education. It used to be a broad bi-partisan consensus that we should help finance college educations."

Kimball's receives amended liquor license

By Jane Lane
Mariner Staff

Selectmen okayed an amended liquor license for Kimball's By The Sea, allowing the motor inn and restaurant to serve liquor in several areas of the Cohasset Harbor building.

Despite objections from some neighbors, selectmen agreed with the attorney representing Kimball's - that the license is simply a clarification of what has been done at the facility since it opened in 1974.

The license now will state that liquor may be served in the 59 rooms at the inn, and it may be stored in the cellar. Liquor will be allowed in the main function room, the swimming pool area, the first floor garden view patio, the first floor harbor view patio, the second floor roof patio, the connecting lobbies and corridors.

Selectmen Chairman Rocco Laugelle explained that an ABCC representative who was staying at the inn first noticed the apparent violations of the license specifications. He notified the Roy Corp., owners of the motor inn, that the license should be amended to include areas throughout the facility for the serving of alcohol.

Atty. Charles Humphreys, representing the Roy Corp., argued that the license should be "amended or clarified" to properly state what the license holders assumed could be done at the restaurant and inn. There will be no expansion of the building, nor any greater use of the license by the owners, he emphasized. Atty. Humphreys also noted that since 1974, there have been no complaints from police or selectmen that Kimball's was extending beyond the boundaries of its liquor license.

"The issue," he stated, "is whether the board wishes to amend the language of the license to conform with what has been done since it (Kimball's) opened."

Selectman Laugelle noted the board members weren't aware of the license violation until they were notified by the amended license application submitted by Kimball's. He favored granting the amended license, saying, "the business they run there is a very good business and this is something they need to survive there."

When asked by Selectman James Gallagher, general manager Daniel Leahy explained that since 1981 there have been only two occasions he could recall when neighbors issued formal complaints about the business. On both occasions, Leahy said, they involved noise levels and the business agreed to respond.

And in answer to a question from Selectman Burt Pratt, the attorney explained that an innholders license, which is the license held by Kimball's, allows the licensing authority to determine where the business will serve liquor. The innholders license also allows the business to serve alcohol in the rooms of the motel.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby asked about the parking facilities and whether they are sufficient for the motel. Atty. Humphreys explained that Kimball's does have adequate parking in their lot and across Elm Street, but the further lot is sometimes used by other businesses and neighbors. "But it has yet to require severe policing," he stated.

Abuttor Wendall Leary questioned whether Kimball's motor inn is legally allowed to serve the general public at its restaurant, and to advertise the use of that facility to the general public. He said it was a violation of the zoning board's decision regarding Kimball's. The attorney noted that the restriction against the public's use of the facility was ruled illegal by the courts in 1984 and that limiting their advertising was ruled to be an infringement on their freedom of speech.

Paul Pattison of 104 Elm Street listed a number of his objections to the granting of the license. He said the areas where liquor is now served at the facility extends beyond the conditions of the special permit granted the motor inn by the zoning board. Granting an extension of the liquor license would be enlarging the conditions of the special permit, he stated.

Pattison argued that there are currently 8,800 additional square feet of floor space than originally approved under that special permit. That includes the patios where liquor is now served. With the additional space, Pattison said, Kimball's would need additional parking spaces.

Wayne Sawchuk of Beechwood Street and Donald Staszko of Atlantic Avenue supported the license clarification. They both noted that Kimball's is a good, well-run business operation that serves a need in the town. "Leahy runs a tight ship," Staszko stated, "and I recommend approval of the license."

Pattison later charged that Selectman Laugelle was running to the defense of Kimball's against the objecting neighbors. Laugelle denied the statement and added, "I hate to knock a business as long as it's a good business in this town."

Robert Davenport of Sohier Street reminded selectmen that the license comes up for renewal each year and if they are dissastisfied with the operation they can amend or revoke the specifications of that license.

Selectmen then voted to grant the license by a three to one margin.

Community Center addition plans approved

Architect's rendering

The Board of Directors of the Cohasset Community Center, at their last meeting, approved final drawings of the new addition to the center.

The two story addition will add about 4,000 square feet to the center and will cost around $365,000.

It will be built by the Travi Construction Corp. which is finishing construction on the South Shore Art Center. Construction on the two-story addition will begin June 1, with a completion date of September 1.

The new addition will enable the center to expand all program offerings including the Nursery School, gymnastic, aerobics, and the Senior Center activities. The two-year fundraising drive has raised about half the amount needed to build the addition. An expanded drive to raise the remaining monies will begin shortly.

Editorial

Preserving our town

Real estate and real estate prices on the South Shore are hot topics right now.

And no where is it hotter than in Cohasset. Local newspapers and Boston television stations have been following the trend of rising interest rates for mortages and the high cost of homes in this area.

It has long been an accepted fact that the average cost of a home in Cohasset is higher than many surrounding communities. One television report this week stated a ten-room, well-maintained home in Fall River on the market for $325,000 would cost about $1 million in Cohasset.

The basic fact is, more people would like to live in Cohasset than in Fall River. It is a small, beautiful community where neighbors are friends. The school system is rated among the best in the state,and students score consistently high in standardized testing.

We are a community that respects and enjoys the beauty and heritage of this quaint town.

We are not free from problems - there is a smattering of crime in Cohasset. We are fighting to preserve our excellent school system, to attract qualified teachers who will inspire as well as instruct our children.

We look upon the encroachment of business with a jaundiced eye. We realize it is a necessary part of our existence as a thriving community, yet no one particularly wants to live next door to a large supermarket, a motor inn, a restaurant or an auto body shop.

We elect town officials who lead our fight to preserve the quality of our community. They must be doing the job, because the value of property in this town is rising all the time - still tops in this South Shore area.

There is a down side to our exclusivity. Although we daily count our blessings as residents of Cohasset, we must acknowledge that our privilege is another man's denial. There are many, many people who can not afford the high cost of living in Cohasset. They include elderly, young adults and middle class families - all parts of the population that comprise our world.

We certainly need not feel guilty about the costs that have prevented these people from residing in our town. It's simply too bad. Cohasset is special, we agree, and we should continue to do everything to preserve that quality.

That means protecting our water supply from potential polluters. The fight against Cohasset Heights landfill may become ugly at times, but unfortunately it is a necessary struggle. We must be assured, not simply hopeful, that our water supply is protected from pollution. Without safe drinking water, Cohasset will no longer be a liveable community, nevermind an attractive one.

We are also involved in the struggle to preserve the small-town nature of Cohasset. By limiting the sewered areas of this town, we will prevent large-scale development from business and multi-family structures. This is not how we envision the future of Cohasset - home of industry and apartments.

While acknowledging that ever-present need for harmony between residential and commercial, we believe there is a finite need for unlimited industry. The fight to find ourselves a successful, relatively small-scale sewer plan must be completed. Only then we will be assured that Cohasset can indeed face its future, confident that it has maintained its integrity and preserved its important heritage.

Society's show and tell

The Cohasset Historical Society will present another in its new and innovative evening meetings open to Society Members and the public on Tuesday evening May 19 at the Unitarian Parish House Hall.

This occasion will be the time for some very interesting "Show & Tell" using resources from the Society's extensive museum collections. The Society will be selecting some of the Society's unique treasures from among our collection of antique household items, gowns, marine and farm implements, paintings and documents to display and demonstrate.

Not all the "Show & Tell" will be provided by the presenters, since it is our plan to ask people in the audience with any background history, or personal experience with any item to share their knowledge with us. For instance, some one may have used a handsome pocket sundial in a snakeskin case, or have put "swamp shoes" on their horse to help them through the marsh, or have sharpened their pencil years ago at the King Street (or other) District School with the big, hand-cranked sharpener.

We will demonstrate (with your help) how everything works. Small items are being photographed and will be shown on a screen so that all can see them. Everything will be on display before and after the meeting for viewing. Come, learn, enjoy and bring a friend. Admission will be free, but donations will be welcomed.

CHL makes proposal but health board wants more

"Do you have any further proposals?" he asked the CHL representatives.

"No," Moehrke replied. "The engineers are satisfied these measures will resolve the problem."

"What if contaminants are still picked up at the perimeter wells?" queried Burns.

"Let's try this and see if it works," Barry offered.

Health board counsel Michael Leon noted GHR's proposed trench stops midway down the property line.

It stops, Richmond said, at the liner. Further down the property line, toward monitoring wells #9 and #9A the landfill is unlined. "There are no leachate breakouts there at all."

Baird expressed his disatisfaction with the lack of proposed action there,noting surface and ground water samples at monitoring well #9 have shown contamination.

"There is no indication contamination there has ceased," he said. "and that constitutes a discharge of contaminated water into the lower landfill."

Baird moved for monthly testing. "If the contamination there continues," he said, "I will recommend we order you to immediately cease and desist."

The crowd in attendance greeted Baird's suggestion with cheers and hearty applause.

Baird recalled a discussion from a previous hearing session in which he said Cohasset Heights suggested putting in a trench around the perimeter for the purpose of volatilizing the volatile organics in the ground water.

"As I understood it," Baird said, "the board this past week was to receive a proposal for the trench and for interceptor wells around monitoring wells #3 and #9.

"I want the contaminated water contained; I do not want it to go into the lower landfill," he told the CHL representatives. "I want to see that product intercepted, not exiting the landfill. I know it can be done - and not at excessive cost to you."

Daniel Ostrye, of GHR Engineering disagreed. "It's possible to put in a trench," he said, "but we'd have to do something with the water; we would have to remove it and put it into a treatment system. The economics of that are way out of sight." He estimated the cost of such a project at $3 million.

"If that's so, there's more of a problem there than we thought," Baird commented.

"This landfill has posted more money ($2.2 million) and done more to insure security based on risk of harm than any other landfill in the state," Moehrke argued.

"It's not merely a question of spending the money; if you had a certified document that proved beyond a reasonable doubt that there is a threat to the water supply, we would spend the money," he said. "But based on what we perceive to be an exceedingly small percentage of danger, to spend $3 million does not seem to be reasonable.

"We have not heard from the board," Moehrke added. "If you disagree with our experts, bring forward someone who is equally qualified."

"We are trying to avoid the expense of going out and finding some consultant to go out and rebut your expert's testimony," Baird retorted. Instead, the board voted 2-1 for monthly testing of monitoring wells #2, #3 and #9 for the next six months. Burns delivered the lone, dissenting vote, saying previous test results and the quarterly testing program in place provide adequate information.

Paul Barry told the board CHL will resume the collection of reddish water on an adjacent parcel of land belonging to the Trustees of Reservations. He said he had stopped the action after the previous hearing because he believed the water was shown to be uncontaminated.

"The level of benzene in monitoring well #3 exceeds the ground water limit," Baird commented. "This suggests that the material located on the Trustees of Reservations land is undiluted leachate."

Moehrke confirmed he has received a letter from the Trustees of Reservations calling for CHL to cut off discharges of contaminated water onto their property.

The attorney said he will meet with the trustees and present to them a report on the situation, including information on property rights concerns.

With regard to the impact on off-site locations, Baird moved to solicit proposals for an analysis of risk and environmental impact.

"It's important to make a distinction between ecology and public health," Leon warned.

"If trees are affected, if the woods are dying, then humans eventually will be impacted," Baird said.

"I'm concerned about spending thousands and thousands of dollars," Becker noted.

"With regard to the expense to the town," Burns commented, "we can increase the tipping fee if we need to. We increased the tipping fee in the first session of this hearing for just this purpose."

The test results, Baird explained, will either confirm what CHL's experts have been testifying to, or it will give the town expert witness to rebut Cohasset Heights' information. The board said it is suspicious of GHR's testing.

"In the past we have taken the conservative approach," Burns told the crowd, which had expressed its frustration with the board's slow pace. "We are gathering information from engineers and legal counsel. The past three meetings have helped direct us which way to go. We don't have expertise in certain areas. We are drawing upon the information we are gathering at these hearings to set up a systematic way to go about addressing possible problems."

"We haven't been sitting back," Becker added. "We have spent $50,000 for information from Camp, Dresser and McKee (the board's engineering firm).

At this point, the Tropicana-Drano flap cleared the hall of CHL representatives. The hearing continued in their absence as the board voted 3-0 to endorse Baird's motion for a risk analysis. The floor was then opened to the audience, allowing the townspeople to express their concerns.

Much of the conversation was debate over the percentage of flow toward Lily Pond.

Ralph Prebble, the board's engineer from CDM stuck with his calculations that 10 percent of flows out of the landfill head south toward Lily Pond, with one percent or less of the material actually reaching the water supply.

"It's hard to believe your 90-10 rule," Water Commissioner Ronald Goodwin commented. "It's easier to believe it goes 90-10 the other way.

A slide show by Bill Hodgson of Summer Street, featuring aerial photographs of the area showed the swamp in which much of the landfill's off-site run-off empties.

Hodgson told the board he believes that after a certain point in water table elevation, much of the water in the swamp empties south toward Lily Pond. He noted, under normal, dry circumstances, a majority of the flow would exit north toward the estuary of the Weir River in Hingham.

Hodgson's theory, along with many of the other concerns will be addressed through the board's actions to further studies.

The next session of the CHL hearing was scheduled for Wednesday, May 13 at 7:30 p.m. (probably at Town Hall). Then, the board is expected to address the issues of spotter and liability insurance coverage.

Cohasset kids invited to go fish

By John Magadieu
Mariner Staff

Cohasset youngsters are invited to participate in the first annual junior trout fishing derby May 23 at the Scituate Rod and Gun Club, which is located off Route 3A in Scituate.

The free program is for children 12 years old and under, however children must be accompanied by a parent. Free bait and tackle will be available to children who have neither.

Members of the Scituate Rod and Gun Club will be available to teach derby participants and their parents who are beginner anglers the art of casting and other aspects of the sport.

There will be free refreshments and many prizes awarded as well. Children will be divided into three age groups: five and under; six through eight years old and nine through 12 years old. Prizes will be awarded in various categories (biggest fish, most fish, etc.).

Participants will be allowed to take their catch home for supper if they wish or throw the fish back into the pond if they don't.

Free registration for the fishing derby will begin at 10 a.m., Saturday, May 23. The program should run until about 4 p.m.

The derby will be sponsored by Trask Tackle Company, Coca Cola Company, Zebco and the Scituate Rod and Gun Club.

"Sometime this past winter, I was having a discussion with Cohasset recreation commissioner Jack Worley and Richard Greim, president of the Scituate Rod and gun club about the fact that there are no fishing derbies for kids in this general area," commented Mark Trask of Trask Tackle.

"What I wanted to accomplish was a fishing tournament for kids in the surrounding towns: Hingham; Hull; Scituate; Norwell and Cohasset. We had several meetings and worked to coalesce our ideas into a workable tournament.

"It's actually not so much a tournament," Trask added, "as it is a derby; a tournament is more for competition, but this is more for fun.

"I think every fisherman would agree that fishing is a lifelong recreational outlet. It's nothing but beneficial for those kids who are introduced to it," he said.

"The popular image of the grandfather taking his grandson fishing, fathers teaching their daughters and sons fishing, is a very legitimate image of Americana," Trask said. "This is a family event."

He noted there is an "exorbitant number of people who go fishing each year." Fishing is the second most popular form of recreation behind swimming.

For the first annual junior trout fishing derby, we are trying to attract parents and children who might not otherwise consider fishing for children, Trask said, adding he is hoping for as many as 150 participants.

If the weather holds out and they catch a lot of trout, many area youngsters could get hooked on fishing May 23.

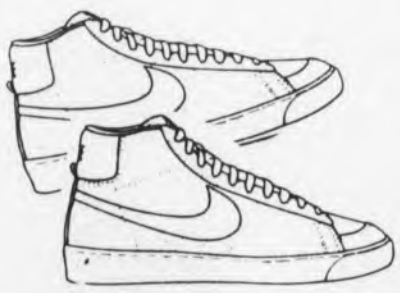
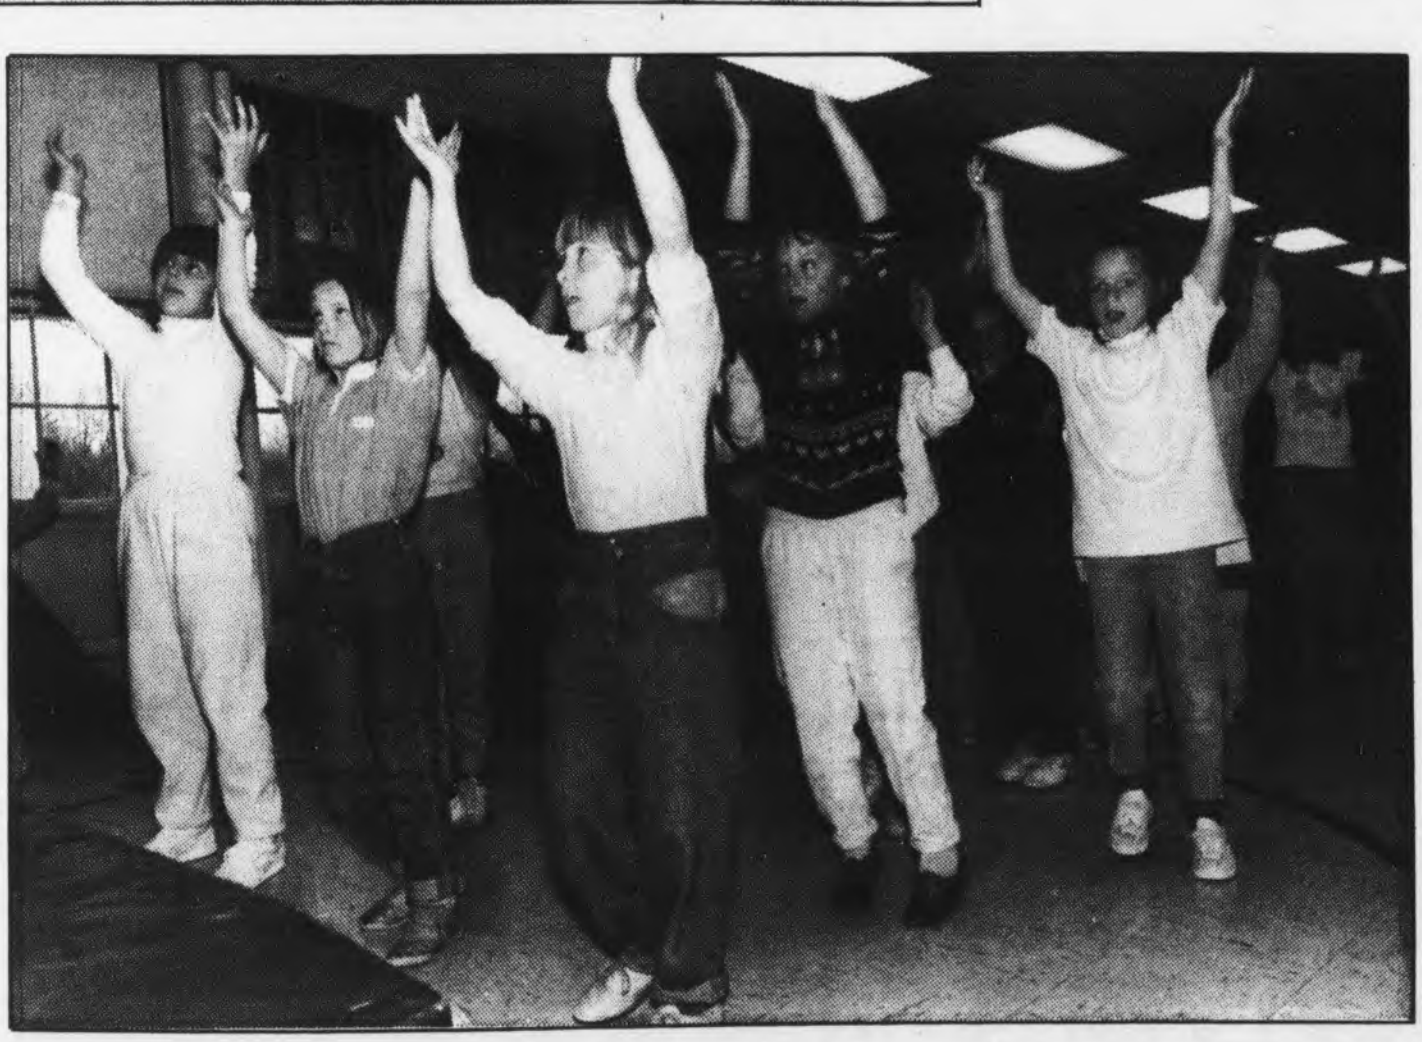
Workin' out

Dayle Dickinson of Cohasset took time out Tuesday from her job at Claire Aerobics in Scituate to give a lesson to Michael Weydt's third grade gym class at the Osgood School, where her daughter is a student.

Dickinson helped the youngsters prepare for Snapper Sneaker Day which will be held at the school May 21.





Dayle Dickinson leads a class of third graders in a strenuous aerobic workout.

April showers bring tax refunds

by Rep. MaryJeanette Murray

The U.S. Internal Revenue Service has announced that Massachusetts residents who suffered property damage from the April rains and flooding may eligible for additional tax refunds for 1986.

According to information from the Boston IRS Office, residents in Essex, Middlesex, Worcester, Franklin, Bershire, Hampshire, and Norfolk Counties may deduct a casualty loss from their 1986 return even though the loss happened in 1987.

Losses to business property are generally deducted in full while nonbusiness losses are deducted only in the amount that exceeds $100 plus 10 percent of the adjusted gross income as required by law.

Deductions are not allowed for the portion of any loss reimbursed or expected to be reimbursed by insurance or other companies.

Individuals can amend their 1986 return by completing Form 1040-X and submitting it to the IRS. Corporate taxpayers should use Form 1120-X.

To speed up the processing of any refund due, "Disaster Area Return" must be written in the top margin of Form 1040 or 1040-X and on the front of the mailing envelope. A signed statement must be attached stating the disaster area in which the property is located, the date of the event and the intent to claim the deduction in 1986, rather than 1987.

To inventory and compute the amount of loss, use IRS publication 547, "Tax Information." People who think they may qualify can call 1-800-424-3676 for the forms and publications.

Now here's some advise from the Massachuetts Office of Consumer Affairs and Business Regulation for those receiving federal funds for recent flood damage. The key is to exercise caution in selecting contractors to perform repair or construction projects and to insist on a written contract for the work.

Here's some reminders for those undertaking major construction projects:

- Get written estimates from at least three contractors. You are entitled to receive one upon request under the Massachusetts Consumer Protection Act.
- Ask each contractor to give you the name, address, and telephone number of three customers.
- Check each contractor with the Better Business Bureau and your local Chamber of Commerce.
- When you have chose a contractor, get all details of your agreement spelled out in writing in a contract which should include: 1. Detailed description of the work required including specifications with the brand name and size of materials; 2. starting and completion dates; 3. agreements regarding delivery, installation, service or adjustments and parts or accessories; 4. agreement on an "upset price," or maximum amount you are obliged to pay; 5. a "broom clause" which makes the contractor responsible for clean-up and removal of debris associated with the project.

Additional information and two pamphlets, "Consumer's Guide to Home Improvement Planning" and "Consumer's Model Home Improvement Contract" are available from Executive Office of Consumer Affairs and Business Regulation, One Ashburton Place, Boston, Ma. 02108.

Humane Society book sale May 16

The Standish Humane Society book sale will be held on Saturday, May 16, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Girl Scout House on Washington Street, Duxbury, near Hall's Corner.

Select summer books from thousands, including those by best selling authors, a host of romance novels, art and reference books, children's tales and cook books. All books, both hardcover and paperback, are priced for today's budgets. Proceeds from the book sale will benefit the homeless and injured pets helped by the Standish Humane Society.

Last year Standish placed over one thousand dogs and cats, some of whom needed extensive veterinary care before they could be adopted. "Standish, a small, all volunteer organization, could afford these extensive veterinary bills only because of the support of the general public," notes Suellen Conlon of Scituate, president of the Humane Society.

To donate books, or for more information, please call 545-5177, 834-4698, 934-5498 or 934-6041. To find the Girl Scout House, take Route 3A, take either Depot St., or St. George St. to Washington St. The Girl Scout House is on Washington St. near Hall's Corner.

June meeting date rescinded; no new time scheduled the deadline. She argued that many towns just completed their spring town meetings and others will be scheduling special town meetings in the fall which is too late for the July 18 deadline. SEMASS agreed to reconsider the deadline, although the officials did not indicate when they would reach a decision.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby noted that several communities are experiencing the same problem, and endorsed the change in the special town meeting date.

Selectmen agreed that members of the Disposal Area Study Committee along with town counsel, should negotiate a contract with SEMASS. As Tebbetts explained, the tipping fee originally quoted to Cohasset two years ago at $18.75 per ton has now escalated to $50 per ton, including transportation. The study committee has estimated that figure could increase annually to as much as $100 per ton. "There are a lot of questions now," she said. "Not all the communities are jumping up (and accepting a contract). At this point, I'm asking you to give us as much time as possible if they do not change the (deadline) date."

the meeting will be set later, when SEMASS decides on its revised deadline date. Selectmen indicated the special town meeting will likely be held the week before July 18, probably on a Monday, Tuesday or Wednesday night prior to the July 18 deadline.

Tebbetts explained to selectmen that at a meeting with SEMASS last week, she requested they reconsider

In other action Monday night, selectmen discussed a letter from South Shore Ice Sports Association, in which two parcels of Cohasset land were mentioned as possible sites for a public skating rink.

But when Selectman Martha Gjesteby questioned the progress of a legislative proposal regarding an MDC rink in Hull, Selectman Laugelle answered, "I don't think Hull will allow the MDC to go in there. Their property is too valuable and I don't think they want a rink at the entrance to Hull. I don't think it will come about."

Leah Pompeo of Ripley Road wrote to selectmen, asking whether two parcels of land along Rte. 3A are already committed for development, or whether they are available for construction of a skating rink. The association has been actively pursuing available land in the Hull, Cohasset and Scituate area for the construction of a rink to replace the Winter Garden which closed in March.

Pompeo indicated prior to Monday night's meeting that because of the incompleteness of the land search and the continuation of their study, the association requested a postponement of a meeting with selectmen. Selectmen informally discussed the proposal at their meeting, but made no decisions. At the conclusion of their discussion, selectmen decided to send a letter of encouragement to the association, noting they would need more details in order to make any future decisions.

The association intended to ask whether two Rte. 3A properties could be donated for the construction of a rink. One property includes 24 acres currently owned by Cohasset Estates on an unused portion of the Woodside Cemetery. The second parcel is on the opposite side of Rte 3A where the sportsmen's club was once located.

Selectman Burt Pratt noted the first parcel is privately owned by Cohasset Estates principals Irwin Golden and William Poland. Robert Davenport of Sohier Street stated the land was recently sold.

Pratt also questioned how a non-profit community group could afford the liability insurance for a public rink, when a private owner could not previously afford to operate that business. Pratt noted that before any decision is made on the future use of the sportsmen's club property, it should be cleared of the debris that has accumulated since it was vacated several years ago.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle said it was his responsibility to barricade the entrance to that land, something he promised he would accomplish. After that, Highway Surveyor Harold Litchfield said his crews will clean up the property.

Community Center spring classes

The Cohasset Community Center is now taking registrations for May, June and July classes.

New aerobics classes are starting in the morning from 9 to 10 with Joanne Sheppard and evening classes are starting on Tuesday and Thursday evenings from 7 to 8 with Ann Platt instructing. The price is $36 for two days and $51 for three days.

Tennis classes will start June 8 with Sue Dalrymple. Call 383-0088 for information and times. You will be placed in class according to age and ability. Tennis classes are limited to four persons per class and cost $24 for six weeks of instruction. We have classes for children and adults.

Gymnastics Camp will be held at the Cohasset High School gym this summer because of construction at the Center. Camp will be held for six weeks. Camp will be five days, Monday through Friday from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. each day and costs $52.50 per week. The daily schedule will cover warm-ups, aerobic dance, time on the beam and bar, conditioning, work on the uneven bar, and a break for snack. Enrollment will be on a first paid basis. You may register for one or as many weeks as you like. Camp starts June 29.

A computer course and a typing course will also be available. Call 383-0088 for more information. All courses must be pre-registered.

Camp scholarships announced

South Shore Natural Science Center is pleased to be able to offer camp scholarships through the generosity of Mother Vinal and Janice Litchfield Funds, Norwell Woman's Club and Hanover Garden Club.

There are still openings in all sessions and groups and this year the Center will introduce a "Sprouts" program for 3 year olds.

The goal at Nature Day Camp is to instill appreciation and concern for the environment through inter-active learning. Outdoor exploration of the natural world is an integral part of the daily schedule. Woodlands, fields, ponds and nearby seashore offer exciting learning environments for both the first time and experienced campers.

In addition to exploring the world around them, campers enjoy games, crafts and special projects.

The many experiences at Nature Day Camp provide each child with lifetime memories and a unique opportunity to grow and learn.

Recreation news

The Recreation Department is currently offering eight different aerobic classes from three instructors mornings, late afternoons and early evenings each week. Should you be interested in one or more of the classes please call the Recreation Department at 383-6791.

Fees are generally $32 for two classes per week, for eight weeks in duration. Two of the four morning classes are held Saturday mornings and may be registered for independent of week day/evening classes.

New sessions begin every six to eight weeks, but you may register for classes at any point in time. The fee will be pro-rated, based upon the number of classes remaining in the current session. Classes are ideal for all ages, and both men and women.

Participants who do not wish to register for an entire session may pay a $3 fee per class. Instructors are: Margret Watson, Karen Kirkendall and Sandy Wiggans.

Open Gyms

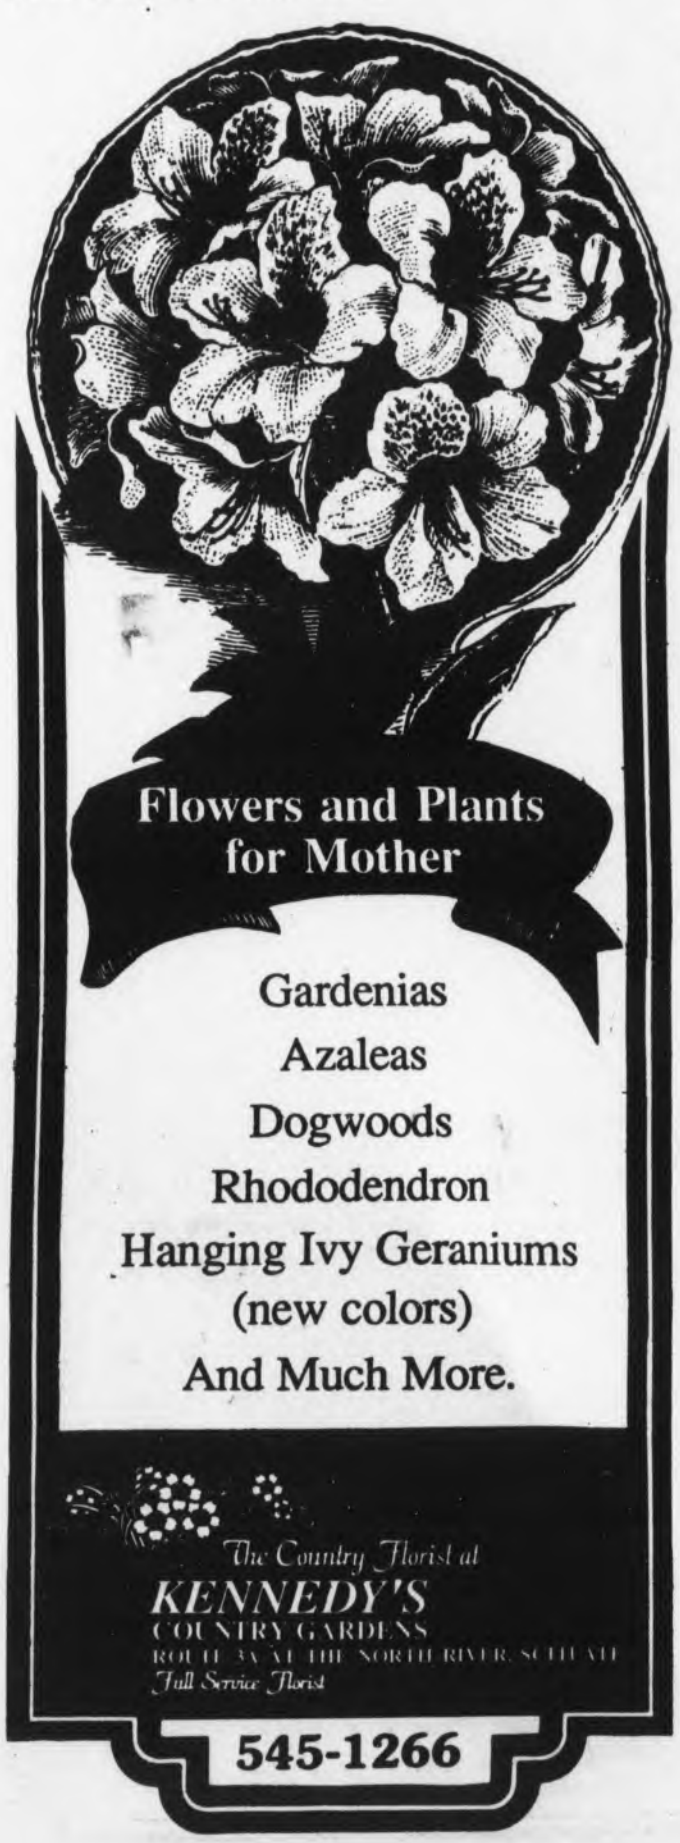
The Cohasset Recreation Department will keep Cohasset High School gym open from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m., Tuesday and Thursday evenings, beginning Tuesday, April 14.

Gary Smith will be the recreation department supervisor in charge of the gym during the designated hours.

Those who wish may use the gym for basketball and pick-up games which should be played on half court, or quarter court, allowing for maximum use of space and people. The standard rules for gym use apply to the open gym times. Sneakers must be worn and no food, beverage, or smoking in the gym. The program will be conducted for an eight-week period, ending the week of June 1. There is no registraton fee or pre-registration required.

The Cohasset Recreation Department has placed a large plastic trash barrel outside the recreation office, town hall lobby, for collection and distribution of current magazines and periodicals.

Phil Lehr (sitting) registers vehicles with the assistance of Troy Haase during last weekend's road rally sponsored by the Explorer Post 28 at The Music Circus.



Residents who wish, may drop their magazines in the barrel and take whatever magazines they wish to read in return. In this manner, all residents may have access to a variety of magazines on a lend-borrow-basis.

While it is not essential that borrowers also deposit material, the more material that is deposited, the wider spectrum of choice in reading matter will be available. Magazines of general or special interest as well as periodicals are welcome.

Coupon Swap Box

Much like the magazine swap, the coupon swap box, located outside the recreation office during work hours, is designed to afford residents coupons for items they may have a specific desire or need to purchase.

Ideally, residents will leave current, unwanted coupons in the box, and take only those coupons which they need. Again, the success of the coupon swap is dependent on individuals leaving, as well as taking coupons. Care should be taken to check coupons for expiration dates before leaving them in the box.

Obituaries

Dorothy Walinsky

Mrs. Dorothy Walinsky, formerly of Cohasset, died last month in Washington, D.C.

Born Oct. 19, 1913 to Charles C. Monie and Bertha Schooley Monie of Concord, N.H., Mrs. Walinsky was the wife of Louis Walinsky.

Her father, Charles Monie, was of Scots-Irish descent and was a lifelong Master and vice-rector of St. Paul's Academy. Her mother, Bertha Schooley, was Dutch and qualified for membership in the D.A.R. and the Colonial Dames of America.

Mrs. Walinsky attended Pine Manor Academy, Wellesley College (class of 1936) and a school of Arts and Design in Boston.

Moving to Washington D.C., she first engaged in social work for needy and handicapped children. During World War II, she went to work for the British Supply Council, where she met her future husband, who was a member of the staff of the War Production Board, and after the liberation, for the French Supply council.

Married in 1947, she joined her husband in Germany, where he was directing a network of vocational training schools in the camps of displaced (liberated) Jews, for two years.

In 1953, Dorothy and her two infant daughters accompanied Louis to Burma, where he served as the chief resident economic advisor to the government. They remained in Burma until early 1959, where thev made many lasting friendships. During these and later years, Mr. and Mrs. Walinsky established enduring ties in Israel, with displaced persons who had emigrated there, and with Israelis who represented their country in Rangoon.

On their return to Washington in 1959, and until they left to retire in Cohasset in 1972, Mrs. Walinsky was a frequent hostess to friends from France, Israel, Germany and other countries. When her children were grown, she frequently accompanied Louis, who served as a consultant to the World Bank, to East Africa, India, Afghanistan and Iran.

Still later, when Louis served for a time as Director of a special World Jewish Congress Commission, she made repeated trips to London, Paris, Israel and Egypt. Her warm friendships abroad were thus constantly renewed.

In Cohasset, where life went more quietly, foreign travel continued until illness first struck in 1982. Mrs. Walinksy was an interested member of the Cohasset town meeting, an active worker within the local League of Women Voters, an active member of the Friends of the Library, where she enjoyed most bringing library books to the elderly and disabled in the local nursing home, and a volunteer worker in Cohasset church fairs and other activities.

While she was able, she never refused a request to serve as a fund collector for the American Cancer Society, the March of Dimes and other philanthropies. Whomever sought help could always count on Mrs. Walinsky. She made many friends.

Mrs. Walinsky looked forward to returning to Washington in December, 1985 where her early married years were spent, and where she had so many old and cherished friends — as well as her daughter, Marian. Her illness (treated first in 1982) had by now returned, and after some months of relatively pain-free life, existence became more difficult, the last months especially so. Mrs. Walinsky bore all this with her customary serenity, courage and grace.

Mrs. Walinsky was an omnivorous reader; she particularly loved Trollope, Jane Austen, Paul Scott, V.S. Naipal, Masters and suspense-detective writers like Robert Parker and Chandler. Maurice Collis' Burma books were special favorites. She loved golfing with her husband and walking the beach at Cohasset in hard weather, open to the wind, sea, sand and sky. Music was another love.

Dorothy's greatest gift was her gift of friendship, for human relations. She had a warm, loving, kindly heart. She was the very soul of gentleness. This was perceived by all who knew her. Although she was not Jewish, her husband's Jewish family loved her from the beginning and embraced her as their very own. Dorothy and her mother-in-law, Rose Newman Walinska, a poetess and sculptress, were alike in many ways, especially in their gentleness, and had a special affinity for one another. Dorothy wore to her dying day a gold chain which Rose had given her as a token of her love.

Mrs. Walinsky leaves her husband, two daughters, Marian Harrison of Bethesda, MD and Louisa Parker of Richmond, B.C., grandmother of Ria Parker and stepmother of Adam Walinsky of Scarsdale, N.Y.

A memorial service was conducted by Rev. Edward Atkinson Friday, April 24 at The First Parish Church.

John Francis

A funeral Mass was celebrated Tuesday, May 5 in St. Anthony's Church for John P. Francis, 75, who died Saturday at his home. Burial was private.

Mr. Francis was the first New Englander to become a director of major harness, thoroughbred and greyhound tracks in New England.

Born in Jamaica Plain, he graduated from Boston English High School. After graduation, he worked at concession stands at Rockingham Park in New Hampshire. He left the concession work to direct betting at tracks throughout the country, including ones in Taunton, Raynham, Foxboro, Santa Anita, Calif., Houston, Hialeah in Florida, and the Dallas Fair Grounds in Texas. He also directed betting in western Canada.

Mr. Francis was a partner of the late Russ Murray, a racetrack owner at the Middleboro Fair. He was also one of the first directors of the Newport Jai Alai in Rhode Island.

A veteran of World War II he leaves his wife, Loretta (Gorman) Farncis; a son, John Francis Jr., of Newtown, Pa.; and a sister, Mary Dolan of Boston.

Method for disinfecting wells

Recently, the Cohasset Board of Health received the following information from the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering Division of Water Supply pertaining to disinfection of private wells. Many private wells may be subject to pollution from recent flooding waters and will require disinfection to abate potential bacteria problems. The DEQE recommended the following procedure:

"Where wells have been subject to pollution from surface drainage or foreign material, or from construction activities on the well, the recommended procedure for disinfection is to: 1) Prepare a solution consisting of 3 gallons of water and one pint of 3 percent to 6 percent commercial chlorine solution (ordinary laundry bleach) and pour this mixture into the well; 2) leave solution in well for at least 10 hours; 3) pump water from well to waste until the odor of chlorine has disappeared."

It was noted that the procedure provides an overdose of chlorine so the water in the well should not be used for drinking and culinary purposes, watering of livestock, or for irrigation until the odor of chlorine has disappeared.

And the DEQE recommended that the chlorinated water should be brought through the building piping system and held in the system for a period not to exceed thirty (30) minutes before pumping the water from the well to waste. This will provide a disinfection of the internal piping of the building. After the well system has been pumped to waste to remove the chlorine, the internal piping should be flushed until the odor of chlorine has disappeared.

The Board of Health also wishes to advise owners of private drinking wells that the Cohasset Water Department does provide a service for testing well water for a nominal fee. It is suggested that wells be tested on an annual basis.

If you have any questions, contact the Water Department at 383-0057 or the Board of Health at 383-1664.

Little League update

Box score - Red Sox vs. Yankees

Top 3 Hitting Stars:

Name	A.B.	H	2B	3B	HR	BB	RUNS	RBI
Fiore	3	2	2			1	2
Goodman	3	1	1

Pitching Statistics:

Name	INN	SO	HITS	BB	RUNS	W	L
Fahey	7	14	1	7	3	1
Andrade	3	6	1	2	2
Jordan	4	7	1	6	2		1

The Braves and the Mets opened the 1987 season Monday evening with the Braves prevailing, 7-0.

Doug Ellinger pitched a superb no-hitter to notch the win. For the Mets Chris Rolandelli matched Ellinger's no-hit bid for three innings before giving way to David Leahy to start the fourth. David was making his major league debut as was Ben Redfield who relieved him and mopped up.

In Friday night action, the Red Sox beat the Yankees 4-3 in an extra-inning thriller. Pete Fahey, the winning pitcher, went the entire seven innings in a gutsy, one-hit performance. Nathan Fiore, his batterymate was equally tough going two for three (two doubles), scoring two runs, and tagging two Yankees out at the plate. Joey Andrade matched Peter pitch for pitch for three innings before turning a tied game over to Billy Jordan. Billy pitched very well although he suffered the loss.

Saturday dawned bright and warm — a glorious day for baseball. After a splendid parade featuring the Deer Hill band and every player in the Cohasset system, a ceremony followed at the field.

Honored were the 1986 champion Yankees and Joe Andrade, their coach, for his service as former league president.

The ceremony commemorated the long-time service to the CLL of Ed Mulhern whose wife Helen (with the aid of the talented State Rep. Mary Jeannette Murray) officially opened the season when she shouted enthusiastically, "Play Ball!"

The game that followed was a repeat of Monday night. The Braves were led by John Maynard who hurled a nifty, complete-game, four hitter. John's mates thrashed the Mets twenty to zero. They were led by Tim Conroy with two hits and two RBI's. Defensively, Andy Pozatek made an outstanding catch in shallow center and then doubled Chris Rolandelli off second base. Scott Theriault and Rolandelli both had solid two-hit performances for the Mets.

Coming in future weeks: league standings and hitting and pitching statistics.

CHS softball

By Sara Bishop
Mariner correspondent

The girls softball team played an outstanding game on Monday against Hanover, despite the rainy weather conditions. Losing 15-5 in the bottom of the fifth inning, the girls managed to come back into the game by scoring eight additional runs leaving Hanover just ahead by two runs, 15-13.

The girls bunted in that game since they had not been hitting well in previous games. Toni Cann did a good job pitching for the Skippers, in addition to her timely hitting. Debbie Hartley and Kristin Ellinger both pitched in, helping the team in the infield; and Kristin hit a home run in the bottom of the seventh inning but unfortunately she missed home base; it was a beautiful hit into left field.

Lisa Shumaker caught some tough balls in left field helping the Skippers come back into the game. Playing in the infield for the Skippers were Debbie Hartley, Kristin Ellinger, Margery Murphy, Katie Pyle, Tonie Cann, and Sara Bishop. Outfielders included Lisa Shumaker, Kara Mannion, and Sophie Redfield.

The team will face Whitman-Hanson at home on Wednesday and Thursday they'll be in Scituate.

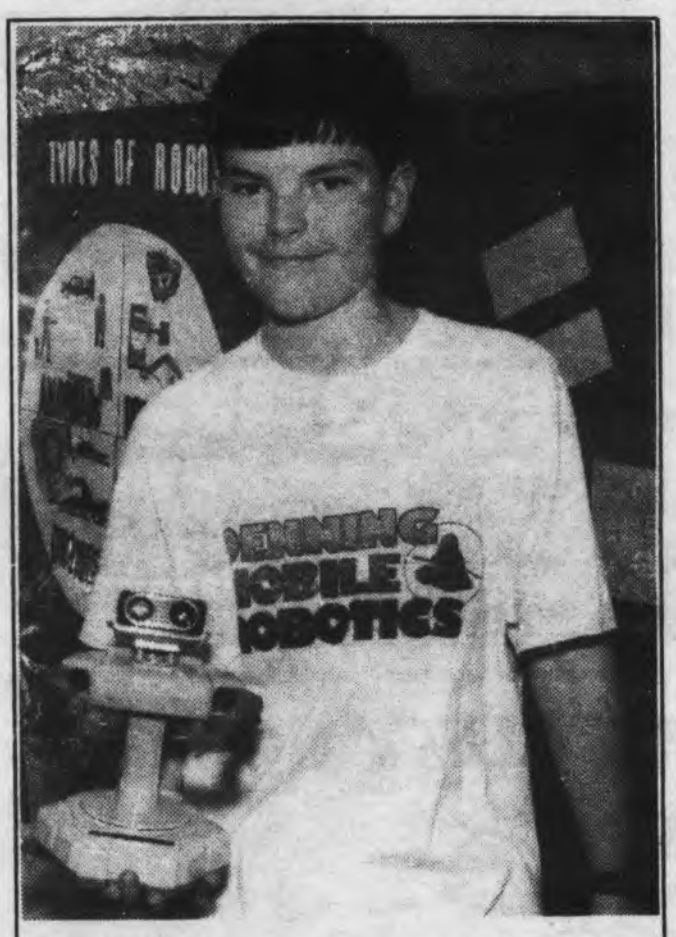
Veterans incensed over lack of town support

By Jane Lane
Mariner Staff

The tradition of Memorial Day will continue in Cohasset, but there will be changes. Some of the organizers refuse to attend.

American Legion Post Commander Lawrence Sousa will not participate in the parade and the concluding ceremonies at the Veterans' Memorial Park. He and several of his associates from the George Mealy Post 118 are protesting what Sousa called, "zero help from the town."

Cohasset's VFW Post 9146 Commander Ralph Perroncello is "in complete accordance" with his brothers at the American Legion Post. The VFW Post was not given a town budget this past year because it had just been created. And their request for $600 to help defray the American Legion's expenses for Memorial Day was defeated at the April town meeting.



Because of limited money appropriated every year from the town to the budget item called "veterans' celebrations", the American Legion has had to pay nearly the entire cost of the Memorial Day ceremonies. "We don't have the money at the Post to support the kind of event we've held in the past," Sousa said bitterly. "And if the town refuses to help us out, I refuse to go and give my time to the town.

"I will do everything for the veterans of this town," he said, "But I will do nothing for the town. I am a very stubborn man, and so are a lot of other members of the Post. We're very upset about the town's refusal to recognize its veterans. We're not going to be there Memorial Day - that's how upset we are."

According to Sousa, the Post will "greatly reduce" the annual collation at the conclusion of the Memorial Day observance. Traditionally, the Legion serves a buffet to all the marchers and "half the town" who socialize at the post following the ceremonies. "We simply don't have the money to do it on such a large scale this year. Contrary to what others may think, the Legion is not rich," Sousa stated.

"We give a lot of things to this town - to the Boosters clubs, the Easter egg hunt, and a lot of other programs and organizations here," he continued. "But

Building inspector rules over the marginal property left in town

By John Magadieu
Mariner Staff

Donald Robbins is involved with every addition, every roofing and siding job, all remodeling and new construction in Cohasset. He is a busy man.

As building inspector for the town of Cohasset, Robbins has two responsibilities: he must enforce the state building code and he must enforce the town's zoning bylaws.

In this age of high-priced land and housing, keeping those responsibilities can be a challenge.

"What's happening now," Robbins explained, "is that land is worth so much, people are trying to sell anything as a buildable lot.

"How much buildable land is available depends on how much developers are willing to spend and still get something back," he said. While little space remains for business expansion along Route 3A, there is plenty of potential for residential growth in Cohasset.

"There's still a lot of open land in Cohasset," the inspector noted. "The main problem for those who want to develop that land is access."

Robbins explained, many lots in town have no frontage on accepted roads. Some are located on what he calls "paper roads," cart paths laid out centuries ago, by which today even pedestrians would have trouble passing.

"I just have to say 'no' when someone asks me for a building permit for one of those lots," he said. There are many such "landlocked" lots in town and the half-dozen paper roads in town are not the key to their unlocking.

"To develop some of those back lots, they would have to put roads in," Robbins said. "It costs a lot of money to put in a road. And it is a long process; it doesn't happen overnight."

In cases where such land is developed, he noted, generally one developer will buy up large tracts of the backland and put in a road.

"As the price of the land goes higher and higher, more and more developers will seek frontage for these lots," Robbins predicted. "During the next 20 years, there will not be a lot of development in Cohasset, but there will be some; time and economics will tell how much. The rate of growth is governed by how economically feasible it is to develop the land."

The density of growth is determined by lot sizes. The most largest and most restrictive lots are 1 1/3 acre, while the smallest lots are located in Cohasset Village

Salvucci explains piece-meal route

By Bob Tis
Mariner Correspondent

This week MBTA officials announced plans to speed up the Old Colony restoration project, bringing rail service to the South Shore tentatively by 1991.

Fred Salvucci, state secretary of transportation explained that until now the entire project has been looked at as a whole. Salvucci outlined the MBTA's desire to split the project into sections and begin work as soon as possible on sections that have received the necessary environmental approvals.

As it stands now, commuter rail service between Hanson and Braintree and between Brockton and Braintree have proven to be feasible from an environmental approval standpoint. Deliberations have barely begun on the proposed Greenbush line from Scituate to Braintree and from Braintree to Boston he said.

"Why not take the pieces that are ready to go and try to get some federal funding," said Salvucci referring to open negotiations with Ralph Stanley, a Reagan appointee who heads the Urban Mass Transit Authority. Stanley will be stepping down at the end of this month.

Stanley apparently has a positive attitude towards the South Shore rehabilitation project and both Salvucci and James O'Leary, chairman of the MBTA, look at him as, "a very valuable friend in Washington."

"Our objective is to get commuter rail service as soon as possible," said O'Leary. "If there is a democratic administration in 1988 there will be a long list of people who will be expecting yes's on federal funds for transportation. We need to break in right now."

O'Leary explained that before plans for engineering and construction can begin, environmental approval must be met. His plan is to begin work on the Hanson to Braintree and Brockton to Braintree lines as soon as possible.

"Yes, if we separate the project, there is a risk that all that would happen would be the two shuttles, but that is not our objective," said Salvucci. "We already have all the money for the bridge over the Neponset River, but we have to wait for environmental approval before we can get started."

We are anxious to get this going," said O'Leary. "This gives us another construction season."

"All or nothing would make the project significantly later," said Salvucci referring to waiting for all segments of the plan to be approved before any action has taken place.

Fears of being left out in the cold were expressed at Tuesday's public hearing at Massasoit Community College in Brockton. "People just don't want to be left off in Braintree," said a former MBTA driver.

"We want assurance that the whole program is included," said State Senator Ed Kirby (Whitman).

"Our commitment is to Braintree to Boston to Greenbush," replied O'Leary, attempting to mitigate the fears of residents. "We are prepared to go ahead with this as soon as we get the necessary approvals."

Cohasset's week . . .

Residential permit

One building permit has been issued and perc tests are continuing on several residentially-zoned lots along Route 3A, according to Cohasset building inspector Donald Robbins.

The lots, which are owned by William Poland and Irwin Golden, are on the west side of the highway, south of Smith Appliance Corp.

Mosquitoes buzzing

The Plymouth County Mosquito Control Project is predicting an unusally busy spring in combatting the nuisance of mosquitoes. Normally the Project does not begin its spraying program for adult mosquitoes until Memorial Day. This year, that luxury may not be possible.

Project workers are finding mosquito larvae in very large quantities. Due to the heavy spring rains, the numbers of mosquito breeding sites have greatly increased.

Project personnel are presently monitoring the situation and treating breeding sites in an attempt to be prepared for the first adult hatch and to limit its nuisance.

People are encouraged to call the Project when they begin experiencing mosquito problems. The Project's phone number is 585-5450.

The Project also has a speaker's program for any interested group or organization.

Field repair options

The Milliken Field Improvement Committee will submit four options for the renovation of Lillard Field behind the high school.

The options will provide voters at the yet-unscheduled special town meeting to review the project in four portions, with the possibility of approving the entire plan at an estimated cost of $800,000.

The four articles which will be submitted by the committee to the special town meeting include: $536,600 for a football-soccer playing field and installation of an asphalt base for a track, including grading and drainage; $90,000 for an all-weather track; $114,00 for spectator stands; and $77,280 for lighting for night games.

The architect hired by the study committee, Francis Spinks Associates, estimated it would cost $626,592 for an all-weather track and a football-soccer playing field.

Memorial Day route

The annual Memorial Day parade and ceremony will begin with the assembly of marchers at 8 a.m. Monday, May 25 at the George H. Mealy American Legion Post, 38 Summer Street.

The marchers will proceed to the North Cohasset Cemetery, where they should arrive at approximately 8:45 a.m. The Honor roll will be read at 9 a.m. and then the marchers will travel to the Woodside Cemetery at 9:30 a.m. and to the Beechwood Cemetery at 9:45 a.m.

Parade marchers will assemble on Sohier Street at 10:30 a.m. and proceed to the Central Cemetery at 11 a.m. and into the Square by 11:30 a.m. They will reach the concluding ceremonies at the Veterans' Memorial Park at Cohasset Harbor by noon.

Legion Post 118 Commander Lawrence Sousa said between 550 and 600 American flags will be placed on the graves of deceased Cohasset veterans. Wreaths will be placed on the graves of those soldiers killed in action.

Board wants building

Cohasset's sewer commissioners have told the selectmen they want to stay in the Bates building at 43 Elm Street, despite the impending addition to town hall.

"The sewer commissioners believe it would be advantageous to the town to maintain town office space in the Bates building... even after the addition to the town hall," chairman Charles DeSantis informed the board.

"The proximity of the Bates building to the wastewater treatment plant, and also to the proposed pumping station makes it an ideal location for the sewer dept.," he explained.

"Please be aware," he told the selectmen, "that the wastewater treatment plant has no facilities presently provided by the Bates building, such as a lavatory for the plant workers, workbench for repairs and storage area."

DeSantis added, "The Bates building also provides three meeting room spacesfor the many boards and town committees which meet there, including the conservation commission, which has not been allotted any space in the expanded town hall."

Early deadline

To allow our employees to enjoy the Memorial Day holiday, the Mariner will have an early deadline of 5 p.m., Friday, May 22 for all advertising, classifieds and editorial copy.

Cohasset earns the Olympic gold

There were more spectators than participants, but members of the local Special Olympics team weren't there for the glory. It was the thrill of competition - the joy of belonging to a team that enticed Cohasset students to the annual event.

The Cohasset team came home late Saturday, tired but satisfied. In their white nylon jogging jackets, sweatpants and visors, members of the Cohasset team looked like the champions they truly are.

Massasoit Community College hosted the 1987 Plymouth County Area Special Olympics this past Saturday. The 150 athletes participated in track and field events at the college.

For the first time, the Olympic games were dedicated to one of Plymouth County's best Special Olympians. At the start of the games, it was announced that they would be dedicated to Peter Scilipio of Hingham. The 15 year-old athlete missed his first Olympic games in seven years.

Cohasset's coach Irene Mello coached Peter for one year when she was in Hingham. "He has competed in the games every year since he was eight. Now he's home with a serious illness, and we thought it would be nice if we could do something special for him," she said.

"Peter was given a gold medal and a T-shirt which will be presented to him this week by his coaches in Hingham," she explained.

According to Mello, the winter and spring Special Olympics give the students an opportunity to train hard and experience the competition of belonging to a team. "There was a wonderful turnout at Massasoit," she said. "They were wonderful hosts and all our families and friends were there to cheer on the kids. Supt. Stephen Hart was there, and lots of their families."

Michael Goodhue"s brother David brought his classmates from Norwell's Sparrell School. The second grade students are learning about handicapped awareness, and their teacher thought it would be appropriate to have them watch the Special Olympics competition. "The sun was shining, and the games started on time. It was a wonderful day," Mello said. "The kids had a great time and did very well."

In the wheelchair 50-meter race, Marty Wall from the Cohasset team came in first; in the 50 meters, 7 to 11 years, Michael Goodhue finished first along with Eric Sisson; Joey Hegner came in second along with Ryan Wiggs, and Matt Grassey finished fourth.

In the 50-meter, 12 to 15 years competition, Stephen Skayne finished second, and Peter Plante came in fourth. In the 100-meters competition, Jay Nothnagle and Jonathan Mello were awarded medals. And in the softball throw, Stephen Skayne came in first and Peter Plante finished third.

Peter's mother Maria, has long been involved in the Special Olympic games. She echoed Mello's description of the day and said the kids enjoyed every minute.

"It really made a big difference having it at Massasoit this year," she said. "Usually the spring games are held at Brockton High. Having the college students helping out Saturday made everything run more smoothly. They did a super job organizing everything for the kids."

There were 150 athletes competing from 15 Plymouth area schools. Plante commented that the most notable difference this year was the absence of longtime participant Scilipio.

"The kids really love competing in these games," she added. "It gives them a good spirit to belong to a team. The kids like helping each other. If one trips, which actually happened on Saturday, the others will stop to help him out. It really doesn't matter if they come in first, and that's nice."

Saturday's ceremonies were impressive, with the special dedication given by the mayor of Brockton. "We all thought it was very special of Mr. Hart to come to the games, too. His father is seriously ill, but he took the time to watch the kids, and that's super," Plante said.

As is now customary, the Cohasset Rotary Club donated a portion of the kids' uniform. This year, the local club gave sweatpants to wear at the competition. The Plymouth County Area Special Olympic games association gave each student a white nylon jacket and the Cohasset parents had kept the matching visors from previous years. "They looked great," Plante commented. "The kids really loved the way they looked."

The Special Olympians will be honored Sunday, May 17 at the Cohasset High School sports award dinner.

The coaches for Cohasset's team this year included Mike Weydt, the physical education teacher at Osgood; Irene Mello; Lee Wiggs, a parent volunteer; Kim Sammons, the special needs instructor at Osgood; Chip Muncey, a community volunteer; and student volunteer Jessica McDonald. Mello said these volunteer coaches worked most weekdays and weekends to prepare the students for the track and field races.

Handicapped Access Bill

Legislation sponsored by State Senator William Golden that would require the State House to be accessible to handicapped persons has passed in the Massachusetts Senate this week.

The measure, which received a favorable report from the Joint Committee on State Administration, was reported out of Senate Ways and Means and passed the Senate. The bill now goes onto the House for a vote.

The legislation calls for the Superintendent of State Office Buildings to conduct a study on the accessibility of the State House and facilities within to handicapped persons, and to develop a plan for the alteration and improvement of areas found to be inaccessible, non-functional or unsafe for use by such people.

Veterans upset at lack of town financial aid

this town refuses to recognize us. Other towns in this area get $2,500 for their Memorial Day ceremonies. I had to pay for the flags we had last year with my own money. We've done our job for the town, now it's the town's turn to do something for its veterans."

Each Memorial Day, the American Legion sponsors a solemn parade throughout town, decorating the graves of veterans with small American flags. Mothers of veterans killed in action receive flowers and wreaths are placed on their sons' graves. This year the town appropriated $900 toward the Legion's celebration account. They spend about $3,500 for the day's event, Sousa stated.

Executive Secretary Donald Andrew, a Vietnam-era veteran, is attempting to act as a mediator in this situation. He will go with representatives from the VFW post, the American Legion Post, and the Veterans' Agent, to the advisory committee meeting this week.

"We're not going to be asking for anything," Andrew said. "I just want to explain to them in detail exactly what these organizations do for the town, and what they receive in return. They have to know what the Veterans' Day and Memorial Day ceremonies actually cost these organizations."

According to Andrew, the ceremonies are "more than just a party." They include paying marching bands to perform in the parade, a bugler to play Taps at the graveside services, speakers following the parade, and refreshments for marchers and spectators after the ceremonies.

Almost 600 American flags are placed at the grave of each deceased Cohasset veteran. According to law, the town is legally responsible to provide those flags to the veterans' graves, Andrew, Perroncello and Sousa agreed.

The wreaths and flags are supposed to be included in the town's annual appropriation, but last year's budget was enough to cover the costs. Other towns such as Hingham, Andrew explained, pay for the entire itemized cost of the Memorial Day and Veterans' Day ceremonies, including the wreaths, flowers, bands, refreshments, and speakers.

"All these veterans are asking," Andrew said, "is that the town give a little more so they continue doing what they've done for many years. Believe me, the town is better off allowing these veterans to take care of all this. It's better done this way."

Perroncello added, "all the other towns have Memorial and Veterans' day celebrations. I think it's wrong for this town not to give money for our observance of those days. The $600 we asked for at town meeting was to pay our share of Memorial Day costs with the George Mealy Post. We didn't think that was too much to ask. We'd like to be able to decorate the veterans' graves twice a year, but I don't think that will be possible.

"I believe the town has an obligation to its veterans. And I think they are very lax in that obligation," he stated.

Legion Post Commander Sousa agreed. "We've always done our job for the town. I simply don't understand why the town won't do something for the veterans. It aggravates me that they can spend $1,600 for summer band concerts, which is all well and good, and they can only give $900 so the town can honor its veterans. Maybe they've forgotten the veterans of this town, but I haven't. It's sad."

Museum tour set for May 21

Thursday, May 21 will see this spring's co-sponsored Historical Society and Cohasset Recreation Department special tour of the Society's two museum buildings at Elm Street, Cohasset Center.

This guided tour of the Capt. John Wilson Historical House and Maritime Museum will meet at the museum at 11 a.m. and will last for about one hour. Guiding the tour of these two unique and historical buildings will be the Society's Senior Curator. Cohasset and area residents are invited to attend. A donation of $1 will be asked in lieu of the regular museum admission.

The Capt. John Wilson House, an 1810 Sea Captain's home, is unique among surviving Cohasset homes, retaining many of the original features of an early 19th century dwelling. Built by housewright David Nichols, it remained in the Wilson family until 1912 when purchased by local businessman William Hamilton McGaw. In 1936 McGaw presented the old house to the Cohasset Historical Society in memory of his wife Priscilla Lothrop Collier McGaw. The old Sea Captain's home became the first historical museum in Cohasset and first headquarters of the Cohasset Historical Society. Today it houses an extensive collection of artifacts, furnishings, toys and artworks from the early homes of the town. Just next door is the Historical Society's Maritime Museum, a late-18th century ship chandlery given to the Society in the mid-1950's by Mr. and Mrs. William Cox. This unusual old building originally was the supply store and counting house for Samuel Bates' fishing fleet at Border Street, and was moved to its present location in 1956 when presented to the Society. A large and unique collection of ship models, relics of shipwrecks and lifesaving, equipment from the early schooner fleets of Cohasset, maritime artwork, and the story of both first and second Minot's Ledge Lighthouse can be found on the museum's first floor. The second floor is devoted in part to an extensive general collection of material from the early years of the town.

To pre-register for this special Thursday, May 21 tour, please call the Recreation Department at 383-6931.

Two Cohasset women leave for Souppes sites

By Jane Lane
Mariner Staff

For two young women from Cohasset, the Cultural Exchange Committee has been their key to convenient and more comfortable international travel.

Julie and Sarah Atkinson of Elm Street decided to travel to London and Paris this spring. But with some assistance from the members of the Cultural Exchange Committee, their itinerary now includes a week's stay in a private home in Souppes Sur Loing. That is the country suburb of Paris, which two years ago was declared Cohasset's sister-city.

Julie, 20, who will be a senior at the University of Main at Orono, and Sarah, 18, a perspective sophomore at the University of Rhode Island, decided they would travel to see a friend of Julie's who is studying this year in England. It was their plan then to meet a former Cohasset AFS student, a girl Julie befriended a few years ago at Cohasset High School.

They left last night for England and their mother, Sally, reported that the pair arrived without major incident in London. The idea of visiting Souppes Sur Loing, she explained, "was a casual thing that developed into this really neat plan."

Through intervention by a member of the local Cultural Exchange Committee, the girls decided to stay a week in Souppes, a small country suburb just outside Paris. They will be staying with the Michael Ballot family.

Mrs. Atkinson explained, "It's been one of those gigantic puzzles where every piece has fallen right into place.

"Tom Churchill, who was the main reason why this sister-city concept took place, was a parishioner in our church (First Parish Unitarian). And a member of the Cultural Exchange Committee works at the nursery school I direct. The girls had decided they would be making this trip to Europe, and they were encouraged to fill out an application with the Cultural Exchange Committee. They were then matched with the Ballot family, which was nice because Carol Martin of South Main Street had stayed with them previously."

Mr. and Mrs. John Martin talked to the girls about the Ballot family, Souppes, and what they could expect during their visit. The Martins had traveled to Souppes as part of the original entourage from Cohasset who explored the possibility of setting up a cultural exchange between the residents of both towns.

The Martins' trip was made in October, 1985. They stayed as guests of the Ballot family for three and a-half days. Michael Ballot, who speaks some English, works as a sales representative for Corning Glass Co., located about ten minutes from Souppes. His wife, Mary France, is employed at a nearby hospital. They have three sons and two daughters.

Martin recalled Souppes as a "quiet town, somewhat similar in size to Cohasset. It has a lovely community center and a lake that has been developed by the townspeople." Souppes Sur Loing, she said, is about a 50 to 60 minute commute from Paris.

For the Atkinsons, having the opportunity to stay with French guests in the small country village "has turned out to be a very fortunate, comfortable thing for our daughters," Mrs. Atkinson stated.

"They will be gone a total of three weeks, and their itinerary is now all planned for them," she continued, noting that for three days, her daughters will be staying in Paris with one of the Ballot's daughters who is studying there.

"My daughter has corresponded with the oldest Ballot daughter, so hopefully they have some understanding of what they will be doing there," she added, noting that neither of the Atkinson ladies speak any French.

"Mrs. Martin said they were treated so graciously, there," Mrs. Atkinson stated, "that we would love to do something in return for the Ballot family."

An invitation to the Atkinson home, however, will be put on hold until after this summer. The family is in the midst of preparing a July wedding for their oldest daughter. "We absolutely want to host a Souppes family in our home," she said. "We'd be more than delighted, but not this summer!"

Her other daughters, she said, were looking forward to sailing in the lake at Souppes Sur Loing. Although they speak "not one word of French," their mother explained, "they've had a lot of experience in summer camps with many different nationalities. They really enjoy meeting people from other countries."

Their first call to home Tuesday was enthusiastic, Mrs. Atkinson reported. "If they were tired, it hadn't damped their good humor. They said London was cold, and they warned a friend who was scheduled to join them today to make sure the cap on her shampoo bottle was closed tightly in her luggage. I'm not exactly sure what that meant."

Pack 38 Cub Scouts

Members of Pack 38 Cub Scouts participated in a cross-over ceremony. The Bears, second year Cubs, now became Webelos. The Webelos, third year Cubs, are now officially Boy Scouts Troop 28.

Scoutmaster, Merle Brown, welcomed the new scouts. They are: Jeremy Bealey, Earl Bestick Jr., Andrew Henry, Scott Herzoq, Spencer Henderson, Jay Nothnagle and Jason Whitman.

The Pinewood Derby winners received trophies for first, second, and third place.

All scouts should receive "Camp News 1987 for Cubs, Webelos and Boy Scouts" booklets from the Old Colony Council. Available in May, June and September are Father/Son and Mother/Son weekends. The fee is $50 per couple (for further information call 828-8360, Old Colony Council in Canton).

All Tiger Cubs, Cub Scouts and Boy Scouts will be marching in the Memorial Day Parade, May 25. All scouts should meet at Osgood School parking lot at 10 a.m. in uniform.

The Old Mills District dinner was held May 8 at the Rockland Sons of Italy. Carol and Earle Bestick received a Commendation award from the BSA for giving distinguished service to Pack 38 Cub Scouts. Jeff Forsdick, Pack 38 Cubmaster, received the honored Cubmaster Leader of the Year Award. Jeff is very dedicated to scouting, serves as a good example to Cubs and had been a Cubmaster for eleven years. Theodora Lelecas, member of Troop 28 BSA. Committee was given a Commendation award for her dedicated work with Troop 28.

Looking over land . . .

and are only 18,000 sq. ft.

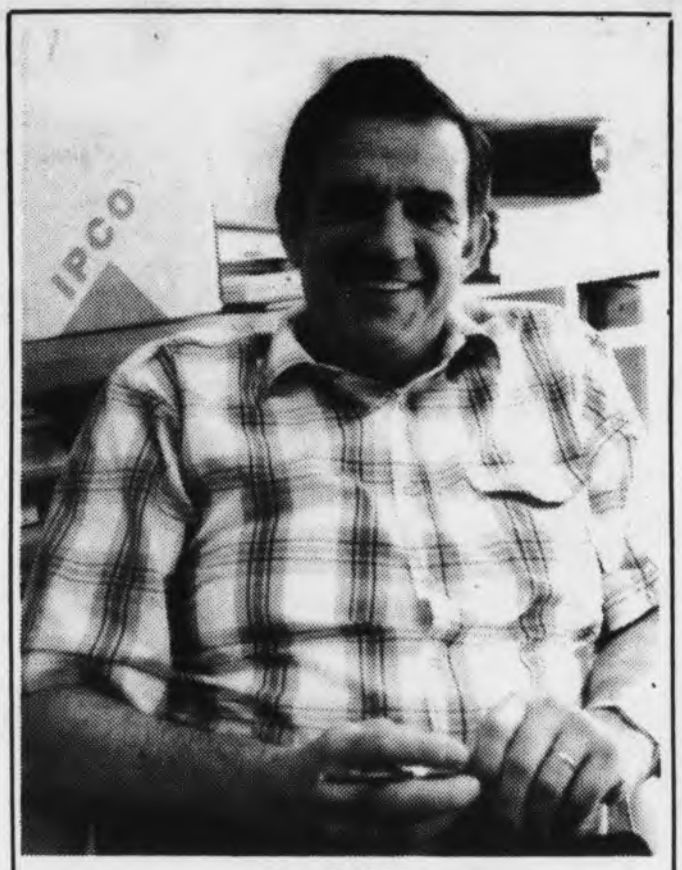
As prices go up, there will be increasing pressure on Robbins and local boards to allow building on marginal lots.

"There is a lot of marginal land in Cohasset," the inspector commented. "There are a lot of ledge, wetlands and areas that won't perc. On the South Shore, there are a lot of natural obstructions and is not a simple matter of bringing in fill to get it to perc, because that's illegal."

One way developers have sought to get around such natural obstructions is cluster development.

"Just about the time you'd think there could be no more big developments in town," he quipped, "Charlie Wills applies for 31 house lots on Lamberts Lane. Lots of wetlands are involved and that land is in two residential districts.

"The more stringent rules will apply to the subdivision and he probably couldn't get 31 houses in there," Robbins noted. "There's nothing wrong with cluster development, but the town has to decide whether it will include wetlands in the calculations.



"If you count wetlands and you have 100 acres and 90 acres of that is wetlands," he explained, "you could put a lot of houses on those 10 dry acres. I don't think the town has faced up to how it will handle that problem yet.

"The town has a lot of safeguards," he noted. "I don't issue building permits until the board of health says the land will accept a septic system. But the bylaws do need some work."

Robbins explained, some of the town's bylaws are "very vague" and can offer those with divergent views two different meanings.

"It's extremely difficult to write a bylaw to deal with every situation," he said. "As people devise ways to get around the rules, we have to revise and add to some of our bylaws and write some new ones."

Some bylaws are being worked on, Robbins noted. "We have one particular bylaw, the infamous 8.7. What has happened in this town, as it has in a lot of other towns, is that the town is 250 to 300 years old and all of a sudden in 1955, they started developing bylaws. Thirty percent of the town consists of pre-existing non-conforming structures.

Don Robbins

"What that does," he explained, "is make it so that you can't expand on a structure without a special permit, even if the addition doesn't infringe any more on the setback.

"What that means to the average person who comes into my office for a building permit is at best, a six-week delay. At worst, it could mean a four-month delay to someone who wants to add to one of those structures," Robbins said. "It's a hassle. Most people take it graciously, but every once in a while I get an irate citizen."

Despite the advent of condominiums and cluster zoning, the building inspector predicts Cohasset will keep its inherent charm.

"Cohasset is a very pretty town," he said, "and I don't think people will allow drastic changes."

around town

☐ I received a note, asking me to announce the following, and I quote: Titled, "How Soon They Forget", it read: Due to the fact that the Town of Cohasset's repeated refusal to contribute any financial support to the annual Memorial Day Ceremonies traditionally conducted by the George H. Mealy Post, American Legion, the membership reluctantly announces that this year's activities must be substantially curtailed." Signed "Respectfully, Lawrence Sousa, Commander." If that doesn't give our town something to feel remorse over, then we are all a sorry lot! How can we forget our veterans that made our town what it is today? Over money? The "wealthiest town on the South Shore" certainly should make every effort to support our Veterans. . .enough said.

☐ Happy Be-lated Anniversary to Ann and Dan Campbell, who had a milestone 50th six weeks ago. We sure wish you many more years of health and happiness.

☐ Here's hoping that Percy James is making a rapid recovery as he reads this. He is a patient in South Shore Hospital, recovering from a fall.

☐ Jane Crocker has been named 1986 Broker of the Year in the Cohasset office of Gallery 360.

Crocker, who is celebrating her 10th anniversary as a real estate broker, also placed in the top ten outstanding sales associates in the firm's eleven South Shore offices and won a trip to Hawaii as well as continued membership in the Gallery 360 Compass Club. A consistent multi-million dollar broker throughout her career, Mrs. Crocker holds the nationally recognized GRI designation and is an honor graduate of the national Gallery of Homes Successful Practices program.

CHS juniors (l to r) David Shultz, Michelle Casallero, Eric Ford, Keri Kirkendall and Joe Mazza, recently attended a session at the House of Representatives with Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray.

Mrs. Crocker has played an active role in community affairs having served on the Parents Board of Derby Academy, as Assistant Secretary of the Vincent Club, past President of the Cohasset Garden Club and Vice President and Secretary of the Junior League of Boston. She presently is a member of the Parents Committee of St. Mark's School in Southborough.

Mrs. Crocker, her husband Davenport, and their three children, Susan, Davenport, Jr. and Collamore are long-time Cohasset residents.

Six other Cohasset Gallery 360 brokers also earned honors for their outstanding sales achievements in 1986. They were Shirley Tolan, Claire Shields, Debbie Cunningham, John Gallager, Ann Courtney and Ruth Keefe.

☐ David Sweeney, son of Avis Sweeney of Jerusalem Road, was recently involved in the UMass/Boston Theatre Arts Department production of Maxim Gorky's The Lower Depths, the main stage production for the spring term.

Sweeney, a freshman at UMass, has been a member of the Cohasset Drama Club and assisted in production work as well as onstage appearances.

The Lower Depths, a depiction of life at the lowest echelon of humanity, was presented in the UMass/Boston Harbor Campus earlier this month.

☐ Don't forget that this Sunday is the annual bike marathon, Ride-A-Bike, to be held by the Cohasset Teachers Association and parents. Be sure to pledge any amount that you can to help them support this worthy cause. For further information contact the coordinators, Pat and Maria Plante.

☐ More fiftieth wedding news, May 9 was the big day for John and Phyllis Chamberlain. We heard there was a gala dinner party to celebrate the occasion. We include our best wishes to you both.

☐ May 12 will have a circle around it, a big one we'll bet! That is the day that Frank England celebrates his 67th birthday, and we surely wish him a happy one ☐ Finally, don't forget this weekend is the Senior Class Production, one that you are sure to love! Philip Mahoney will be there to do his now-famous imitations, football players are in the chorus line, everyone does a spectacular job! I hate to give anything away, suffice it to say that you will be glad that you attended! And mad at yourself if you don't. So go!

Shameful situation

It's so sad, it's laughable. But there really isn't anything to laugh about.

At the special town meeting held last month, there was one warrant article which requested $600 for start-up costs to the town's new Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 9146. The vets from that post requested the money to help their brothers at the George Mealy American Legion Post with the rising costs of the town's Memorial Day observance.

The town turned it down. No money this year - wait until next year, we said to our neighbors, brothers, fathers and uncles. Wait until next year.

The veterans surely could have packed town meeting with their membership - urging voters to approve this money. But who ever thought? Who would dare to believe this town would deny $600 to its veterans?

The vets themselves were not shocked by our action. This town has never financially supported its veterans with substantial amounts of money. Last year, when the cost of 600 American flags used to decorate veterans' graves was submitted to the town, there was not enough money to cover the expense. The Legion commander paid for it with his personal check. The town is legally obliged to purchase those flags.

There is no excuse. This is a shameful situation. We have two groups of men who are willing to donate money for any civic cause, be it scholarships, recreational programs, or school programs. They truly enjoy being able to assist the kids of this town, believing that is part of their responsibility as good neighbors.

And what do we do in return? We refuse them $600 to begin a new organization, and each year we hold their budget to a minimum.

Some people believe the Legion is simply a drinking hole, a social club where idle men go to meet after work. That is simplifying the situation to an extreme. These are necessary organizations, proud groups of men who are dedicated to preserving the honor of all servicemen.

If one word was used to describe these men, it would indeed by proud. They have made a solemn oath never to forget the veterans of this country. With distinction they honor the brothers who served with them.

The Legion's commander recently said, "The town may have forgotten its veterans, but we will never forget."

Surely, we have not forgotten our brothers who fought in Vietnam, our sons who were sent to battle in the foreign land of Korea, and our fathers and grandfathers who served us so gallantly in World War I and II. It is impossible to forget.

But we can be shamed. We should be shamed for our lack of attention, our callous attitude toward the veterans of this town. Why should we bother thinking about our veterans, when we already have two organizations who do that for us?

But what would we do if there were no more Memorial Day or Veterans' Day observances? These traditions could be near extinction should we fail to show our support.

One veteran justly complained that the town can spend almost $1 million to renovate its athletic fields, but it can't spend $600 for its veterans.

There is nothing laughable about that. It is truly a sad commentary on our town.

QUALITY AUDITING CAC MARK OF INTEGRITY

Not quite through a looking-glass

by
Max S. Maire

When Alice fell down the rabbit hole,
She found at the bottom a bottle.
A bottle that claimed to be pure:
No poisonous claim did it make,
As rules, even then, did require;
For all it said, in letters bold,

Was this: "DRINK ME."
So trustingly
And easily
She did; Oh me.
Catastrophe.
She shrank, you see,
Tall as a knee;
But do trust Me:

That winsome Alice did survive
And gain her prior health again
(A promise that I offer not to all of you in this fair town),
But, in betwixt those two events,
She met a most unusual crowd
Of folks, both citizens and not.
Come let us meet them, one and all
Just turn the tap and out they come.

The first was puss, up in a tree,
Who was, she hoped, her guide to be:
"Oh, Cheshire Cat, all learned one
I need your help, it's not in fun,
I'm lost, so lost, in Whitney Wood
And beg you help me, if you could.
The water, I am told, runs down
And up, sideways and all around;
Please help me, puss, for I am gone,
And so soon will be Lily Pond."

"Ha!" Smiled the cat,
"I smell a rat;
Follow your nose
And where it goes
Everyone knows
You'll find a rose."

"But Cheshire Cat," said Alice, meek,
"I'm here," you see, "your help to seek;
You are the guide, the book says so,
Please help me so that I may know.
No rose I find in forest deep,
But slime and smells, it makes me weep."

"Well, so be that,"
Then grinned the Cat.
"But if you must,
And in me trust
To be quite just,
Not filibust,
But be august,
We'll all discuss
This sort of muss,
And end this fuss
Right now, nonplus."

He called a meeting, all were there:
The Hatter, mad, the mad March Hare;
The Walrus and the Carpenter,
The oysters of Cohasset Town;
And Humpty Dumpty, stiff and proud,
Cracked head and all; 'Twas quite a crowd.

" 'Tis time, order,
Order! For sure:
The time, it flies,
So realize
We authorize
No long 'wherebys,'
Be brief and spry."
Thus spake feline
And grinned again.

From whence King Arthurs' table lay,
Arose two knights to join the fray.
Clad but in armor of the truth,
Meek and mild and doubly couth.
Fair knights were these, so brave and bold,
Whose names will make the blood run cold:

Tweedledum and Tweedledee,
One thrust forth his law degree,
Two unsheathed his book of sums,
Tweedledee and Tweedledum.

"While we have studied yonder fen,
We're glad to do it once again
To give you great assurance, sir.
That we are right, please have no fear,
Some more or less and maybe, though;
All this for really not much dough.
We'll draw another map line true,
and leave the choice of three to you.
We'll write it with fast fading ink
And wrap it up in ribbons pink.
Good luck, God's speed and call again."
(That swamp is full of riches, man.)

Harumph, harumph, "Due process, please;
Excuse me for my legalese"
Which onward like the tortoise sped;
All 'War and Peace' he must have read,
Though Carroll's mouse had simpler said:

'Let us
both go to law:
I will prosecute
you. —
Come, I'll take no
denial;
We must have a trial:
For really this morning
I've nothing to do.'

Oh, we shall go a-sooing, Sue,
Oh, sooey, sooey, Sue.

Poor Alice, lost and more forlorn
From all the words so toilworn,
Said, "Cat, Oh Cheshire Cat so rare,
Please, Sir, we want to get somewhere."

The Cat, quite irked,
But with a smirk,
Replied, "Oh, woe,
Girl, you should know
You need but go
and go and go.
And go and go:
I told you so
quite long ago."

And, while he spoke, he faded fast
'Til just his grin was left at last.
Most curious, thought Alice then;
Most curious does it remain.

And of the rest; yes, what of them?
Oh, they were there, and will again.
The book a fair agenda be:
The joke's on you and me.

Cries of overpopulation unfounded

Letters

To the Editor:

The letter by Debbie Cook in the Mariner of April 23, 1987 is an example of the type of propaganda that has periodically surfaced in the U.S. media since the 1920's. This propaganda is generated by those who wish to manipulate others through population control.

We are told that there are 5 billion people in the world. Responsible demographers, however, tell us that the earth can easily support 40 billion people, even using only currently available technology and agricultural methods. Why then the hysteria?

During the phony oil crisis of the early 1970's, such letters and articles on "overpopulation" were frequent. They generally disappeared, however, during the subsequent oil glut. Are we now going to be subjected to this nonsense again?

Sincerely,
Owen L. O'Malley

Student Council celebrates successful year

By Jane Lane
Mariner Staff

It was a busy ending to a event-filled and successful year. Last week was designated National Student Council Week, and Cohasset High School celebrated.

Students and faculty members participated in the numerous events held last week at the school. A new slate of class officers was elected, teachers were involved in a faculty photo contest, a faculty breakfast was served by the student council, and a senior teacher-for-a-day was held May 5. It culminated in Friday's Fun Fair in which all students from the school participated in one period of carnival-type activities at the gym - all for a good cause.

As Student Council Advisory John DeLorenzo explained, all money raised through the Fun Fair will be put into the council's scholarship fund. As the games and activities were being set up throughout the two gyms, DeLorenzo was quick to point out that this was an idea created by the students for the students. "They thought about a fair for all the students, and they created everything involved in the fair," he explained. "Actually, the Fun Fair was President Phil Mahoney's idea. We decided to have a really good time to end off the year. It's been such an active year for our Student Council. The fair has been a lot of work, and if it's not that successful, at least we've had a lot of fun setting it up."

As Friday afternoon began, many of the Student Council members were busy assembling a variety of games and activities within the Sullivan gym. There were balloon tosses, beanbag tosses, throw-the-football-through-the tire-toss, gerbil races, challenge-a-teacher - to-a freethrow contest,and a chocolate pie eating contest. Although by contest time, at least one of the pies was reported missing.

"Today's event," DeLorenzo stated, "was designed to be more fun than anything else. The idea is that when a student wins, he wins more tickets, and at the end the person with the most tickets wins two tickets to a Great Woods concert. The second and third prizes are a case of Coke."

In the upstairs gymnasium, the boys were quietly assembling a complex miniature golf course. Using only mats and other gym equipment, they were putting the finishing touches on a maze and assorted ways to drive any golfer crazy.

Earlier in the week, teachers were asked to bring in photographs of when they were children. They were hung in a special "gallery" where the students were asked to match the name with a photo. The winning student would win a portable television.

Last Tuesday, senior members of the Student Council replaced their teachers in designated classrooms for the day. Wednesday, elections for next year's officers were held. And Thursday, the Student Council prepared and served breakfast for their teachers in the school's cafeteria.

Noah Hill holds one of the racing gerbils that participated in last week's Student Council Fun Fair.
(Kathy Perlow)

"It is our thank you to the faculty and students of the school for the great year we've had," Delorenoz said. "It's been a break for us before the students get down to studying for the final exams. It is a little fun before the work begins."

Friday afternoon, it appeared the students were prepared to take advantage of some fun before the work. They were busy preparing the softball toss competition, and many students were carefully carrying down caged gerbils in preparation for the maze competition.

The fishing contest, using no live bait nor fish, looked enticing. The challenge table-top hockey games were awaiting participants and the balloons for the balloon toss were being inflated and tied. Faculty members Clark Chatterton, Bill Fallon and DeLorenzo were anxiously awaiting their challenge at the free throw line.

DeLorenzo noted that last month, several members of the Student Council attended a Southeastern Massachusetts Association convention. "They talked about all the activities they had done the past year," he said. "And when we returned, they were quite proud. All the others kids at the convention were amazed at all the activities we had sponsored throughout the year."

The elections held last week attracted a large number of candidates and a healthy voter turnout. "I was amazed at the number of kids who ran for office," the faculty advisor stated. "There was some real interest in this election. There were signs all over this school."

Carolan Hurley was elected president of the council for the 1987-1988 school year. There were three candidates for that position.

As president next year, Hurley plans to renew interest in the Student Council which began this year. "As far as I can see, I would like to have the programs and the enthusiasm we had this year carry over to next year," she said last week. "There are few things next year's Student Council would like to see - maybe a salad bar in the cafeteria, snack machines, and a great Spirit Week like we had this year."

The 16 year-old junior said the class president for next year, Jay Marsac, is doing a "great job" for his classmates. Hurley is also a class representative and thought she could make a difference "with everybody's help" if she was elected Student Council president.

"I like this school and the kids here. I though this was a way for me to stay involved in school functions," she stated.

The other class officers elected last week include:
Grade 8: President - Jennifer Reidy; Vice President - Amy Gallant; Secretary Heidi Lincoln; Treasurer - Laurie Bronstein; Representatives - Carlo Lagroterria, Michelle Woodland.

Grade 9: President - Jennifer Plante; Vice President - Anna Sandell; Secretary - Melissa Rousseau; Treasurer - Sophie Redfield; Representatives: David Cullinane, Jacob Powell.

Grade 10: President - James Reidy; Vice President - Zach Hochkeppel; Secretary - Jill Hamilton; Treasurer - Noah Hill; Representatives - Kerri Anglin, Joel Reidy.

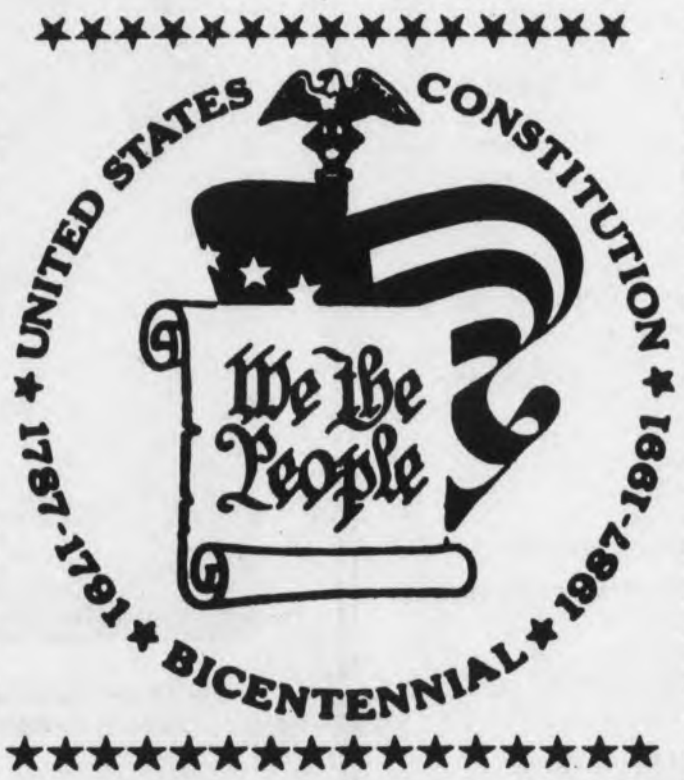
Grade 11: President - Katie Ryan; Vice President - Katie Lord; Secretary - Kristin Ellinger; Treasurer - Katie Murphy; Representatives - Matt Buckley and Megan Terry.

Grade 12: President Jay Marsac; Vice President - Kerry Kirkendall; Secretary - Sarah Hamilton; Treasurer - Steve Myers; Representatives - Erica Ford, Carolan Hurley.

School committee representaives: Derek Lacks, Erin Powell, Kim Dwyer, Jay Staunton.

Student Council officers: President - Carolan Hurley; Vice President - Derek Lacks.

The grade 7 class officers are not elected until June.



Convention called to make drastic changes

By David Wadsworth
Special to the Mariner

Two hundred years ago, in May 1787, delegates from 12 of the original 13 states met in Philadelphia to begin a Constitutional Convention which would shape the destiny of a new American nation. In Massachusetts that spring there were disturbing reports coming from upstate New York that the gathered survivors of Daniel Shays' recent rebellion were planning another military assault upon the Bay State's western counties. The reports turned out to be a false alarm, but they underscored the turmoil afflicting the new and trouble-plagued country. The Constitutional Convention of 1787 had been called to make drastic revisions in the nation's original frame of government, the Articles of Confederation, or to replace it completely with a strong unified Federal system. In May of 1787 it was clear that the nation's government needed drastic changes, but it was not yet clear what those changes would be.

In Philadelphia, site of the Constitutional Convention, Pennsylvania's chosen delegation was the first to gather. Then came James Madison and George Washington from Virginia. Washington, easily the most popular personage in the entire country, left his Mount Vernon estate on May 9 and arrived in Philadelphia on the 13th, to the cheering of gathered citizens. The Constitutional Convention had originally been scheduled to open on May 14, but on that date only two states were in attendance.

Opening day was postponed as more delegates from near and far trickled in to Philadelphia. On May 16 Virgina's Dr. James McClurg arrived, and on the following day that state's George Mason. By the 23rd North Carolina's delegation was complete. Finally on Friday the 25th the delegations of seven states were present, and the Constitutional Convention formally opened. The Philadelphia Convention was opened by the states of New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Virginia, North Carolina and South Carolina. Members got down to business right away, establishing a committee to prepare standing rules and orders. Major William Jackson was elected Secretary of the Convention, and George Washington was unanimously elected as President of the Convention. Such was Washington's stature and proven ability that no other name was considered for that vital office. On the same day, James Madison began keeping his copious diary of notes, which he would keep each day throughout the Convention for the next four months. Madison's notes, when released and published in later years, became the sole major source of information relating to the daily proceedings, the discussions and debates, of the Convention. For, as Madison correctly assumed, the notes of the Convention's official Secretary were merely brief entries recording the motions and votes. The Convention itself, in its wisdom, also drew about its daily proceedings a total cloak of secrecy which remained inviolate throughout the deliberations and afterward. Not until Madison's notes were published years later would the content of the sessions become known to the citizens whose nation was governed by the Constitutional document which would emerge as the fruits of the Convention.

On opening day in Philadelphia, May 25, New England's delegations were represented by only one person, Massachusett's Caleb Strong. By Monday May 28 Nathaniel Gorham and Elbridge Gerry of Massachusetts were there, as was Judge Oliver Ellsworth of Connecticut. Also on that day the honored Dr. Benjamin Franklin took his seat, having been delayed a few days for reasons of health. The rest of the New England delegates arrived in short order, excepting New Hampshire's John Langdon and Nicholas Gilman, who, paying their own way, arrived at the Convention on July 23. Two additional delegates from New Hampshire, Pierce Long and John Sparhawk, and one from Massachusetts, Judge Francis Dana, did not make the long and arduous trip to Philadelphia.

The first full day of business at the Convention was Monday, May 28 and it was on that day the discussions and debates of momentous importance began. They were to continue through a hot Philadelphia summer until, on September 17 a new Constitutional document emerged to be presented to the American people for their consideration and judgment.

QUALITY AUDITING CAC MARK OF INTEGRITY

Not quite through a looking-glass

by
Max S. Maire

When Alice fell down the rabbit hole,
She found at the bottom a bottle.
A bottle that claimed to be pure:
No poisonous claim did it make,
As rules, even then, did require;
For all it said, in letters bold,

Was this: "DRINK ME."
So trustingly
And easily
She did; Oh me.
Catastrophe.
She shrank, you see,
Tall as a knee;
But do trust Me:

That winsome Alice did survive
And gain her prior health again
(A promise that I offer not to all of you in this fair town),
But, in betwixt those two events,
She met a most unusual crowd
Of folks, both citizens and not.
Come let us meet them, one and all
Just turn the tap and out they come.

The first was puss, up in a tree,
Who was, she hoped, her guide to be:
"Oh, Cheshire Cat, all learned one
I need your help, it's not in fun,
I'm lost, so lost, in Whitney Wood
And beg you help me, if you could.
The water, I am told, runs down
And up, sideways and all around;
Please help me, puss, for I am gone,
And so soon will be Lily Pond."

"Ha!" Smiled the cat,
"I smell a rat;
Follow your nose
And where it goes
Everyone knows
You'll find a rose."

"But Cheshire Cat," said Alice, meek,
"I'm here," you see, "your help to seek;
You are the guide, the book says so,
Please help me so that I may know.
No rose I find in forest deep,
But slime and smells, it makes me weep."

"Well, so be that,"
Then grinned the Cat.
"But if you must,
And in me trust
To be quite just,
Not filibust,
But be august,
We'll all discuss
This sort of muss,
And end this fuss
Right now, nonplus."

He called a meeting, all were there:
The Hatter, mad, the mad March Hare;
The Walrus and the Carpenter,
The oysters of Cohasset Town;
And Humpty Dumpty, stiff and proud,
Cracked head and all; 'Twas quite a crowd.

" 'Tis time, order,
Order! For sure:
The time, it flies,
So realize
We authorize
No long 'wherebys,'
Be brief and spry."
Thus spake feline
And grinned again.

From whence King Arthurs' table lay,
Arose two knights to join the fray.
Clad but in armor of the truth,
Meek and mild and doubly couth.
Fair knights were these, so brave and bold,
Whose names will make the blood run cold:

Tweedledum and Tweedledee,
One thrust forth his law degree,
Two unsheathed his book of sums,
Tweedledee and Tweedledum.

"While we have studied yonder fen,
We're glad to do it once again
To give you great assurance, sir.
That we are right, please have no fear,
Some more or less and maybe, though;
All this for really not much dough.
We'll draw another map line true,
and leave the choice of three to you.
We'll write it with fast fading ink
And wrap it up in ribbons pink.
Good luck, God's speed and call again."
(That swamp is full of riches, man.)

Harumph, harumph, "Due process, please;
Excuse me for my legalese"
Which onward like the tortoise sped;
All 'War and Peace' he must have read,
Though Carroll's mouse had simpler said:

'Let us
both go
to law:
I will prosecute
you. —
Come, I'll take no
denial;
We must have a trial:
For
this morning
I've nothing
to do.'
Oh, we shall go a-sooing, Sue,
Oh, sooey, sooey, Sue.

Poor Alice, lost and more forlorn
From all the words so toilworn,
Said, "Cat, Oh Cheshire Cat so rare,
Please, Sir, we want to get somewhere."

The Cat, quite irked,
But with a smirk,
Replied, "Oh, woe,
Girl, you should know
You need but go
and go and go.
And go and go:
I told you so
quite long ago."

And, while he spoke, he faded fast
'Til just his grin was left at last.
Most curious, thought Alice then;
Most curious does it remain.

And of the rest; yes, what of them?
Oh, they were there, and will again.
The book a fair agenda be:
The joke's on you and me.

Cries of overpopulation unfounded

Letters

To the Editor:

The letter by Debbie Cook in the Mariner of April 23, 1987 is an example of the type of propaganda that has periodically surfaced in the U.S. media since the 1920's. This propaganda is generated by those who wish to manipulate others through population control.

We are told that there are 5 billion people in the world. Responsible demographers, however, tell us that the earth can easily support 40 billion people, even using only currently available technology and agricultural methods. Why then the hysteria?

During the phony oil crisis of the early 1970's, such letters and articles on "overpopulation" were frequent. They generally disappeared, however, during the subsequent oil glut. Are we now going to be subjected to this nonsense again?

Sincerely,
Owen L. O'Malley

Student Council celebrates successful year

By Jane Lane
Mariner Staff

It was a busy ending to a event-filled and successful year. Last week was designated National Student Council Week, and Cohasset High School celebrated.

Students and faculty members participated in the numerous events held last week at the school. A new slate of class officers was elected, teachers were involved in a faculty photo contest, a faculty breakfast was served by the student council, and a senior teacher-for-a-day was held May 5. It culminated in Friday's Fun Fair in which all students from the school participated in one period of carnival-type activities at the gym - all for a good cause.

As Student Council Advisory John DeLorenzo explained, all money raised through the Fun Fair will be put into the council's scholarship fund. As the games and activities were being set up throughout the two gyms, DeLorenzo was quick to point out that this was an idea created by the students for the students. "They thought about a fair for all the students, and they created everything involved in the fair," he explained. "Actually, the Fun Fair was President Phil Mahoney's idea. We decided to have a really good time to end off the year. It's been such an active year for our Student Council. The fair has been a lot of work, and if it's not that successful, at least we've had a lot of fun setting it up."

As Friday afternoon began, many of the Student Council members were busy assembling a variety of games and activities within the Sullivan gym. There were balloon tosses, beanbag tosses, throw-the-football-through-the tire-toss, gerbil races, challenge-a-teacher - to-a freethrow contest,and a chocolate pie eating contest. Although by contest time, at least one of the pies was reported missing.

"Today's event," DeLorenzo stated, "was designed to be more fun than anything else. The idea is that when a student wins, he wins more tickets, and at the end the person with the most tickets wins two tickets to a Great Woods concert. The second and third prizes are a case of Coke."

In the upstairs gymnasium, the boys were quietly assembling a complex miniature golf course. Using only mats and other gym equipment, they were putting the finishing touches on a maze and assorted ways to drive any golfer crazy.

Earlier in the week, teachers were asked to bring in photographs of when they were children. They were hung in a special "gallery" where the students were asked to match the name with a photo. The winning student would win a portable television.

Last Tuesday, senior members of the Student Council replaced their teachers in designated classrooms for the day. Wednesday, elections for next year's officers were held. And Thursday, the Student Council prepared and served breakfast for their teachers in the school's cafeteria.

(Kathy Perlow)

"It is our thank you to the faculty and students of the school for the great year we've had," Delorenoz said. "It's been a break for us before the students get down to studying for the final exams. It is a little fun before the work begins."

Friday afternoon, it appeared the students were prepared to take advantage of some fun before the work. They were busy preparing the softball toss competition, and many students were carefully carrying down caged gerbils in preparation for the maze competition.

The fishing contest, using no live bait nor fish, looked enticing. The challenge table-top hockey games were awaiting participants and the balloons for the balloon toss were being inflated and tied. Faculty members Clark Chatterton, Bill Fallon and DeLorenzo were anxiously awaiting their challenge at the free throw line.

DeLorenzo noted that last month, several members of the Student Council attended a Southeastern Massachusetts Association convention. "They talked about all the activities they had done the past year," he said. "And when we returned, they were quite proud. All the others kids at the convention were amazed at all the activities we had sponsored throughout the year."

The elections held last week attracted a large number of candidates and a healthy voter turnout. "I was amazed at the number of kids who ran for office," the faculty advisor stated. "There was some real interest in this election. There were signs all over this school."

Carolan Hurley was elected president of the council for the 1987-1988 school year. There were three candidates for that position.

As president next year, Hurley plans to renew interest in the Student Council which began this year. "As far as I can see, I would like to have the programs and the enthusiasm we had this year carry over to next year," she said last week. "There are few things next year's Student Council would like to see - maybe a salad bar in the cafeteria, snack machines, and a great Spirit Week like we had this year."

The 16 year-old junior said the class president for next year, Jay Marsac, is doing a "great job" for his classmates. Hurley is also a class representative and thought she could make a difference "with everybody's help" if she was elected Student Council president.

"I like this school and the kids here. I though this was a way for me to stay involved in school functions," she stated.

The other class officers elected last week include: Grade 8: President - Jennifer Reidy; Vice President - Amy Gallant; Secretary Heidi Lincoln; Treasurer - Laurie Bronstein; Representatives - Carlo Lagroterria, Michelle Woodland.

Grade 9: President - Jennifer Plante; Vice President - Anna Sandell; Secretary - Melissa Rousseau; Treasurer - Sophie Redfield; Representatives: David Cullinane, Jacob Powell.

Grade 10: President - James Reidy; Vice President - Zach Hochkeppel; Secretary - Jill Hamilton; Treasurer - Noah Hill; Representatives - Kerri Anglin, Joel Reidy.

Grade 11: President - Katie Ryan; Vice President - Katie Lord; Secretary - Kristin Ellinger; Treasurer - Katie Murphy; Representatives - Matt Buckley and Megan Terry.

Grade 12: President Jay Marsac; Vice President - Kerry Kirkendall; Secretary - Sarah Hamilton; Treasurer - Steve Myers; Representatives - Erica Ford, Carolan Hurley.

School committee representaives: Derek Lacks, Erin Powell, Kim Dwyer, Jay Staunton.

The grade 7 class officers are not elected until June.

Convention called to make drastic changes

By David Wadsworth
Special to the Mariner

Two hundred years ago, in May 1787, delegates from 12 of the original 13 states met in Philadelphia to begin a Constitutional Convention which would shape the destiny of a new American nation. In Massachusetts that spring there were disturbing reports coming from upstate New York that the gathered survivors of Daniel Shays' recent rebellion were planning another military assault upon the Bay State's western counties. The reports turned out to be a false alarm, but they underscored the turmoil afflicting the new and trouble-plagued country. The Constitutional Convention of 1787 had been called to make drastic revisions in the nation's original frame of government, the Articles of Confederation, or to replace it completely with a strong unified Federal system. In May of 1787 it was clear that the nation's government needed drastic changes, but it was not yet clear what those changes would be.

In Philadelphia, site of the Constitutional Convention, Pennsylvania's chosen delegation was the first to gather. Then came James Madison and George Washington from Virginia. Washington, easily the most popular personage in the entire country, left his Mount Vernon estate on May 9 and arrived in Philadelphia on the 13th, to the cheering of gathered citizens. The Constitutional Convention had originally been scheduled to open on May 14, but on that date only two states were in attendance.

Opening day was postponed as more delegates from near and far trickled in to Philadelphia. On May 16 Virgina's Dr. James McClurg arrived, and on the following day that state's George Mason. By the 23rd North Carolina's delegation was complete. Finally on Friday the 25th the delegations of seven states were present, and the Constitutional Convention formally opened. The Philadelphia Convention was opened by the states of New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Virginia, North Carolina and South Carolina. Members got down to business right away, establishing a committee to prepare standing rules and orders. Major William Jackson was elected Secretary of the Convention, and George Washington was unanimously elected as President of the Convention. Such was Washington's stature and proven ability that no other name was considered for that vital office. On the same day, James Madison began keeping his copious diary of notes, which he would keep each day throughout the Convention for the next four months. Madison's notes, when released and published in later years, became the sole major source of information relating to the daily proceedings, the discussions and debates, of the Convention. For, as Madison correctly assumed, the notes of the Convention's official Secretary were merely brief entries recording the motions and votes. The Convention itself, in its wisdom, also drew about its daily proceedings a total cloak of secrecy which remained inviolate throughout the deliberations and afterward. Not until Madison's notes were published years later would the content of the sessions become known to the citizens whose nation was governed by the Constitutional document which would emerge as the fruits of the Convention.

On opening day in Philadelphia, May 25, New England's delegations were represented by only one person, Massachusett's Caleb Strong. By Monday May 28 Nathaniel Gorham and Elbridge Gerry of Massachusetts were there, as was Judge Oliver Ellsworth of Connecticut. Also on that day the honored Dr. Benjamin Franklin took his seat, having been delayed a few days for reasons of health. The rest of the New England delegates arrived in short order, excepting New Hampshire's John Langdon and Nicholas Gilman, who, paying their own way, arrived at the Convention on July 23. Two additional delegates from New Hampshire, Pierce Long and John Sparhawk, and one from Massachusetts, Judge Francis Dana, did not make the long and arduous trip to Philadelphia.

The first full day of business at the Convention was Monday, May 28 and it was on that day the discussions and debates of momentous importance began. They were to continue through a hot Philadelphia summer until, on September 17 a new Constitutional document emerged to be presented to the American people for their consideration and judgment.

North River Gardeners' sale

The North River Gardeners are having their Annual Plant Sale on Saturday, May 23 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the First Parish Church and Kent House in Norwell Center, off Route 123.

The Gardeners will be selling perennials and unusual plants from their own gardens, as well as choice annuals, herbs and vegetable plants.

A snack bar will serve coffee, donuts and home-cooked food for lunch amidst fresh flower arrangements for sale in the dining hall.

All proceeds from the sale benefit the community, the South Shore Natural Science Center, the Nature Conservancy, and the North and South River Watersheds, and help to maintain the Gaffield Park play equipment and the historic gardens of Kent House.

Metronite performance time

The Metropathways Program will celebrate another successful year with a gala Metronite performance at New England Life Hall in Boston Tuesday evening, May 19 at 7:30 p.m.

Metronite is an all-student performance of Theater, Music, and Dance. It is the culmination of a semester of work by high school students from 30 urban and suburban communities within the Greater Boston Area. Also on display will be an exhibit of Fine Arts, Photography, and Video.

Metropathways is an outstanding Boston resource used by the CHS Alternative School to broaden the horizons of our suburban students. CHS senior Jenna Emmons will be featured in a video play that she created.

The public is welcome and encouraged to attend; admission is free. For information about the program or the performance, call 262-9645.

GOP luncheon

Members of the South Shore Republican Club will meet May 18 at noon, at Bobby Hacketts Restaurant, Pembroke.

The program will begin with a luncheon, followed by a presentation by featured speaker Betty Graham, the director of development at the Pine Street Inn in Boston.

The luncheon menu offers three choices: chicken, broiled haddock or london broil. The cost is $8.95.

Reservations are required for the luncheon. Checks may be mailed to treasurer, Mrs. Maxwell Shields, 25 Cobb Lane, Scituate, 02066.

The deadline for reservations is May 13.

The public is invited to attend.

Historical Society sale

The Hingham Historical Society will hold a sale Saturday, May 23 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Old Derby headquarters, 34 Main Street in downtown Hingham.

The Society bought the Georgian building from Derby Academy almost 20 years ago when the Academy consolidated all the grades on the Fearing Road campus. Over the last 15 years there has been a gradual restoration as funds were available.

The first two floors have been finished and the stairwell leading to the third floor has been remodeled. Now work is about to start on the third floor. One of the upper rooms has been used as an attic and this sale is intended to clear things away before the workmen arrive.

Historical society attics are more interesting than the usual variety and the Hingham members are adding old and new things of their own to help with this fund raising event.

Society evening meeting May 19

The Cohasset Historical Society will hold an evening meeting featuring a unique "Show & Tell" program at 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, May 19. The meeting will feature several members and guests of the Society in a program the theme of which will be artifacts, documents, gowns and artworks from the Society's extensive museum collections.

Slides will illustrate some of the items chosen for subjects, and all will be on display. Speakers will tell of the various items, their use, their age and their significance as historical records of an early New England. Included for showing are such things as a genuine presentation baseball bat dating from the earliest years of baseball, three 18th century documents which are part of the Society's extensive early records, a miniature sundial watch of antique origin, several gowns from the gown collection, and other unusual items specially selected for this evening presentation.

Admission to the Society's May 19 evening program at the Unitarian Parish House Hall is free. Society members and the general public are invited to attend. Plan to see this fascinating glimpse into the historic past of Cohasset, as portrayed through Historical Society collections items chosen for the occasion.

Conservatory honors Quintets

The South Shore Conservatory will present a concert by the school's Honors Woodwind and Brass Quintets, Tuesday, May 19 at 7:30 p.m. in Cox Hall at the school off 19 Fort Hill Street. There will be no charge for admission.

The Quintets are made up of high school students in the area who auditioned for acceptance to these groups and proved their superior instrumental ability. The Quintets represent the Conservatory in competition and at special events in the Greater Boston and South Shore areas. These students receive scholarships for their participation, which is made possible by the Lincoln Trust Company, the Quincy Savings Bank and the Rockland Trust Company.

James Simpson, director of the Conservatory and a professional trumpeter, coaches the Brass Quintet whose members are: Glen Whitehead (Falmouth) trumpet, Paula Swartz (Hanover) trumpet, Mary Dommer (East Bridgewater) french horn, John Horigan (East Bridgewater) trombone, and Chris Lucchetti (Brockton) tuba.

The Woodwind Quintet is coached by professional clarinetist, David Cross, who is a member of the faculty. They are: Gabe Southard (Duxbury) flute, Gillian McPhee (Scituate) oboe, Keith Martin (Pembroke) clarinet, Allyson Whitaker (Scituate) french horn, and Kerry Mammone (Marshfield) bassoon.

Historical Society flea market

To many residents of Cohasset and the South Shore, the Cohasset Historical Society has been synonimous with the term Flea Market. This year is no exception as the Society, once again, will offer a choice selection of pre-owned goods at an early summer sale scheduled for Saturday, June 13 at the Society's Caleb Lothrop House, 14 Summer Street in Cohasset.

This year the selection of items has been upgraded, and only good, useable materials will be offered. The Society's "Flea Market Barn" once again is bulging at the seams with good buys, and those who arrive early will have the advantage, when the most and best items are available. Proceeds from the Historical Society's Flea Market go to benefit the community programs and the museums maintained by the Historical Society.

Mark the date on your calendar, Saturday, June 13 (and the date may be a lucky one for the fortunate buyer), and plan to attend this year's edition of the Monster Flea Market, held by the Cohasset Historical Society at the town's sole entry on the National Register of Historic Places. Here is a chance to partake of Cohasset's unique history while browsing for good buys in used items, as selected by the Society's Flea Market Committee.

A South Shore regional office of the Massachusetts Coastal Zone Management Program opened on May 14 in the Norwell Town Hall on Route 123.

The opening completed MCZM's goal of providing regional offices to serve all of the Massachusetts' 78 communities within the coastal zone. MCZM offices already exist for Cape Cod, Southeastern Massachusetts (Buzzards Bay/Mount Hope Bay), and the North Shore.

Through a cooperative arrangement, Lori Thayer has been hired to serve as the South Shore regional coordinator working jointly with the MCZM and the Metropolitan Area Planning Council (MAPC). Her role will be to act as liaison between the Boston MCZM office and the towns of Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Hull, Kingston, Marshfield, Norwell, Plymouth, Scituate and Weymouth. Additionally, she will work on coastal issues through the MAPC office.

MCZM's arrangement with the MAPC is ideal given the existing South Shore Coalition, a subregional group of MAPC.

Book fair a success

The Book Fair held during the week of April 28-30 at the Jr./Sr. High School library for National Library Week was a success. With the money realized from sales, we plan to purchase $100 worth of paperbacks for the library.

Our thanks to all who participated and to those who helped out — especially Bryan Edwards and Danny Bickerstaff for their great "rap" advertising the fair and Robbie Manns for his stirring message, plus Melinda Bonanno and Steff Fox for their posters; and finally the parents who helped us run the fair! Rita Kirk, Sue Reardon, Jean Reidy, Carol Martin, Pat Baird, Regina Shultz and Cynthia Hurley — A great big thank you!

Innovative program

Mr. Edward F. Sheehan, chairman of the Social Studies Department, recently visited Hamilton-Wenham Regional High School to observe an innovative social studies program there. He also met with the high school principal to discuss the regional school's flexible class scheduling.

He met with author-teacher Kevin O'Reilly and sat in on two of his classes on Critical Thinking in American History. In this program the students read generalizations on a particular historical issue and then use primary sources to test these generalizations. According to Mr. O'Reilly, students are more motivated to challenge these generalizations. "Our students are taught to think, to evaluate arguments as well as to study the factual side of American History," he added.

Mr. Sheehan will now evaluate this material, discuss it with other members of his department and the school administration before reaching a decision on how it could possibly be incorporated into the high school curriculum. "I was impressed with this new approach to teaching students how to use their minds more actively," he said.

Dates to remember

May 18-20 — Joseph Osgood Book Fair.
May 21 — Joseph Osgood Snappy Sneaker Day.
May 21 — Deer Hill Spring Concert at CHS 7 p.m.

Save those symbols!

Deer Hill PSO asks that everyone save the UPC or bar codes from any Prince food packages. The Prince (Spaghetti) Company is having a contest to celebrate its 75th birthday and is giving prizes for bar codes. Deer Hill is hoping to get a G.E. Camcorder color video camera. Send proofs to school with your child or drop off in PSO mailbox at Deer Hill.

Among the field of posters submitted to the Social Service League Health Fair contest, two winners have been selected: Toni Cann and Saadia Bryant.

The winners and honorable mentions were displayed at the Town Hall May 13, during the Health Day Fair.

Arts recognition night

The second annual "Arts Recognition Night" for junior-senior high school fine and performing arts students will be held Wednesday, May 27 at 7:30 p.m. in St. Stephen's Walton Rogers Hall.

Sponsored by the Arts Boosters Club in conjunction with high school arts teachers Colleen Lucas, Jody Wood, Bryan Marks, Steve Shirosky, and Ron Emmons, the program will give recognition to arts students for their efforts throughout the year, including a few special merit awards.

Mary Hanson is the picture of equestrian perfection as she demonstrates her fair project at Deer Hill. (Kathy Perlow)

All students who have been involved in the choral or instrumental performing groups, Drama Workshop, the literary arts magazine, Evening of Art and Music, and exhibiting fine arts students are encouraged to attend. Parents, other students, and the public are also welcome to come.

Over 300 students and parents went to last year's inaugural Arts Recognition Night. A larger hall has been secured to accommodate those attending this year more comfortably.

The Arts Boosters Club was formed last year to encourage and support music, drama, art and literary activities at the junior-senior high school.

Mormon Homemaking Meeting

What is there in store for this month's homemaking meeting! Plenty.

There will be a choice of three mini-classes. One, to whet the appetite, is: "Working Easy With Your Wok"—an introduction to stir-fry cooking by LouAnn Thompson is a Marshfield resident and mother of four who enjoys the art of culinary capering.

Joan Jackson will teach a basic knitting class. "It might look hard, but it's really easy," Jackson said.

Enter the class with Kim Strumph of Quincy, will be happy to instruct you in making fabric, soft sculptured notebook covers that will transform an ordinary three-ringer into your personal family treasure trove.

All this and more—Mary Ann Zeiler of Duxbury will manage to squeeze in a few suggestions on: "Productive and Efficient use of Time!"

The meeting will run from 7 to 9 on Thursday, May 14 at the LDS meetinghouse, 379 Gardner St., in Hingham. Come join the group. You are welcome, and the lessons are free!

Beyond War speaker

Humanity stands at a crossroads. Technology has given us the capability of destroying civilization and perhaps even life itself.

The same process of discovery that has lead science and technology to develop weapons of annihilation has also produced the possibility of new ways to relate to other nations, other cultures, other peoples.

Friday May 15, following the 8 p.m. service at Congregation Sha'aray Shalom, 1112 Main Street, Doug Marshall, South Shore coordinator of the Beyond War movement, will introduce the Beyond War philosophy and process.

Beyond War is the response of thousands of individuals committed to educating people and building agreement on the need to end all war.

The public is cordially invited to join the Congregation May 15 to learn more about this historic effort on behalf of the whole human race.

Please call the Temple at 749-8103 for further information.

BOY'S TRACK

Last Friday, May 8th, the boy's track team lost to Hanover and Whitman-Hanson in a tri-meet at Whitman-Hanson. Even though they were defeated, coach Tom O'Neil feels that this meet was their best performance of the season. Because of the team's young age, they are not very much concerned with winning but qualifying team members for the state division meet. Already in the states are junior Sean Fitzsimmons, who threw the javelin 153 feet Friday, and sophomore Ned Chase, who placed third in the high jump and cleared 6'2". Other point scorers were Ian Smart, who placed second in the javelin and John Lindsley who placed third in the high jump also.

This Monday the boys will face a tough Duxbury team and wrap up the season with this final meet. We wish them the best of luck.

GIRL'S SOFTBALL

Last Saturday, May 9, the girls' softball team lost to Hull 7-4 in a game that had been postponed due to poor weather conditions earlier in the season.

The game started off with a very close score and Coach Greene was pleased with the overall performance and effort of the team. Infielders were Debbie Hartley, Kristin Ellinger, Marge Murphy, Toni Cann, Lisa Shumaker, and Sara Bishop. Lisa, who is a left fielder, was put in a tough position during this game.

She filled in for Katie Pyle at first base and played very well. Kara Manion, Sophie Redfield, and Andrea Cann made many nice catches in the outfield also. Runs were scored by eighth graders, Kara Manion, Sophie Redfield, and Barbara Lagrotteria. Junior Debbie Hartley also scored a run in the fourth inning.

This week the softball team will face Rockland, Sandwich and East Bridgewater.

Little League update

Baseball resumed Thursday when spring returned to Cohasset. In action Thursday night, Billy Jordan and Joey Andrade (WP) combined on a one-hitter to beat the previously undefeated Braves 8-2. Doug Ellinger went three innings for the Braves but was hit pretty hard in this outing. Andy Pozatek (LP) and Greg Pyle finished up the pitching chores and both were banged around solidly.

Leading the offensive fireworks for the Yankees were Joe Andrade, Chris Goodman and Charlie Endris. Andrade had a double and triple to produce three runs. Goodman had another long double to drive in a run, and Charlie Endris drove in two runs with a single. On two other occasions he hit the ball hard but right at people.

Defensively for the Braves shortstop Chris Rondrat and second-sacker Steve Harrington made several fine plays to subdue the Yank barrage!

In action Friday night, the Red Sox got themselves hooked up in anotherthriller.this time with the Mets. The lead changed hands several times before the Sox tied it at five-all in the fifth. The Mets made a final bid to win in the bottom of the sixth with a runner on third and two outs when Michael Burns hit a hard ground ball to Kuhn at short. Andy made the play clearly and threw Mike out at first to send the game to extra innings. Play was called, however, because of darkness and will be resumed prior to their next confrontation.

The Mets had a fine night offensively garnering seven hits of Pete Fahey. Leading the hit parade was Brendan Kinchla with two followed by Rolandelli, Burns, Theriault, Danny Baird, and David Zadel with one apiece. Dave's was a long rap to center good for three bases.

Countering for the Sox were Nathan Fiore, Greg Lowenhagen, and Peter Fahey. Nathan again had two hits as did Lowenhagen. Peter helped himself with two rbi's on a sacrifice fly and a long double to center. Great game kids!

A word of thanks to umpires Peter Sandblom, Mike Ellinger, Mike Rolandelli, Linc Marsac, and Scott Fitzsimmons for jobs well done. And more thanks to all parents and patrons in attendance at the field.

Because of several cancellations, we don't have enough data for pitching and hitting statistics.

Zoning board reviews Target plans

The zoning board of appeals is now deliberating whether or not to let Target Industries continue business as usual at 1 Pleasant Street.

Over a year and a half ago, the board denied Target Industries a request to manufacture contact lenses at the Cohasset sight.

Owners Roger Porter and Michael Abbruzzese appealed the decision and a Superior court Judge granted them a new hearing. Paul Sullivan, attorney for Target, explained last week that the process is a refining of the glass into a desired shape. Manager Jim Shea explained that the six operating machines make virtually no noise and waste is at a minimum. Local residents made it clear to the board that Target Industries is a good neighbor.

What concerns the board according to member Edward Lubitz is, "the leap from distribution to manufacturing that the company has made.

"We wouldn't want the scale of the operation to affect the neighborhood," added Lubitz.

Appeals Board Chairman Myrna Putzinger stated that the board cannot reconsider its original verdict on the grounds of "physical hardships," because it is not a personal or financial dilemma that has caused Target to apply for the change in license.

Sullivan stated that Target is, "merely trying to keep abreast of the competition," and that this is a natural step in the development of the company.

The board took the matter under advisement.

AIDS

What do the kids know?

By Bruce Kauffman

AIDS is making its inexorable march to the suburbs, no longer just a problem for the gay communities of Boston, San Francisco and other large cities.

The state Department of Public Health reports that just four years ago, there were but three cases of AIDS in Norfolk and Plymouth counties.

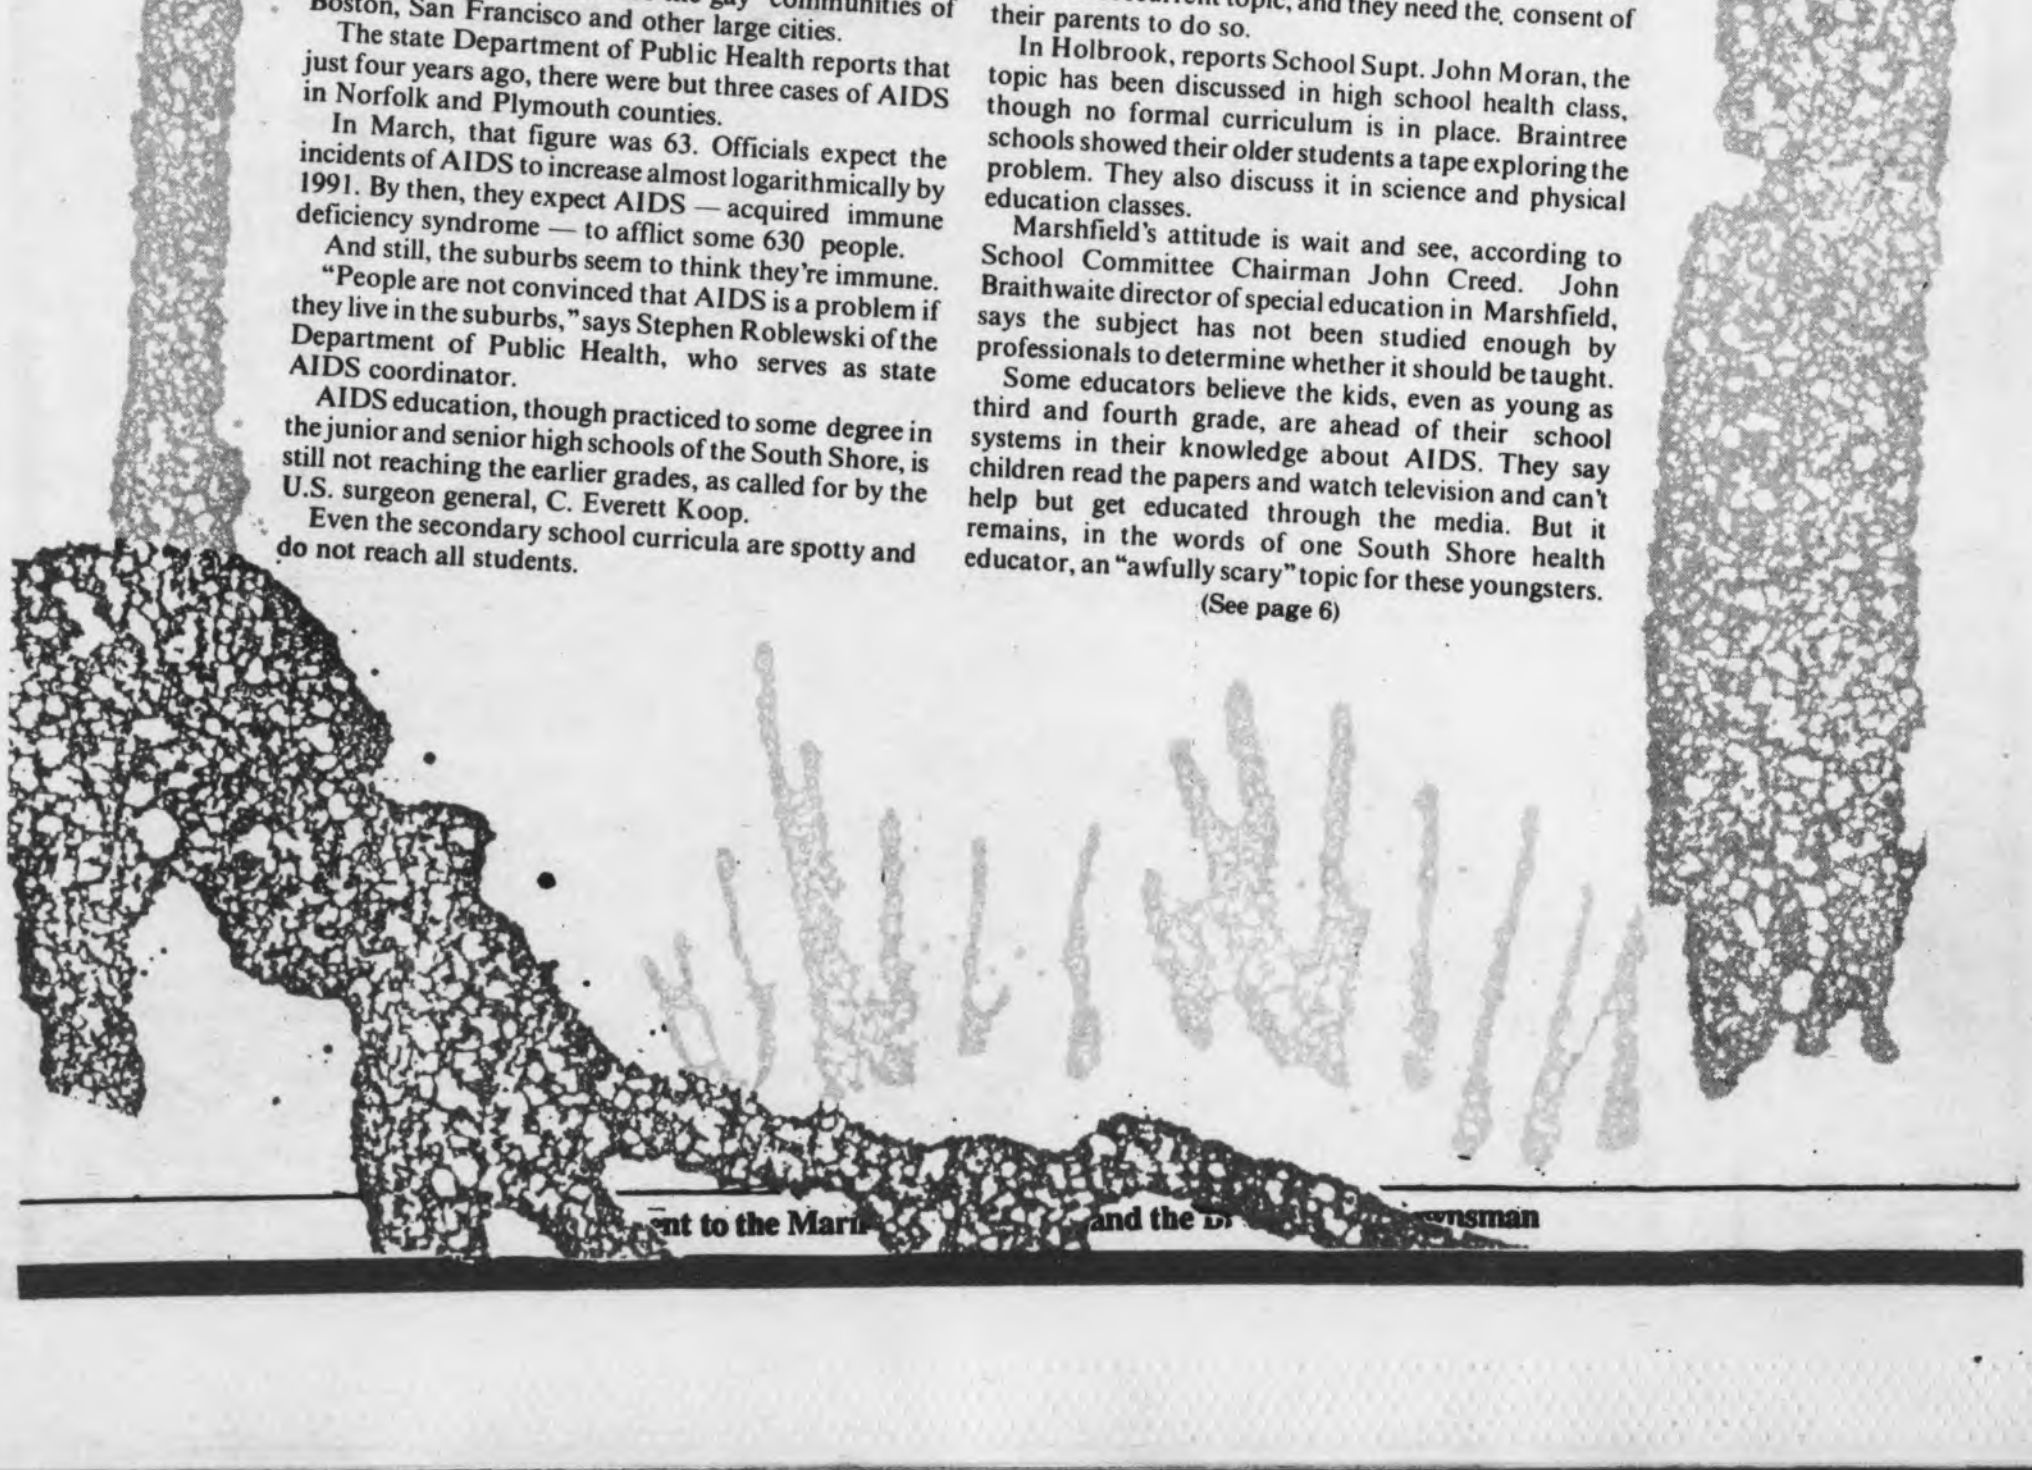
In March, that figure was 63. Officials expect the incidents of AIDS to increase almost logarithmically by 1991. By then, they expect AIDS — acquired immune deficiency syndrome — to afflict some 630 people.

And still, the suburbs seem to think they're immune.

"People are not convinced that AIDS is a problem if they live in the suburbs," says Stephen Roblewski of the Department of Public Health, who serves as state AIDS coordinator.

AIDS education, though practiced to some degree in the junior and senior high schools of the South Shore, is still not reaching the earlier grades, as called for by the U.S. surgeon general, C. Everett Koop.

Even the secondary school curricula are spotty and do not reach all students.



In Cohasset, for instance, about 70 of the high school's 400 students take a health course in which AIDS is a recurrent topic, and they need the consent of their parents to do so.

In Holbrook, reports School Supt. John Moran, the topic has been discussed in high school health class, though no formal curriculum is in place. Braintree schools showed their older students a tape exploring the problem. They also discuss it in science and physical education classes.

Marshfield's attitude is wait and see, according to School Committee Chairman John Creed. John Braithwaite director of special education in Marshfield, says the subject has not been studied enough by professionals to determine whether it should be taught.

Some educators believe the kids, even as young as third and fourth grade, are ahead of their school systems in their knowledge about AIDS. They say children read the papers and watch television and can't help but get educated through the media. But it remains, in the words of one South Shore health educator, an "awfully scary" topic for these youngsters.

A house made over stands in Walpole

By Judy Enright

Those who snicker at the Junior League of Boston's Decorators' Show House because of the expense and extravagance displayed throughout more than 30 rooms and hallways, are missing the point, according to Nancy Hamilton of Cohasset.

South Short

Having been associated with the League's Show House project for 17 years, she knows that it's the ideas that visitors extract from the displays that are important and not each room in its entirety. Asking the price of redoing an entire room is beside the point, she says, because there are few people with rooms in their homes as large as or similar to those in the Bird Estate in East Walpole.

"There are several ideas in this room alone," she said, motioning toward the drawing room designed by Clara Hayes Barrett of Hingham, "that you could use in your own home. You could take some of these little things and give your home a whole fresh, new look. That's what's important to the public."

This year, the Junior League, a non-profit women's organization dedicated to promoting volunteerism, has chosen "Endean," the former Bird family home, for its project. Black and white photos in each room show the deteriorated condition of the estate before the project began. Perhaps the most fascinating part of the tour is to compare the before photos with the finished rooms.

"Endean," which means "house on a hill" in Gaelic, was home to the Bird family until 1983. The property is now owned by Omega Associates who are developing a 300-acre community that will offer living accommodations, services, recreation and work opportunities oriented toward technical and research businesses. Omega Associates principals, Edward Diehl and David Bird, recently bought Endean and other Bird family land from the Home Building Company of East Walpole, founded by Charles S. Bird Jr. in 1921.

The estate is entered through wrought iron gates and dirt drives that wind through mature forests dotted with rare and exotic trees and other plantings. The home was built in the 1840's by Francis William Bird (David Bird's great grandfather). Francis graduated from Brown University and was intent on teaching until the economy forced him into the paper business to help his father. He was known as the "Sage of Walpole" for his public and political participation.

Francis' son, Charles Sumner Bird, added a third floor, the Southern plantation style pillared front and a gigantic music room, at the turn of the century.

The children's bath, designed by Jeanne Muir Design Associates of Hanover, is one of more than 30 rooms at Endean graced by the decorators' touch.

The Bird family had great influence on Walpole. Charles gave 100 acres for a park and playground in memory of his father, Francis. Charles' son, Charles S. Bird Jr., served on the Walpole planning commission and prepared a book-length study, "Town Planning for Small Communities," one of the first such written documentaries in this country. He also was influential in developing sections of East Walpole into residential streets and homes and was involved in creating the first town forest in America.

David Bird is a fifth generation descendant of George Bird, who started a papermaking business in East Walpole in 1803. The company, originally begun in 1795, continues today as Bird, Incorporated, manufacturers of building products and industrial machinery.

The home and its setting bespeak a former elegance. The estate's expansiveness lends itself to a project such as the Show House, which during its three-week annual run earns about $200,000 for the Junior League's charitable programs.

"All proceeds go back into the community," Hamilton said.

Visitors are welcomed to the house by a porch, under arbors smothered by aged wisteria vines. The porch is decorated with all-weather wicker fiberglass outdoor furniture, ready for summer.

Inside are elegantly furnished rooms, many of which are the size of most visitors' entire homes. The gigantic music room, for instance, has been done by Solutions of Weston for a debutante supper. From one end of the room, it is difficult to pick out details on the fireplace wall at the other end — even for someone with nearly perfect vision — because of the distance involved. The room has been decorated to include numerous tables, a dance floor and other trappings of the debutante festivity. Ideas that visitors might garner from that room, Hamilton said, are coordinating fabric covers for folding chairs and pots of geraniums as centerpieces instead of floral arrangements. Those types of decorating ideas can be easily simulated in every home, she added.

House made over

A committee chooses the decorators for each room from designs submitted in the fall. Hamilton said that decorators are invited to submit designs and, if chosen, they have about two months to complete their rooms.

Competition is fierce for the rooms because, Hamilton said, decorators often win national recognition as a result of their work in the Boston Show House. Over 100 decorators were invited to submit ideas, Hamilton added, all of whom were from the general Boston area, from New Hampshire to the Cape.

Last year, a room done by Ingrid Goulston of Scituate from Ingrid Interiors, was a winner in House Beautiful's 1986 search for the 10 best Show House rooms in America. This year, another South Shore company, Assinippi Trading Company of Hanover, run by Mary Williams and Linda Garretson, has been invited to submit their room, the Governess Suite, to the House Beautiful contest for consideration. Further, decorators get recognition from national press coverage and from the thousands of visitors who march through the Show House every year.

The East Walpole house surely has something for every taste and every age bracket. There are elaborate children's rooms, including a boy's room painted navy blue by E. McAuliffe Morrissey of Cohasset. Stark but elegant, it creates a magnificent contrast with the fanciful little girl's room next door. The girl's room is "total fantasy," Hamilton says. Entry is across a decorative footbridge, over a mirror, covered with stones, to look like a brook. A giant pink and grey butterfly wings its way across several walls and part of the ceiling. The room is a creative fantasy with a ballet bar at one end for the little girl's practice.

There's a complete exercise room by Fiandaca Interiors of Boston that would make an exercise buff drool. There's a tack room, where equestriennes relax after the hunt, and a sewing room that is entirely painted right down to the floor which is painted to look like ribbon.

The young lady's bedroom, by Ingrid Goulston, contains a gigantic armoire that Hamilton said had to be lifted by a crane into the room through French doors in the front of the house. "It will go out the same way," Hamilton said. The room also features a glass-doored bookcase which Goulston has made into a dollhouse.

In the nursery, there are mirrors low enough so babies can look in as they crawl along. And in a bright yellow children's bath by Jeanne Muir Design Associates of Hanover, the wallpaper theme is picked up and carried throughout the room.

A recurrent theme throughout the house is trompe l'oeil (fool the eye) from wood painted to look like marble to a tiny pantry with varnished wallpaper on the floor to look like painting and walls done in several shades of color to add height to the rooms. "It's a total fantasy," Hamilton said, describing in particular the little girl's butterfly bedroom. "It's more like a painting than a room room."

The show is open daily, through May 22, at the former Bird Estate off Mylod Street in East Walpole. Hours are: Monday to Saturday, 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.; Tuesday to Friday evenings (excluding May 22) from 6 to 8:30 p.m. and Sundays from noon to 4:30 p.m. Children under eight-years old are not allowed, nor are cameras. There is also a boutique and cafe open at the Show House during the exhibition hours.

Motorists should park behind the Bird Park Cafe, off Washington Street, or at Bird Inc. on Bird Drive in East Walpole, where shuttle buses will pick them up. Tickets are $10 at the door.

Politicus

by David A. Mittell, Jr.

On monogamy, the media and men's souls

There is not a bit of doubt in my mind that except for a particular category of the deeply religious, monogamy is the most satisfactory and enduring resolution to the problem of existence. I say that with absolute certainty, having never married and recognizing that for a sizable portion of the population the making of a meaningful single life is the only alternative to despair.

In my case the cause was schizophrenia and homosexuality (theirs) and blunders and bad luck (mine). For others, the reasons are as multiple as the single population — health, appearances, lack of opportunities, religious commitments, traumatic experiences, preference, and so forth. Most of us who are single for whatever reason eventually learn to live full lives.

We do so, I think, primarily wth the help of our friends and through institutions that are larger than the self and provide a form of what Erik Erikson called "generativity" in the absence of the literal generativity of having children. Some follow the arts, some charitable work, some their careers. In my case, my passion is America, or as I put it in a 1974 poem:

My lover is America,
My orgasmic sigh its majesty,
My abiding faith its history;
The company of its highways
Kisses my face with air,
And the running Southern red soil
When I return is always there.

Despite the obvious exiguousness of single life, which can be understood (and all the trashy books on the subject dismissed) by the term "solitary sunset," there is a redeeming simplicity to the single life for those who master it. One learns how to deal with moments of loneliness much as one deals with a bad backhand in tennis (I know of that too): move a little off center court and take the ball on the forehand side which is strong and experienced at handling the heavy topspin that sometimes comes across the net.

On the other hand, it seems to me that marriage when it stops working has no such simplicity. For one thing, fortune hunters aside, marriage partners don't make their vows expecting failure. Coping with a bad marriage is therefore a complete shock — more like getting hijacked on a springtime flight to Corfu than being cursed with Dave Mittell's bad backhand. Bad marriages, therefore, are usually much worse than bad affairs, and like the hijack victim the partner in a bad marriage never took any courses at Yale on how to cope.

When one has seen one's closest friends through the good and bad that love and marriage can offer, one learns (if one is wise) to follow a reputed aphorism of the greatest of English sovereigns, Elizabeth I. Her

Braintree

Clean Harbors again

Clean Harbors wants to build a $6 million chemical waste incinerator in Braintree.

The hazardous waste firm has submitted plans for the rotary kiln incinerator to the state Hazardous Waste Facility and Siting Safety Council.

Local officials and residents will form a committee to study the plan, which now calls for 30,000 tons of waste a year to be burned at the proposed site.

Canton

Police Chief to retire

Police Chief Joseph T. Buckley will resign June 30 after serving as head of the Canton police department for seven years.

He cited health reasons in a letter to selectmen which revealed he is seeking an "accidental disability" retirement. The announcement came as "a mild surprise" to selectmen.

Town meeting studied

A majority of the Charter Commission has recommended that Canton change from open to representative town meeting, but one member asked that a minority report be included with the draft of the charter to be presented at a public hearing May 28.

Frank Keefe also separated himself from the rest of the commission by not signing the preliminary report or an accompanying narrative.

Cohasset

Landfill demo ends hearing

Cohasset Heights landfill representatives stormed out of a health board hearing in protest last week, objecting to a Tropicana-and-Drano demonstration by a resident.

The hearing began calmly, with a proposal from the landfill's engineers to deal with the issue of off-site pollution. As the board and audience debated proposals to analyze the risk to Lily Pond and surrounding areas, Brian Lipsett of Pond Street produced a glass of orange juice and a can of Drano. He proceeded to pour the Drano into the orange juice. "I know you love your daughter," he told the chairman. "How many of these crystals would you allow her to drink?" Landfill representatives then left the hearing.

3A rail station proposed

The MBTA project manager for the Old Colony Rehabilitation Project has asked to meet with selectmen to discuss a proposed Cohasset station site along Rte. 3A near the former Winter Garden property.

Stephen Polechronis said commuter rail station sites have been proposed and reviewed in Cohasset and the final recommendation will be included for detailed study in the Draft Environmental Impact Report.

Hanover

Big lots win out at town meeting

Town meeting, by a 14-vote margin, rejected a selectman-supported open space plan in favor of large residential lots.

The proposal would have allowed developers of parcels of 10 acres or more to build single family homes on lots one-third smaller than current zoning in exchange for open space.

Also supporting the measure were the planning board and the strategic planning committee.

Members of the health board and conservation commission spoke against the proposal.

Hingham

Officials protest lack of counsel

Selectmen continue to say the zoning board of appeals will not receive legal representation paid by the taxpayers to defend themselves in a lawsuit brought by Elder Care Services, Inc.

Atty. George Ford informed the zoning board he would represent them on a pro bono basis, at no cost, if the board so votes. Last month, selectmen reaffirmed a decision they made in December which prohibited the use of town-funded counsel for the board in Elder Care-related matters.

Since that time, many town board members have denounced the selectmen's actions, fearful that they too will be cut off from representation by legal counsel.

Town Counsel ends service

George Ford, counsel for the town for the past 14 years, will no longer serve in that capacity, he informed selectmen.

He will provide legal representation to the town when requested and available, but he will charge his business fee of $150 per hour. When previously serving as counsel in a variety of matters, Ford has charged $55 per hour. Until selectmen find another attorney willing to serve as counsel, Ford will continue with all current legal matters. He also volunteered his assistance to selectmen in choosing his successor.

Holbrook

Reaffirming recount

A recount in the Nancy Noone selectman's race resulted in six new votes for her and three extra votes for Leah Abbott, her nearest competitor.

The total for the top candidates now stands at 582 to 571, reaffirming Noone's right to the seat.

Kingston

Firehouse approved; mall stalled

The planning board refused to recommend rezoning 92 acres of land for a proposed shopping mall by the Pyramid Companies at Kingston's annual town meeting. The refusal effectively squashed four articles related to a proposed land transfer between the town and Pyramid.

Voters did, however, approve an article to appropriate funds for a new firehouse which was to be situated on part of the land transferred from Pyramid.

Override on ballot

Voters approved Prop. 2½ override questions on Saturday's ballot for $300,000 to renovate the Reed Community House and $590,000 to construct a new fire station.

Marshfield

New political blood in town

Political newcomer John MacMahon stunned even himself May 2 by ousting incumbent selectman James Finucane and capturing 62 percent of a record turnout vote.

MacMahon, who campaigned on environmental and time-for-a-change themes, said he was "just delighted that a newcomer can deliver a message...that seemed acceptable to so many people."

Other political newcomers to gain seats were Louise Levin-Cutler, school committee and John Bangs, planning.

Also unseating an incumbent was Christine Ryan in her second run for the health board. She won this time around over Francis Cullen, a six-year member of the board.

Norwell

Another year, another budget race

Town meeting ended May 4 with voters approving a Route 53 traffic study and four more policemen and reversing a decision to spend $200,000 for drainage at Mt. Blue and Lincoln Streets.

Voters were warned at the start of the meeting by advisory board Chairman Rebecca Freed that articles already approved had brought the town to within $32,000 of its $9 million levy limit.

She successfully urged voters to approve only those measures supported by the advisory board in order to avoid a Proposition 2 1/2 override.

Pembroke

Moderator endures and prevails

Tom Walsh won his 38th term as town meeting moderator by defeating challenger Bart Gruzalski by 515 votes.

Incumbent selectman Henry Plausse won a third term and Anne Hetman was returned to the health board after a two-year absence.

Hetman had served on the health board 12 years before losing the last election to James McCollum. This year she defeated incumbent Joseph Mulkern.

Plymouth

Accident victims buried in Vine Hills Cemetery

Services were held May 5 for the three victims of the May 2 accident in Manomet.

Todd Carter, 19, driver of the car, and passengers John Carey Jr., 18, and Kimberly Nickerson, 16, were buried at Vine Hills Cemetery.

At the request of the families, Nickerson and Carey, high school sweethearts, were buried in adjacent plots.

Other passengers in the crash remained in two hospitals. John Curry, 24, is in Jordan Hospital. Lana Fortin, 22, and her one-year-old daughter, Morgan, are at New England Medical Center.

All victims except the Fortins were from Plymouth. The Fortins live in Hyannis.

Randolph

Senior center opens

Despite unseasonable cold and unprecendented rain, Randolph's new Senior Citizen Center formally opened its doors last week in a gala ceremony. Over 300 elderly residents attended.

The site of the center is the former McNeil School off Union Street near the Randolph-Holbrook line. The long-vacant school building has been completely renovated, and the only part of the center that's not brand new are the walls," said selectman Paul Connors, who serves as chairman of the municipal space needs committee.

Condo plan defeated

By an overwhelming 145-1 vote, town meeting members defeated a rezoning measure to clear the way for construction of up to 60 condominiums on land the town declined to buy last year near Grove Street.

Meeting members defeated the bid on a standing vote after colleagues and neighbors of the proposed development warned of the severe traffic congestion that would be caused by Narroway Village and other condo projects in the area. Representatives of Woodland Development of Newton bought the 7.7-acre site in December.

Scituate

New health agent

After ten frustrating months, Scituate finally has a health director. Jennifer Lamb of Hull, currently Hull's health agent, will start the $33,000 Scituate job at the end of May or early June.

The 35-year-old Lamb has been observing Scituate perc tests on Fridays since last June. She will be available for some work in Scituate before June because the Hull health agent doesn't work Fridays.

Students visit Russia

A group of 15 Scituate High School students traveled to the Soviet Union during spring vacation and got a taste of life behind the Iron Curtain.

The students encountered black market hustlers and Soviet soldiers during their trip, and were guided by a host provided by the KGB. SHS social studies teacher Judith Forrester arranged the trip through the American Council for International Studies in Boston and the official Soviet youth travel organization, Sputnik.

Weymouth

$59m budget approved

The annual town meeting approved a $59 million operating budget with little debate and no rancor last week, one that is fully funded with newly-disclosed tax revenues for new growth.

The new growth figures of $1 million for fiscal 1987 and about $600,000 for 1988 were disclosed by Harold Mendoza, president of the firm that has been revaluing property in the town for the past eight months. The additional funding made up for the $1 million shortfall predicted by the Appropriation Committee.

European trip sanctioned

Five people from the DPW will be off for Europe, probably May 19, to study the European methods of disposing solid wastes.

The annual town meeting appropriated $10,000 to cover expenses of the traveling task force for four days. The Board of Public Works is negotiating a contract with the French firm of Laurent-Bouillet Howard Inc. to convert the old town incinerator off Wharf Street into a trash-to-energy plant.

At Large

By Tom Henshaw

Tailing the Duke

Monday, May 11. It was raining in Marshfield. I was working the day watch out of politics. My partner's Cathy Conley. The Boss is David Cutler. My name is Henshaw.

3:13 p.m. - The Boss got an anonymous phone call. Sounded like the same guy who ratted on Gary Hart to the Miami Herald. This time it's Mike Dukakis. He's not a womanizer. Worse. He's cheap.

"Kitty already told us that," said Conley.

"What wife wouldn't," said the Boss. He lowered his voice. "There may be a Pulitzer in this."

6:01 a.m. - Staked out Dukakis home in Brookline. Duke himself, natty in cotton jammies from Zayre's, came out on front steps to get morning paper.

"Looks like the Globe," said Conley.

"Figures," I said in my now familiar terse monotone.

7:43 a.m. - Caught subway to State House. Dukakis stood up the whole way, clutching strap, just like any other downtown office worker. Funny though. Mike was only one reading Des Moines Register.

"This clinches it," said Conley, "A politician who takes the subway to work! In Massachusetts yet! He has to be cheap!"

"Not necessarily," I cautioned. "This costs 60 cents. Would you put yourself through this if we didn't have the big expense account?"

11:47 a.m. - Went to lunch in sub shop down hill on Beacon Street. Duke walked.

"Cover the back door," I told Conley, mindful of what happened to five guys from Miami, "in case he sneaks out to the Golden Dome."

Dukakis ordered a sandwich.

"Pastrami on a bulky roll, hold the pickle," Conley read from her notes as we hiked back to the State House. "$2.75. That's a lot of money, isn't it?"

"Ed King used to have lobster," I said. "What did he leave for a tip?"

"I couldn't see, but the counterman gave him the finger as he went out. That must mean something."

"Not necessarily," I cautioned, mindful that five guys from Miami took some things for granted, too.

2:04 p.m. - Held news conference in Executive Council chamber. Read from brown notebook. 65 cents at Paperama. Talked about $10,000 raises for elected public officials. He was for it.

"$10,000!" Conley whispered lest the man from the Herald overhear. "That's very generous!"

"Not necessarily," I said.

"How's that?"

"It ain't his money."

5:17 p.m. - Left State House. Walked to cobbler's shop on Bromfield Street. Went in.

"You take the back door this time," said Conley, "in case he skips off to Locke-Ober."

Retrieved pair of black shoes, size 9 1/2 double E. Newly heeled. Cost of repairs: $3.

"$125 at least," said Conley. "Guccis?"

"$9.95 at Building 19," I said. "I have a pair just like them."

5:48 p.m. - Caught subway. Blue Line. Wrong way. Train doesn't go to Brookline. Through tunnel to East Boston. Got off at station called "Airport." Caught shuttle bus No. 22. No charge. Duke smiled.

"First time today," Conley wrote in her notes.

Rode shuttle to deserted corner of airport. Plane looks vaguely familiar. Sign says: "Fly DC3. One way to Des Moines. Deliver package. Discount." Took package. Boarded plane. As door closes, voice says: "Hi. I'm Donna, your stewardess."

End surveillance. Writing story. Hope Boss knows what to say when New York Times and networks call.

Don't denigrate those calling for more electricity

The readers write

To the Editor:

Gerard Londergan's letter of May 7 states that New England consumers are being fleeced because several utility and non-utility executives have pointed out that the region needs additional generating capacity to preclude electricity shortages. Well then, the New England governors and their staffs must be out to get us too because their Plan for Meeting New England Electricity needs, adopted in December 1986, reaches the same conclusion — that constructive action is needed to ensure adequate electricity for the future.

Of course, there is another explanation: that all those governors and industry executives are responsibly concerned because they are well informed and that Mr. Londergan's position of vantage on the Hull Municipal Light Board hasn't really provided him with a greater depth of understanding than the analysis by government and industry. Mr. Londergan denigrates several of these executives.

When the reliability of New England's electricity supply system has been degraded because of inaction and obstructionism, sufficient for the public to become aroused, who will be the first to criticize the inaction that caused the inadequacy? Why, the same posturing politicians who discouraged constructive action by the utilities. And, of course, they will propose moving in and taking over direction of the utilities, so that we can get on with the delayed generating plant construction!

"I tell them you get it through contact," he says, "and that generally seems to be satisfying them."

The materials coming to the schools now are stressing that abstinence — no sex at all — is the only safe way to prevent the relentlessly fatal disease. A package of material expected to be released soon by the state Department of Education, which worked on the poject for about a year with the Department of Public Health, will also be stressing abstinence.

The state's package, essentially a curriculum guide, may be designed for students as young as the junior high level, but not elementary school. Superintendents are expected to get a look at it next week.

". . . some school systems have never said the word 'sex' anywhere, ever."

– Tim Dunn, state Dept. of Education

Only 70 of the 400 students at Cohasset High School are getting formally educated about AIDS in school.

At least one local health educator, Mike Gill, of the Cohasset schools, who doubles as president of the Massachusetts School Health Association, expects that by fall it will be mandated that AIDS education be put in place, at least in the higher grades.

In the meantime, he says, parents and teachers will decide just what should be taught and to whom.

There is indeed a sense of urgency about it all. A survey of 860 teenagers across the state found that 70 percent are sexually active. The survey, by Lee Strunin and Ralph Hingson of the Boston University School of Public Health, also found that many harbored misconceptions about AIDS.

Strunin and Hingson learned that 28 percent of those polled either believed or did not know if one could get AIDS from a toilet seat; 66 percent believed or did not know the answer to the question, can AIDS be transmitted through kissing?; another 46 percent felt one could get AIDS from sharing eating utensils.

Strunin is calling for schools to take a more active role in teaching students about AIDS. "We feel," she says, "there is a clear need for AIDS education."

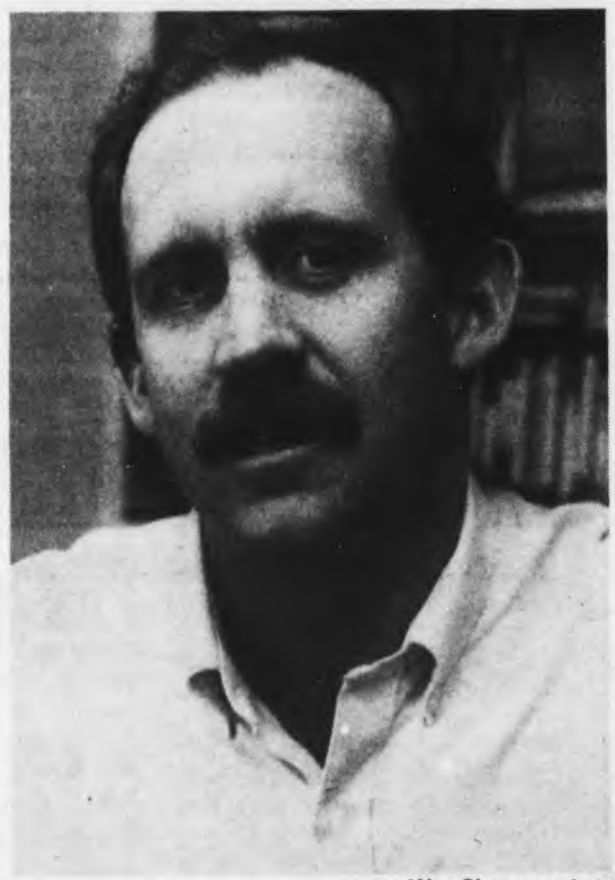
But talking frankly about sex in the school is something many aren't ready for. Never mind talking about homosexual activity.

"Sex education is always sensitive," says James Case, the associate commissioner of curriculum and instruction for the state Department of Education, "and sex education that must deal this specifically with the sexual act and prevention of AIDS is even more sensitive."

Adds the department's Tim Dunn, who works in the field of school counseling services, "There are obviously some school systems that have never said the word 'sex' anywhere, ever."

Those who favor a liberal approach to sex and AIDS education may take solace in a program started in the Stratford and Bridgeport, Connecticut schools after a survey found misconceptions similar to those discovered by B.U.

There, only 37 percent of the students realized that AIDS could be contracted by having sex with an intravenous drug user who looks healthy. Still, about three of four students said they want to know more about AIDS; 50 percent said they wanted it taught at school.



With data like this, public health officials started an AIDS education program in the high schools of those two districts. The furor, people involved in the project said, started in the community before the program began. Then, it abated.

"School systems are naturally reluctant to talk about these issues," said Dr. Lyle Petersen, a federal Centers for Disease Control epidermiologist who helped put the study and program together, "but, after it happens, there's very little uproar."

It seems that South Shore towns are looking toward the state-recommended curriculum with more anxiety now than they may have once a program is in place.

But the state seems to be stopping short of recommending AIDS education in the elementary grades,

Mike Gill, Cohasset school health coordinator, expects AIDS education soon to be mandated.

Between classes at Cohasset High: surveys show a clear need to teach students about AIDS.

Marital blood test survives

A Whitman Republican's bid to mandate AIDS testing for all Massachusetts couples who want to get married has, like the Phoenix, risen from the ashes after two defeats.

State Sen. Edward Kirby's bill was kept alive in the Senate last week after being scuttled by 22-16 and 20-18 votes.

Kirby credits the measure's latest reincarnation with some fancy parliamentary maneuvering that managed to deflect persistent points of order by the opposition.

"They(the opponents) were not suspecting I had another arrow in my quiver," says Kirby.

The bill would require blood tests for AIDS for any couple wishing to get married in the state. Results of the test, says Kirby, would be known only to the couple. Even if one partner fails the test, he adds, the couple still could get married.

The measure still faces a test in the House.

What do the kids know?

despite questions of the youngsters. They may have to learn from the media which is maligned by educators for producing a sensationalistic, inaccurate picture.

As Karen Mazza, an assistant superintendent for kindergarten through eighth grade in the Silver Lake Regional and Union No. 131 school districts, says, "At the present time, it's a subject we feel is more age appropriate at the secondary level. The material is too mature for the younger students."

"Sexuality is such a private issue, and people feel uncomfortable talking about it."

– Kathy Kniepman, Harvard U. Health Services

Indeed, it appeared a few months ago that some of the material may have been too mature for state Public Health and Education department officials to recommend passing on to the school systems.

According to Public Health's Roblewski, there was intense debate by the professionals over whether and where the word "condom" should be used. Now, especially after the surgeon general's frank approach it's been decided the word should be used in the curriculum.

Still, say some critics such as Kathy Kniepman of Harvard University Health Services, the state curriculum proposals are not going to get into precise terminology on how the disease is spread.

And then the state faces the question of whether it is dictating morality to the students. The state Department of Education's James Case is careful about this. He says that a warning not to use IV drugs is one thing; a warning that, if you do, make sure the needle is clean, is another. And none of this is to be construed, he says, as a recommendation to use drugs.

He goes on, "The state is not recommending use of prophylactics per se, itself. It is giving information to the students that says, if you engage in sexual activity, use a condom or risk a deadly disease."

Susan Fontecchio, elected April 6 to the Holbrook school board, seems resigned that frank talk is what's called for. "I'm afraid," she says, "that unfortunately because this is an epidemic, a lot of explicit talk is going to have to take place between teachers and students."

Fontecchio says AIDS education must be part of the curriculum at least by the ninth grade. She adds, "You don't talk about AIDS without talking about sex, and a lot of factions don't want you to talk about sex."

Meanwhile, the U.S. Public Health Service points out that 58 percent of those who've contracted AIDS have died since 1981, a fact not lost on local educators.

Norwell Superintendent Robert Bunnell said AIDS education will certainly be part of the curriculum in the higher grades by next year. Hanover health educator Mary Stagno, a registered nurse, is also urging it be taught at some level in the schools.

"Sexuality is such a private issue," notes Harvard's Kniepmann, "and people feel uncomfortable talking about it."

But with AIDS' inexorable spread to the suburbs and the fact that now it is irreversible, many feel education in depth is needed immediately.

"I think," says Kniepmann, "it's going to be a long time — if ever — before there's any such thing as a cure."

The obligatory Pee Wee Herman column

I first saw Pee Wee Herman two, maybe three years ago on The Tonight Show. A young adult with a wiffle haircut and an impossibly small suit from which dangled long, Ichabod Crane hands and feet, he parodied a children's show host. As an avid watcher of Soupy Sales and Pinkie Lee in the 1950's, I thought he was hilarious.

When he joined Johnny Carson on the couch, he kept in character. He sometimes seemed mentally deficient, at other times clever. His persona was about eleven or twelve, and as some children do, he appeared to be fighting the onslaught of hormones and holding fast to his childhood.

I later saw him on other television shows and enjoyed him immensely. Then, of course, he made a movie, "Pee Wee's Big Adventure." I wondered if the narrow focus of his character could sustain a film.

The movie received extremely mixed reviews. The plot was simple: somebody stole Pee Wee's bicycle and he tries to get it back. This sends him on a bizarre odyssey depicted in a style that Fellini would have developed by working for Walt Disney.

Then, strangely enough, he showed up on Saturday morning television, doing a children's show for children. The only human being amid cartoons and endless pitches for dolls and violence toys, Pee Wee has captured a high rating, with a large minority of his viewers being over eighteen, unheard of for Saturday morning.

The Playhouse has been reviewed everywhere from TV Guide to Vanity Fair. I highly recommend it to playful adults and those interested in what will have strongly influenced the college generation of the year 2000. Locally it may be seen at 10 a.m. on Channel 7.

The thirty minute show contains dozens of isolated bits that loosely relate to a theme: it is someone's birthday, it is raining and Pee Wee is bored, and so on.

While Pee Wee stays at his Playhouse, he is visited by various characters, of all ages and ethnic backgrounds.

There is Captain Carl, a crusty sea captain who reminds me of Peter Falk on Columbo. Miss Yvonne is a refugee from 1956, complete with beehive hairdo. My favorite is the King of Cartoons, an awkward, kindly Black man wearing a crown, whose only function is to hold a projector and announce, "Let the cartoons begin!"

What follows is a small portion of a cartoon from the 1930's or 1940's, the likes of which dominated Saturday mornings when I was a kid. I wish they would show the whole cartoon, but that would take two or three minutes and nothing here extends for more than thirty seconds or so.

The King of Cartoons is introduced by a jazz-trumpet fanfare given by a lady postal carrier.

Besides the visitors to the Playhouse, the residents are also varied and unusual, principally Jhambi, a drag-queen genie with heavy make-up and turban, who grants Pee Wee one wish every show, following an elaborate incantation.

My favorite wish was when Pee Wee said, "I can't think of a good wish today. I wish I knew what to ask for."

Jhambi replied, "Your wish is granted."

Pee Wee said, "I know what to wish for now!"

"Sorry," Jhambi said, "only one wish at a time."

Pee Wee also has a family of little dinosaurs that live in a well-appointed apartment in a hole in his wall, an ant farm in which the residents organize themselves to spell out messages, and a group of hipster dog and cat puppets that talk jive in voices like jazz singers Tom Waits and Ricky Lee Jones.

I am told that kids love the show because Pee Wee talks directly to the viewers and keeps things moving and loud. Adults like it because it has wit and brings back feelings of childhood.

It also shows that adults can still have access to childhood. Pee Wee Herman is actually a veteran actor in his thirties named Paul Reubens. If Reubens can make a career out of acting four (or nine or eleven. Developmentally, Pee Wee is all over the lot) then the audience can indulge also, even if only through watching him.

A recent commentator said Reubens would be in trouble when Pee Wee showed his first wrinkle or grey hair. Nonsense. It is already clear to everyone, even his youngest viewers, that Pee Wee isn't really a kid, but an adult acting like a kid. It is the acting we respond to, not the age of the actor.

Carol Channing has been a giggling young girl for about fifty years. Dizzy Dean was a brash young pitcher well into his sixties; Cary Grant a youthful romantic until the day he died. If the soul is young, the character stays young. Harpo Marx. Red Skelton. Pete Rose.

I'm surprised that Pee Wee's Playhouse hasn't received some adult backlash. Maybe it isn't popular enough yet.

People who see Satan in rock music or monitor Road Runner cartoons counting acts of violence could be distressed at what Pee Wee brings to children.

Adults and children are treated essentially the same. There is no hierarchy according to age, no parents, no families except for the dinosaurs in the walls.

Nobody works, at least not inside the Playhouse. There is no community outside the Playhouse. There is magic and fantasy and probably secular humanism. Homophobes could well be threatened by Jhambi.

When Pee Wee Herman starts being attacked by the keepers of public morality, he'll know he's really made it.

One of the sad processes of growing up is losing the ability to remember childhood or to act, when appropriate, from childhood impulses.

Psychology tells us that most of our difficulties stem from early childhood trauma, that we revert to childhood behaviors in moments of fear and stress.

Why not, then, also revert to childhood in moments of joy and wonder? Too many of us are old inside far before wrinkles and grey hair appear.

Come to Pee Wee's Playhouse where everybody joins together in a moment of inspired silliness. The so-called real world will come back to us soon enough.

Douglas Kosko: Paper Lion

By Thelma O'Brien

Is there no end to innovation in this world? Or shoestrings?

Who would have thought someone could actually make a living out of publishing a little sort of pamphlet that is meant to be read by lunch–time customers?

And make a living is what Douglas Kosko says he does with Boston Lunch Times and South Shore Lunch Times, two little newspapers he publishes and distributes to 45 restaurants in Boston and four towns south of Boston.

Lunch Time Publications is apparently an idea whose time has arrived.

Kosko, 33, is tied to the operation by a world class shoestring.

"Could he come to the Mariner office for an interview?"

"No one in the company has a car."

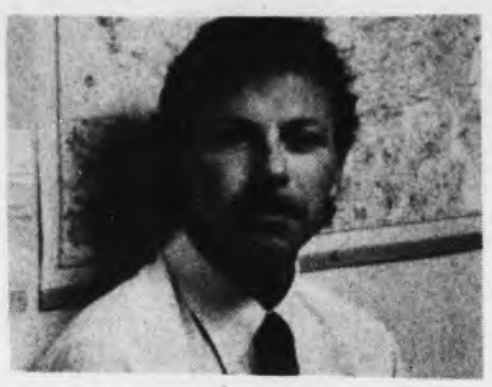
Kosko's office, in the Shawmut Bank building in downtown Quincy, is about as big as his magazines, which he calls the smallest newspapers in Boston and on the South Shore. They're 8 1/2 by 11, folded in half.

He lives in a basement apartment "just a few houses behind the bank," he said.

Lunch Time Publications, LTD, started as BLT, or Boston Lunch Times in October 1986. The volume 1, number 1 front page featured a big drawing of the sandwich of the same name, a letter from the publisher and some American history trivia information.

The publisher told his readers BLT was to provide "information that is useful, interesting, and entertaining, and brief enough to digest in a short time."

South Shore Lunch Times began in February.



The company uses a brown bag for an envelope.

It's all sort of strange how LTD came about.

Kosko reported that he was born in Baltimore, MD and moved as a youngster to Pompano Beach, Florida, where his father was a general contractor.

He says he has a really bad memory for dates. He had himself graduating from Pompano Beach High School at 22, joining the navy the next year and also spending five years in Illinois in between high school and his military service.

Meanwhile, after Illinois and the Navy, which included "a year in the Mediterranean," Kosko found himself back in Florida where he began a career as a commercial fisherman after he got tired of being a marble installer.

Lunch with Douglas Kosko means light reading.

Several years and seafood companies later, Kosko sailed up the Atlantic coast with his final fishing employer and opted to hang out in Boston, mainly at Jimbo's down by the water.

"In August last year I met this printer at Jimbo's Seafood Shanty and I told him about my idea to do a tabletop publication," Kosko said.

"Wait a minute. What idea to do a tabletop publication?"

"I've always had this idea of doing a magazine for restaurant guests."

"Wait a minute. People want to be spacemen and movie stars but lunchtime magazine publishers?"

"When I was a kid I built a printing press."

"But..."

"Also, being a fisherman you're away from home a lot and you eat alone. You always wish you had something to read."

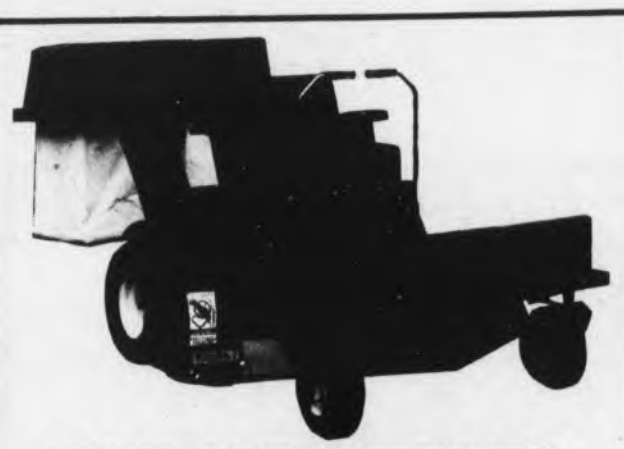
Kosko worked out a plan with his publishing friend from Jimbo's and the rest is, if not history at least current events.

The Boston edition has been published monthly since October and SSLT since February. May's editions will be eight pages instead of four and carry 21 ads rather than nine.

The company was financed by a bank loan and "some venture capital."

"Are you a public company?"

"No, it's just these engineers downstairs invested some money. It was an inter-company transaction."



Kosko said the company issued 5,000 shares of stock which are owned by three entities, himself, the art director and the engineer. Kosko owns the largest number of stocks.

Ads are about 1 1/2 by 2 1/2 inches and they cost $186 a month.

Since the second edition of BLT the publications have carried an "In God We Trust" slogan on the front page, an addition Kosko made to acknowledge "God's help in this business.

"I am a Christian. I belong to the Christian Businessmen's Association of my church (Quincy Central Baptist) and I try to apply Christian principles to business."

Kosko hopes to start two more regional Lunch Time newspapers, one for the North Shore and the other for New England.

Playful Walk; variety in Boston

By Daniel M. Kimmel

Walk Like A Man, directed by Melvin Frank, written by Robert Klane. With Howie Mandel, Christopher Lloyd, Cloris Leachman, Colleen Camp, Amy Steel. Rated PG. At area theaters.

A roundup of the Boston art film scene.

If you can imagine Jerry Lewis in a remake of The Wild Child, you have a good idea of what Walk Like a Man is like. This very silly comedy is extremely juvenile, but like Lewis's films, it's likely to have its audience.

Bobo Shand (Howie Mandel) was lost as an infant in the mountains where his father made the family fortune prospecting for gold. Raised by wolves, he is discovered twenty-eight years later by Penny (Amy Steel), an environmentalist studying wolf behavior.

Bobo, it turns out, is the heir to the remaining $30 million of the Shand family fortune, money that his wastrel brother Reggie (Christopher Lloyd) desperately needs to clear up his debts and continue his spendthrift ways. So the stage is set for a battle of wills between the sinister Reggie and Bobo, the dog-boy.

The plot complications are fairly predictable with Reggie first trying to kill Bobo and finally trying to have him committed. Penny reenters the story when a sleazy attorney convinces Reggie that if Bobo can be humanized enough to be able to sign his name, he would be able to sign his fortune over to Reggie. Besides teaching Bobo to write, she also provides the love interest.

Mandel is delightfully silly as Bobo, and is used to much better effect than in last summer's horrendous A Fine Mess. Lloyd plays Reggie as a cartoon version of an evil brother, right down to the cigarette holder clamped in his teeth. Given the overall nature of the film, Mandel and Lloyd's performances are right in step.

Director Melvin Frank — whose career includes Danny Kaye movies and the musical Li'l Abner — doesn't want us to take Walk Like a Man too seriously. If it's not Touch of Class (also a Frank film), neither does it have the pretensions of another film about an innocent learning about the world, the current Making Mr. Right.

Walk Like a Man is playful, and Frank makes even his most caricatured characters somewhat sympathetic. Mother Shand (Cloris Leachman) is clearly a batty old lady who wants to give all her money away to cats, and yet she shows genuine motherly affection for Bobo. Likewise, Reggie's wife (Colleen Camp) is played broadly as a lush who's plastered before breakfast, but she's always permitted to retain her self-esteem. We may laugh at these people but they're just as likely to laugh back.

If Walk Like a Man is an easily forgettable comedy, still it does point to a grievous flaw of our movie rating system. If the uproar over films like 9 and 1/2 Weeks and Angel Heart was about how producers try to avoid an X rating, Walk Like a Man makes it obvious they're trying to avoid the equally dreaded G.

There's an extended sequence in a toy store where Bobo enters into a conversation with a Teddy Ruxpin doll that typifies the sort of childlike innocence of the movie. Children should be able to overlook the film's flaws and get caught up in Bobo's dilemma.

Yet, in an attempt to escape the perceived stigma of being called "a children's film," Walk Like a Man adds some gratuitous swearing (the "S" word, as they say in the public prints) and the film gets its PG. When the rating system convinces producers that they can't afford to be too outrageous or too innocent, it's time to rethink the logic of the system.

The Art Film Scene

If you're going to make the trip into Boston for a movie, chances are it's going to be for some specialty film that's unlikely ever to be playing at a theater near you unless you wait until it's released on videocassette. Here's a quick tour of what's in town at the moment:

• Prick Up Your Ears is the new film by director Stephen Frears, who did My Beautiful Laundrette. It's the true story of British playwright Joe Orton, who was killed by his gay lover in 1967. Gary Oldman, who startled audiences with his larger than life Sid Vicious in Sid and Nancy, scores again as Orton, while Vanessa Redgrave nearly steals the picture as Orton's agent. It goes without saying that this is not a film for every taste, but discerning moviegoers will want to have a look.

• Gothic won't be for every taste either. Ken Russell has fashioned a bizarre horror film set at a 19th century retreat where the poets Byron and Shelley play games along with Shelley's mistress, who was to go on to write Frankenstein. The nightmarish imagery, featuring everything from rats and leeches to dead babies, grabs your attention with it grotesqueness, but there isn't much of a story to hang it on. Even fans of the director will find this tough going.

• A man sitting at a desk doesn't seem like a very interesting premise for a movie, but did two guys having dinner (My Dinner with Andre) sound any better before you saw it? Swimming to Cambodia consists of Spaulding Gray's monologue that revolves around his being cast in a bit part in the film The Killing Fields. Along the way Gray talks not only about the odd business of moviemaking, but about both the pleasures and horrors he encountered in Southeast Asia. Directed by Jonathan Demme (who did another concert film, Stop Making Sense, with the Talking Heads) it plays like that rare evening with someone who talks and talks, and yet always has something interesting to say.

• It's easy to see why everyone is so impressed with Hollywood Shuffle, Robert Townsend's comedy about a black actor trying to make it. Literally shot on a shoestring (he used his credit cards when the money ran out) it has surprising polish and wit. What it doesn't have is someone telling writer-director-star Townsend when enough is enough. A parody of Siskel and Ebert (called Sneakin' into the Movies) is funny, but not for four full reviews. Townsend's a funny guy, and if this picture gets him his shot, more power to him, but it doesn't make this film any better.

• Beyond Therapy is another one of Robert Altman's chamber pieces, and his best film since Come Back to the Five and Dime, Jimmy Dean, Jimmy Dean. Here Jeff Goldblum meets Julie Hagerty through the personal ads in "New York Magazine" and invites her to come meet his male live-in lover. Glenda Jackson and Tom Conti are their therapists, with problems of their own. As the farcical situations play themselves out you think you've noticed obvious errors (like Conti's bogus Italian accent, or the European look to the New York streets) only to find that Altman is two steps ahead of you. This one is lots of fun.

The Dragon's Dungeon

By Claire McDonough

Memories of drives gone by

"You know," the Dragon told me, "you tend to live in the past a great deal. More, perhaps, than is absolutely healthy."

I was indignant. "I do not. And I don't have the time to discuss it right now. I should be back around 10:30 or so."

"And you're going where?"

I switched from indignant to patient. "This is Thursday night. You know I always drive the kids to wrestling on Thursday night."

He sighed. "Oh well. Mental Health never was one of your strengths anyway. I know it's Thursday. But we don't have anyone on the wrestling team any more. Our kids are grown. We don't even have anyone in school."

I started to panic. "What do you mean no one in school? When you have nine kids, you always have at least one in school. It's a given.

"Oh," I continued hastily, "I'll give you wrestling. You have a point there. Skip and Jason are both out of high school, so I don't have to pick up the wrestling team.

"But what about football? And I know they're all too big for Little League, but someone must be playing baseball or softball. And soccer. We always have someone on a soccer team. Sometimes several kids on different soccer teams. I may have trouble fitting everyone in my new car. Perhaps you'd better bring your car, too."

He felt my forehead. "Maybe you'd better lie down for a while."

"I'd love to," I admitted. "But I'm afraid I'd miss someone's dance recital. And I hope Breida makes it to her basketball game."

"You're putting me on," he objected. "You know Breida's working in California."

"Then she'll probably be late. Oh, I know really. It's just that I sort of miss driving the teams around. When I had to do it, I complained. But now that it's over, it sort of leaves a void. I guess when you get right down to it, a mother's function is to deliver children. Obstetrically once, then by car for ever after."

The Dragon shook his head. "Get real. There are many enjoyable things about having children. Driving them places is not one of them.

"Remember the time you and some other people took Pat's Cub Scout Troop to the airport? You told me the only thing there that interested them was a candy machine. And Patrick threw up on the way back."

I nodded. "He got in some kind of a game with the other kids, and he wound up eating 12 candy bars.

"Maybe I wouldn't want that in my new car. But I do miss taking them to games. Perhaps there really are games somewhere I could go to, but they've all been rained out. We certainly haven't had ideal soccer weather lately."

"You're hopeless," he told me. "Anyway, we're going to Maureen's jujitsu demonstration next week."

"It's not the same once they're married. I could call McNamara. Perhaps the Red Sox need rides to some of their games. I'd call K.C. Jones or Brian Holloway, but I know none of their guys would fit in my car."

"That does it." The Dragon sat me down in a chair and looked at me sternly. "You're overdue for a dose of reality therapy. Your memories are many, many years old, and as the song tells us, 'time has re-written every line.'

"You remember happy faces pressed against the windows of the car. You forget those smiling faces were making unflattering remarks about the policeman in the car behind yours.

"You remember taking them to drive-in restaurants. You forget the time you were miles from home and Jay locked the keys in the trunk.

"You remember that they sang while you drove along the highway. You forget the headache you had by the time they got to '66 bottles of beer on the wall...'

"You remember taking them to the beach. You forget the time one of them pointed to a man in a bathing suit and announced loudly, 'Look Ma. That man's fatter than Jackie Gleason.'

"If I remember correctly, you told the offending child, 'Here, honey. Let's see if you can't fit this whole banana in your mouth at one time.'"

He felt my head again. "Feeling better?"

I gulped, then nodded. "Thanks," I told him. "I needed that."

On monogamy, the media and men's souls

Majesty would not, she said, "make windows into men's souls."

The historical effect of Elizabeth's words were no less than this. She papered over the differences between Protestants and Catholics, she created an enduring Anglican/Episcopal church that 400 years later can still produce a Desmond Tutu on a continent Elizabeth despite her prodigious intellect barely knew of, and she set the tone for English toleration which was to be enshrined in the First Amendment of the American Constitution separating church and state.

Not to overstate her modernity, for with the Act of Uniformity of 1559, Elizabeth legally established the Protestant prayer book — although she saw to it that it contained alterations designed to be acceptable to Catholics. Elizabeth's purpose in reestablishing the Protestant Church was the unity of England and an end to sectarian strife. So long as religious ardor did not threaten the state, she followed her personal predilection of making "no windows into men's souls."

It was Elizabeth's papering over of Protestant-Catholic differences that produced, with the tragic exception of Ireland, sectarian peace and the high-church/low-church tradition in much of the English-speaking world.

To this day "high-church Episcopal" observes Catholic ritual in most matters, while "low-church Episcopal" is an umbrella big enough for deists, secular humanists, and most anyone else who wants to come calling of a Sunday morning. As in Elizabeth's day, the prayer book itself is not different — just the devotional emphasis.

Whatever our faith, I think that when the marriages of our friends and loved ones fail we do well to follow Elizabeth's disdain for making windows into men's and women's souls. It is awfully easy to conjure a "window," to condemn a supposed adulterer or to revile the party that seems to be at fault. But no man or woman can ever know what really goes on in private in a marriage, and when the most satisfactory resolution to the problem of existence tragically aborts, our friends need our help, not our guesses as to fault.

I have been kicking around politics as well as a classroom as well as a newspaper office as well as a trucking firm for quite a few years now, and I have to report to you that the sexual habits of politicians strike me as categorically different from publishers, pedants, and pedal pushers. It seems to me politicians fall into at least five distinct sexual types.

Type A is the politician with so much rivalrous and cathexic energy that sexual conquests are part and parcel of the quest for office. Type A wants your vote, and if you are female he wants you on your back for about as long as he posed for that group shot with the Rotary Club. He doesn't mean any harm by the persistent shallowness of his pursuit, he's just a compulsive go-getter and that's all there is to it.

Type B is much like Type A except that he has learned to separate a bit. He goes after votes indiscriminately, but his affairs, while secondary in his heart and mind to the pursuit of office, are used as a retreat from the political grind rather than an extension of it as in the case of Type A.

Type C is asexual. A man's man, he tells a good dirty joke but one senses he doesn't practice dirty jokes. His cathexic energy is entirely wrapped up in politics, legislation, and collegiality. The late Sam Rayburn and, as I would surmise, Massachusetts House Speaker George Keverian, fall in this category.

Type D is homosexual. He leads a dual life to the extent that he has to and a candid life to the extent he is able to. This is the life Cong. Studds lived until circumstances forced him to "come out." His former "closeted" life is by no means unique among our politicians including some serving the 18 communities where Politicus circulates.

Type E is disgustingly normal. Type E functions like a Mafia chieftain in the sense that his activities by day seemingly have no bearing on his home life by night. By day he may be liberal, conservative, bombastic, or bunkum-brained, but when he comes home at night he is a family man of such normality that were his lifestyle to get a foothold on Beacon or Capitol Hills the National Enquirer and its clone The Miami Herald would go out of business. A lot of Irish Catholic politicians I have known fall in this category.

Now to my point. Somewhere amid the foregoing discourse and bad poetry I have described Gary Hart, candidate for President of the United States. I have described him as blessed with a happy marriage or cursed with an unhappy one. I have described him as a political/sexual lothario whose escapades most army privates outgrow by the time they make Pfc., or I have described him as a man who confines his love-making to the woman he married.

But you don't know which Gary Hart I have described, I don't know which Gary Hart I have described, and The Miami Herald doesn't know which Gary Hart I have described. Yet we all now think we have a window into Gary Hart's soul, and that's bull.

I suppose for some it is a legitimate issue if Gary Hart, unlike the utterly sexually rectitudinous Richard Nixon, can't keep his fly zipped up when he should. Others may wonder if a man who flirts with personal danger will flirt with conflagrational danger as President. But in my view there is not a soul among us whose reputation would be intact should a bunch of jackasses masquerading as journalists stake out our homes in a putrid attempt to partly draw the curtains to the windows of our souls.

The only Gary Hart issue here is if he shall have lied in response to the insinuations of his stalkers, in which case he becomes John Profumo and is finished as a potential President. The larger issue is The Miami Herald's violation of an historic English-American proscription that was there at the conception of our liberties. If these alleged men get away with what they have done, in the next century we will be choosing our Presidents among fictional figures like Mickey Mouse and Ronald McDonald — not among men and women of flesh and blood.

From one journalist (I of a certain medieval bent) to another, the fitting dessert I'd recommend for the furtive cowards who hid in the shadows around Hart's house until the wind-chill factor rose is castration. Nor am I a big fan of anaesthesia for those who disgrace my craft. But alas, emasculation would constitute an oxymoron — not even Einstein ever devised a way of depriving scoundrels of what they don't have.

On Sports

by Tom Henshaw

Something that doesn't matter

I don't suppose many of you have seen the May-June edition of the Columbia Journalism Review.

I wouldn't have either if a colleague hadn't brought a copy to the office to show me a cover story entitled "The Art of Sportswriting," by a fellow named Peter Andrews.

The description of Andrews, not as a sportswriter, but as "a writer with a long-standing interest in sports" signalled to me that the article was worth reading.

There is nothing duller or more pompous than a modern sportswriter declaiming on his craft, unless it's Howard Cosell lecturing on the English language.

I also knew the article would be worth reading when Andrews wrote: "The most wonderful thing about sports is that it allows us to care passionately about something that doesn't matter."

Maybe that's part of what is wrong with sports today. We still care passionately but we have lost the balancing sense that it really doesn't matter.

But then yesterday's athletes, fans and writers were not confronted with basketball players dying of drug overdoses and left fielders earning $2,412,500 a year.

Death and $2 million. Those are things that matter.

In the old days, the thing that mattered from the real world and impinged on sports was drink and it was treated as something that didn't matter. Perhaps, in retrospect, that was wrong but that's the way it was.

There was once an outfielder named Paul Waner who appeared in 2,549 major league games, many of them while carrying a full load from the previous evening.

"I see three baseballs coming at me," he confided in a sportswriter once. "I pick the middle one and swing as hard as I can."

He batted .333 lifetime so it's reasonable to assume that the middle one was the right one at least one time in three.

Andrews recalls an oldtime third baseman for the New York Giants (yes, there was such a team) named Hank Thompson who frequently patrolled what used to be called "the hot corner" in an alcoholic haze,

"I had always supposed it was simply Thompson's way to scoop up a grounder along with the bag and whatever bits of grass and gravel were in the area and hurl the entire package across the diamond, leaving the first baseman to sort it out as best he could," wrote Andrews.

Sportswriters, too, were aware that it didn't really matter.

The big one in Boston when I was growing up was Dave Egan of the Boston Record (yes, there was one of those, too).

The Boston Braves (yes, there was, etc.) were in town then, a particularly inept group that was managed by Casey Stengel. When Stengel was hit by a cab and put out of action with a broken leg, Egan nominated the cabbie as the man who did the most for Boston baseball that year.

My favorite, though, was John (Bud) Gillooly of the Boston American (yes, there was, etc.), which was owned by William Randolph Hearst, the old man himself.

Bud was in Quebec City one time covering some long-forgotten sporting event and he found himself coming up short by $50 on his expense account.

He put his not inconsiderable creative writing talents to work and came up with this line that is still spoken of in awe where old sportswriters gather:

"$50 - Limousine to the shrine of Ste. Anne de Beaupre to pray for the continued success of the Hearst newspapers in Boston."

No editor, auditor, treasurer or even publisher would touch that one.

Out in Chicago, they still speak of an Associated Press sportswriter named Charlie Dunkley, who viewed life much in the manner of a Waner or a Thompson.

Once Dunkley was on a radio round table show with several other sportswriters. They were asked to recount their greatest moments in sport. The others spoke feelingly of a World Series game, a Rose Bowl, a Kentucky Derby. But not Dunkley.

"It was a Newport to Bermuda yacht race," he said. "They were bringing the booze on the press boat. The bag broke and the bottles fell to the deck. And do you know not one of those bottles broke. That was my greatest moment in sport."

Yes, Peter Andrews, there were those who cared passionately but also knew it didn't really matter.

Preparing for company

It's been quite some time since this column was launched and in that time, I think we've all discovered some fabulous cooks in and around where we live. Where all the TV dinner addicts are hiding, I don't know, but it's apparent there are still plenty of women who take pleasure in cooking. Men, too, I might add.

Those of you who care enough to whip up home-baked goodies and enjoy preparing favorite dishes for your family have shared these recipes with us and again I urge our new readers to join in the fun, for that's what this column is all about.

This is a particularly good time of the year to swap recipes, for as anyone knows who lives within range of the ocean, warm weather brings lots of company our way. Having a casserole ready and waiting in the freezer gives the hostess time to be with her guests, rather than slaving over the proverbial hot stove. Ginny Driscoll has sent in this casserole which serves eight and is called. . .

SOUR CREAM CHICKEN BAKE

6 or 8 chicken breasts (boned & skinned)
1 pint sour cream
2 T ea. vinegar & Worcestershire sauce
1 tsp. ea. celery & onion salt
½ c. dry seasoned stuffing mix which has been put through blender.

Dip chicken in mixture of sour cream and next four ingredients. Layer chicken in 1½ qt. buttered casserole and sprinkle with dry stuffing mix. Dot with butter. Bake 1 hour at 350 uncovered.

Viewing our little world through gleaming windows framed by freshly laundered curtains makes spring cleaning seem almost worthwhile. Cleaning drawers and closets is rainy-day drudgery, chores we could gladly do without. However, once in a while life has its little rewards, as when I unearthed a recipe I had tucked away and forgotten about. It dates back to 1979 when I was invited to attend a homemaker's group which was composed of young mothers who met each week in each other's homes to knit, sew, have workshops and sometimes speakers.

I came away with this recipe for a biscuit mix which you store in glass jars or tin cans, close tightly and whenever you want hot biscuits or muffins, with a few little additions, you're all set. Here's the basic recipe for...

BISCUIT MIX

8 c. sifted all-purpose flour
1 c. dry milk
1/4 c. baking powder
3 tsp. salt
1 c. shortening or lard

Sift dry ingredients together 3 times. Cut or rub in fat until consistency of cornmeal. Mix lightly and store. To make 12 biscuits, measure out 2 c. of mix and add 2/3 c. of fluid milk or water. Combine lightly with fork. Turn onto lightly floured board. Pat out or knead 15 strokes. Roll ½" thick and cut. Bake on greased sheet in 450 oven for 10 to 12 min.

If you want to surprise your family with hot muffins for breakfast, or if someone drops in for coffee, you just take:

2 c. biscuit mix
2 T sugar
2/3 c. fluid milk or water
2 T salad oil
1 egg

Add sugar to mix. Add combined milk and beaten egg. Add to mix. Stir only 'til flour is just moistened —about 15 strokes — after the first five strokes, add oil. Fill greased muffin tins 2/3 full. Bake in a 425 degree oven for approx. 20 min. You can add blueberries, raisins, nuts, etc.

How to get out of the kitchen and into the great outdoors these magical spring days is top priority as wielding a rake becomes far more appealing than rattling pans. Early morning is a good time to plan the evening meal; a time to prepare the veggies and perhaps make a batch of Becky Hayes'

COCONUT-ALMOND BUTTER COOKIES

1 c. unsalted butter or margarine
1 1/4 c. sifted powdered sugar
1 c. flaked coconut
1/2 tsp. almond extract
2 c. all-purpose flour
3/4 c. ground or finely chopped blanched almonds
1/4 tsp. ground cinnamon

Cream butter and 1 c. powdered sugar in large bowl 'til fluffy. Add coconut and extract. Gradually mix in flour and nuts. Shape dough into 1" balls. Bake on ungreased cookie sheet in 325 oven 15 to 17 min. Place on rack. Combine remaining sugar and cinnamon. Sprinkle over warm cookies. Makes 5½ to 6 dozen.

Singles Lifeline

By Mark Snyder

Snyder visits the Big Apple

The call came in on Friday. It was from the staff of legendary daytime TV personality Phil Donahue. Sue Precher, the show's associate producer, wanted to know if I'd like to be a guest on the show, Thursday, May 7. I had to think carefully about this . . . did I want a free trip to New York? Did I want national publicity for myself and Singles Lifeline? In a matter of seconds, I told Sue, "Yes, I'd love to be part of the show."

On Wednesday, May 6th, my friend Fran took a very nervous South Look columnist to Logan Airport for the Eastern Shuttle flight to New York. I sat in the front row, (no, Bob Uekker wasn't in sight). The flight attendants made idle chatter. One glanced at me and asked me if I was scared of flying. I told her no, that I travel all the time. She told me I had the look of terror on my face. I told her I was going on Donahue the next day. She smiled and said, "I'd be terrified, too!"

The plane landed and now it was time to find a cab. Cabbies out-jockied each other to lure the tourists into their cabs. I finally sat in a shared cab with a loud-mouthed man and smelly woman. The ride ended at the doorstep of the magnificient Drake Hotel in Manhattan. I remembered now where I'd heard of it . . . an announcer says "Guests of Donahue stay at the luxurious Drake Hotel" during every show.

I dined like the millionaires dined. The show had authorized me to spend up to fifty dollars on dinner. After consuming jumbo shrimps, lobster bisque, and a scallop dish, the check (with tip) came to $51.97. Donahue didn't quibble about the extra couple of dollars.

I went to bed early, figuring to get a good nights sleep to minimize the bags under my eyes. Unfortunately, Manhattan cabbies enjoy beeping their horns at all hours of the night. I got in a good two hours of sleep and had nightmares of myself stammering in front of a national audience. another nightmare had an army of ex-girlfriends calling in on the show.

The limo was to pick me up at 2:45 p.m. It was one o'clock and I decided to take a nap and catch some much-needed winks. I showered and stretched out on the bed. As I was sleeping, I felt that strange uneasiness you feel when someone stares at you. I looked up and there was a maid staring at my naked body. She smiled, spoke something in Spanish, and left. I wondered if I'd get the same feeling when the audience stared at me.

The limo snatched me up and dropped me off at 30 Rockerfeller Center, the home of NBC. I walked through the halls, noticing pictures of Bill Cosby, and the cast of "Saturday Night Live," which was rehearsing only a few feet from me. There were four guests for the show (including me) and we were led to "the green room." There was food and drink, and plenty of time to get even more nervous.

At 3:55 p.m., (five minutes to air time), Phil Donahue walked into the room. Looking a lot thinner than I had pictured him, he pressed the flesh with guests and told us how great the show would be.

At two minutes to air time, Phil walks into a studio packed with over 200 people! We march in after him, like puppies on a leash. The audience goes wild. My nerves are now at a fever pitch. The show is counting down . . . 10-9-8-7-6-5-4-3-2-1. . . . .

Next Week: The show and its aftermath.

Reading Fare program

In Hingham students probably read as much as any students. Local educators want that trend to continue, and they hope that parents will support their efforts.

Plymouth River teachers Mary Dale and Mary Matthews have developed a year-long project that entices students to read, and encourages parents' involvement and cooperation.

Reading Fare is the program they created for the entire town, based on their research and feedback they received from a reading program held last year.

Dr. Dale D. Johnson

To enhance this program, May 14 at 7:30 p.m. at Plymouth River School, internationally-renowned educator and researcher Dr. Dale D. Johnson, will talk to parents about "Reading Comprehension: Your Role as a Parent."

Dr. Johnson is currently a professor at Boston University and is director of the Instructional Research and Development Institute in Boston.

He is the author of nine books, including many articles and reviews concerning reading. He is an internationally-renowned expert in the field of reading, and emphasizes the need for parents' involvement in stimulating this interest in their children.

Musings

By John H. Cutler

• The Pacific Ocean washes the shores of 5 continents. Can you name 3 of the continents? Answer below.

• Why do so many proverbs contradict each other? For example: Out of sight, out of mind; and absence makes the heart grow fonder. Many hands make light work and too many cooks spoil the broth.

• One sign of middle age is wanting to see how long your car will last instead of how fast it will go.

• During the Writer's Conference at Breadloaf in 1947 the late John Ciardi, a poet who could write a sonnet in 12 minutes, said "cellar door" was the most euphonious phrase in the English language.

• The pen is mightier than the pencil.

• I disagree with what you say, but I will defend to the death your right to tell such lies. Of course Voltaire's remark made more sense: "I may disagree with what you say, but I shall defend unto the death your right to say it."

• Answer to quiz: The Pacific Ocean washes the shores of North and South American, Asia, Australia and Antarctica.

• About 16 centuries ago St. Jerome wrote: "If there is but little water in the stream it is the fault not of the channel, but of the source."

• A reader corrects me. The bumper sticker reads: "Lead me not into temptation. I already know the way."

• Reform always comes from below. No man with 4 aces asks for a new deal.

• Folks wouldn't get divorced for such trivial reasons if they didn't get married for such trivial reasons.

A Guide to Home Buying on the South Shore

'Competitive' is the word when it comes to loans

While prime rates are rising quickly today, there is still mortgage money available for current or would-be homeowners.

The word today in banking and financial institutes is "competitive," and people looking for first and second mortgages or home equity loans are wise to take advantage of the choices around.

Small savings banks, large commercial banks and mortgage corporations are competing for first and second time borrowers. Although each offers its own incentives to lure prospective customers, there are basic guidelines that one can expect to hear from a loan officer.

First mortgages for young couples are still the most difficult, with sometimes mind-boggling costs for down payments and closing expenses.

For most first mortgages, a minimum of five percent is required as a down payment. Some banks demand 20 percent, but most institutes will accept something in between those figures.

A five percent mortgage is the most difficult to obtain, according to Chris Martorana, loan officer with the Farragut Mortgage Corporation. Not only does the lending institute scrutinize the borrower's employment and credit records more closely, but a lower down payment also increases the closing costs, which are usually based on the amount of the loan.

In addition, banks require private mortgage insurance — the first year's premium due before closing the deal — for all mortgages with less than 20 percent down. "If the insurance company doesn't feel that the person can make those payments, the mortgage can be denied," Martorana explained.

Closing costs on a first mortgage can amount to another $4,000 to $5,000, he added. The amount of a closing depends on the number of points, usually one percent of the loan per point which is paid up front, taxes and insurance

Typical homeless person works for low wages

By Bob Tis
Mariner Correspondent

What is a typical homeless person?

Some say, it is a mother of two, working up to 50 hours per week for low wages.

The South Shore Housing Services recently sponsored a seminar on housing homeless families, using state-funded Homeless Assistance Initiatives.

"The problem of the homeless on the South Shore is a real one," said Inga Bernstein, director of South Shore Housing Services.

"Prices have gone up to such an extent that relatively low-paying jobs do not provide enough income for people to afford housing."

One obvious problem on the South Shore is the lack of affordable rental properties. "Young families, the families that would have been buying homes ten years ago, are forced into the rental market because property prices are going way up. Boston is coming closer, this is a very 'hot' real estate market. Condo conversion is also deleting the amount of rental housing. There is really no affordable rental housing for a lot of people on the South Shore, stressed Bernstein.

The typical homeless person was defined by members of South Shore Housing Services not as the stereotypical alcoholic sleeping in the alley but as, say, the mother of two working up to fifty hours a week for low wages.

"Things that are beyond people's control are often the reason that people are found homeless. They are between jobs, a fire or natural disaster of some sort has put them on the street, or a relationship has dissolved and left them without enough income," explained Bernstein.

What South Shore Housing Services was trying to accomplish was to enlighten South Shore renters to the benefits of renting to people receiving state-funded housing assistance.

Through two state-run programs, the state is able to make landlords more comfortable when renting to people who would otherwise not be able to afford the rental unit.

South Shore Housing oversees the Executive Office of Communities and Development's Rental Assistance program on the South Shore.

The program helps low and moderate income tenants pay their full monthly rent on time. Tenants contribute 25 percent of their income toward the rent while South Shore Housing, with funds from the state, pays the difference directly to the property owner.

The guarantees provided to owners through the Rental Assistance Program include:

Rent Guarantees: Once a lease has been signed, the tenant pays 25 percent of his or her income. The Commonwealth, through South Shore Housing, pays the balance of that portion and it is guaranteed.

Protection Against Property Damage: Two months' rent is guaranteed against any property damage by the tenent.

Protection Against Unexpected Vacancy: Up to two months' rent is guaranteed to cover an unexpected vacancy.

Selection of the Tenant: The final selection of a tenant still rests with the property owner.

The Department of Public Welfare also seeks to foster a partnership with property owners and realtors by providing special benefits and support services to property owners who lease units to homeless families currently living in hotels or shelters.

"It is actually quite beneficial to lease to someone with a rental assistance certificate," explains Bernstein, "everything for the owner is guaranteed."

There is a waiting list now and one must sign up to receive assistance from the state. After the person is approved for assistance, which sometimes can take between three to five years from original sign up, he or she must find a rental unit approved by state health codes and by South Shore Housing Services. "This isn't always easy," warns Bernstein. "The lease must be negotiated to a sum that is acceptable to South Shore Housing."

If you have an available apartment or any questions regarding the Housing Assistance Initiatives program you may contact the Department of Public Welfares Housing Search Unit at 1-800-462-1141.

The future of the So. Shore; transportation is the key

By Elaine Allegrini
Mariner Staff

Transportation is the biggest impediment to future growth on the South Shore, according to Plymouth County Development Council Executive Secretary Brooks Kelly.

"It would be nice if the railroad was put on a fast track," Kelly said in assessing the needs of the area for future growth.

The South Shore is considered one of the fastest growing areas in the state with Pembroke, Plymouth and Kingston welcoming the largest number of new residents in recent years. Small business is also moving south but at a slower pace, probably because of the congested roads.

And, there does not appear to be any immediate relief from existing conditions.

"If we ever get the train at least it will be partially resolved," Kelly said. But, hopes of trains rolling down the tracks were dimmed a little last month when the Old Colony Railroad restoration study cut back its plans for the area and eliminated the run to Plymouth.

If the railroad line is restored, plans now call for it to end in Hanson.

Commuters to Boston will see some improvements with the widening of Route 3 from Braintree to Duxbury. But, Kelly predicts continued travel problems for the next 10 years for that same group.

With the planned reconstruction of the Central Artery under the city and construction of the third harbor tunnel, commuters in all directions will be slowed down.

While new home construction continues at a rapid pace, Kelly predicts some slowing as the interest rates increase.

"There's been phenomenal growth since 1981," Kelly said.

"In the next five years, I would see growth continuing, perhaps slowing a little," he predicted. Those predictions reflected his feelings for the entire state, not just Plymouth County or the South Shore. "I'm not sure Massachusetts' economy can continue as strong as it is," Kelly added.

Locally, he sees a "filling in" of Pembroke's industrial area around Routes 139 and 3. "It may not all be built (in that period)," he said, "but it will be committed."

Traffic signals at Routes 53 and 139 will provide some relief for problems of local residents. However, even the planned improvements at Routes 3 and 139 will not necessarily relieve existing concerns in the Oak Street area, Kelly said.

If there's one area where overbuilding is suspected, it is in office buildings, Kelly said. But, he added, if the banks still continue to loan money for construction of office buildings, it must make sense.

The talk of new retail malls in the area has also got him wondering. With plans for large shopping malls in Plymouth and Kingston and smaller strip malls sprouting there and in towns all through the county, Kelly said, "I find it hard to believe this area can support as many malls as these people want to build."

Industrial space is becoming "thin" in the Pembroke/Marshfield area causing some to turn to Hanson, where there is action in that town's industrial park. "We'll clearly run out of space at some point," Kelly noted.

But, he added, "There's still a lot of potential in the Middleboro and Route 495 area."

While many South Shore residents travel north to work, just as many are employed locally, where much of the growth is "home grown," Kelly said.

"Innovative people are starting businesses," he said, pointing to Sippican Company in Marion, which is celebrating its 30th anniversary.

Now employing 750 people, Sippican designs and manufactures instruments for oceanographic research which are used by the U.S. Navy.

Latest employment figures show a state unemployment rate of 3.5 percent. Plymouth County can boast of a low rate of 1.9 percent in Norwell and a high of 9.4 in Wareham.

Kelly said, "There's a lot more employment in this county than we perhaps realize."

With improvements to Route 3 planned, construction of Route 25 underway and easy access to the western part of the county from Route 495, officials see Route 44 as "the missing link to development."

The four-lane highway travels from Middleboro through Carver where it stops. The route from there to Route 3 in Plymouth is but a bumpy, narrow, two-lane country road.

Home equity loans will be popular

Home equity loans, or second mortgages, will continue to be the most popular form of consumer credit during 1987, as they have been for the past two years, according to Anthony R. Medici, president of The Money Store of Stoughton.

"Interest rates will probably take a small dip, but generally will stabilize at current rates for most of 1987," said Medici, a 30-year veteran of the lending industry. "If there is any slowdown in refinancing because of interest rates, it should be offset by increased home equity lending due to tax reform incentives."

According to Medici, the choice of an interest rate plan will depend on the use of the loan. "Lower interest rates at the beginning of 1986 caused a slight increase in the number of people choosing to take advantage of adjustable rate loans. Despite the fact that interest rates may take a small dip in 1987, the choice of interest rate plans will still depend on usage.

"Generally, people tend to choose adjustable rate loans for short-term loans, especially in the case of a first mortgage, if they plan to stay in the home only three to five years. If they plan to stay for more than 10 years, most will choose the fixed-rate option.

Stabilized, sensible interest rates will have other beneficial effects on the economy during 1987, according to Medici.

"A really wonderful thing about lower interest rates and the new tax incentives is that they will enable and encourage more people to realize the American dream of home ownership," he said.

"With lower interest rates, monthly payments become more affordable and, despite the fact that down payments are still a major obstacle for most would-be home buyers, we'll continue to see home sales increase at a steady, healthy pace."

The future of the South Shore; jobs are plentiful

By Kelly Williams
Mariner Correspondent

The job outlook for the South Shore may appear to be bright as 450,000 new jobs are expected to be created by 1995 and the unemployment rate is expected to continue to decline.

But for some business the continued decline in the labor force could spell disaster.

According to a report released by the State Division of Employment Security, (MDES) the labor force in the South Shore is declining along with the unemployment rate.

Private sector employment in the area grew by an additional 4,927 new jobs at a rate of 3.4 percent between 1985 and 1986.

Yet, the labor force in all 22 of the South Coastal Communities decreased from 355,946 in 1984 to 355,271 in February of 1987.

Last December the unemployment rate fell to its lowest rate in the last four years of 2.8 percent. In February, the number of unemployed people fell from 14,419 a year ago to 13,090. Pembroke had the high unemployment rate of 4.3, but was down 0.5 percent from last year's. Pembroke's labor force fell from 6,787 in 1986 to 6,464 in 1987.

Between 1985 and 1986, Braintree's unemployment rate fell from 696 to 675 at a rate of 3.4 percent, but its labor force also dropped from 19,816 to 19,794 during the same period.

Weymouth lost 34 people from its labor force during that time, and its unemployment rate dropped from 1,109 to 1,077.

From 1984 to 1985 the rate of unemployment fell from 4.5 percent to 3.7 percent, a drop of 17.8 percent, but the increase in the labor force was only 0.2 percent.

And from 1985 to 1986 unemployment fell to 3.2 percent, with employment rising only 0.1 percent.

Some of the highest levels of employment during 1986 were in Weymouth and Braintree.

Weymouth experienced a 12.5 percent increase in employment, and Braintree rose 7.8 percent. The highest unemployment rates were felt in Hull with 6.1 percent, and Rockland with 5.2 percent.

According to Researcher Frank Cahill, who prepared the MDES report, this decline in the labor force and the lack of significant increases in employment is causing a labor shortage.

"The pool of labor is decreasing and the number of applicants is shrinking. It's not just here; its happening nationwide and is likely to continue into the future," Cahill said last week.

Cahill warned the teenage labor force is decreasing, causing labor shortages in the retail trade, food chains, and other entry level positions.

He said the reason for the decrease in the labor force is because the baby boom has gotten older and is no longer working in service type jobs such as fast food chains.

Fast food jobs have been the hardest hit by the decrease in the teenage population.

According to the report the population of teenagers in Plymouth County from 15 to 19 year old is expected to decrease from 2,770 in 1985 to 2,572 by 1990.

"The labor surplus caused by the baby boom is no longer there. Instead of working in the fast food, they are bringing their families there," Cahill said.

This change from surplus workers to surplus customers is starting to place even larger demands on service jobs.

In fact, the service industry provided the largest number of jobs of all the industries between 1985 and 1986.

Service jobs grew at a rate of 9.1 percent and added 3,072 new jobs, exceeding the state average of 4.1 percent.

But the increased demand for services and goods combined with the shrinking teenage labor force has caused a panic in many industries.

The hardest hit has been the manufacturing industry which has relied on teenage workers.

Between 1985 and 1986, manufacturers of durable goods lost 4,593 employees, mostly to the shutdown of General Dynamics. Employment in non durable goods, like rubber and plastic, declined by 1.6 percent. And state wide manufacturing employment fell by -1.6 percent.

"It has taken a nose dive. As a whole there are very few people wanting to work in factories today no matter how much we pay," Laura Malone, Personnel Manager at the Philstone Nail factory in West Bridgewater, said.

Malone has seen a steady decrease in workers in the industry, even though manufacturing companies are increasing in the South Shore. The manufacturing sector is expected to increase by 5.7 percent in the next eleven years according to the report. Malone said it is becoming harder for manufacturing companies to find people to work.

"I thought it was just us, but people I've talked to at other companies have said they are having the same problem," she said. "When food franchises put out $5.50 an hour, you know things are bad. They feel it before we do."

Malone claims the situation is so bad that managers are putting up with high absenteeism and lack of discipline among workers because of the shortage. Managers are afraid to confront workers about problems for fear of losing them.

"It's getting to the point where we don't have enough people to run. We are panicking. I don't know what's going to happen," Malone said. "I think the problem is this generation of kids don't want to do manual labor. The work ethic has changed. There is a lax attitude now."

Pat Kauffman, advertising executive for the Mariner Newspapers, said she agrees that the work ethic has changed and has heard complaints from many companies placing help wanted ads about applicant's laxed attitudes.

"When we were in school, when you went to work you worked, but there's a different attitude now," she said. "You don't have that go get attitude that you used to have. Everyone wants something glamorous to do or to be."

This change in attitude is also causing a shift in the working force. Jobs with higher pay and more "glamorous" appeal are showing high increases in employment.

Finance, real estate, insurance and construction are the fastest growing in employment. Last year construction added 1,298 new jobs to the South Shore economy at a growth rate of 15.3 percent.

The state's average in construction growth was only 11.4 percent. Residential building saw the fastest growth, up 28.4 percent. Finance, insurance, and real estate was the fastest growth industry increasing at a rate of 19.8 percent and adding 2,579 new jobs.

February unemployment at 3.7%

The South Shore's average unemployment rate rose slightly to 3.7 percent in February after a record low of 2.8 percent in December.

The unemployment rate has continued to decline since 1984 with last December's rate marking the lowest unemployment experience in the last four years.

This February's unemployment rate dropped from the 4.1 percent experienced last February and was lower than last year's annual rate of 3.8 percent, according to estimates produced by the Massachusetts Division of Employment Security.

Manual labor jobs need to be filled . . .

Mariner Newspapers said classified ads have increased with the demand for labor. Two years ago, the Mariner had only half a page of help wanted classified ads and went to only eight communities.

But today the paper has five pages of classified ads and covers 14 communities.

"But it's not just ours, all the papers have seen increases," she said.

She said that alot of businesses are having trouble finding qualified help and that manual task jobs like dry cleaners are continually looking for help.

Decreases in population in some communities has also hurt the labor force.

According to a study of 10 communities in the South Shore by the South Shore Coalition, people employed in full time non-government jobs has increased 59 percent in the last 10 years.

But population of the 10 communities only increased 10 percent from 163,279 in 1970 to 180,022 in 1980. Marshfield has seen the biggest increase in population up 37.4 percent in the last 10 years.

Marshfield rose from 15,223 in 1970 to 22,295 in 1985. Hingham increased from 18,845 in 1970 to 20,648 in 1985. Hanover increased from 10,107 to 11,364.

But Cohasset, Norwell, Scituate, and Weymouth have all shown decreases in population from 1980 to 1985. Cohasset went from 7,174 to 7,149. Norwell dropped from 9,182 to 9,031, and Scituate fell from 17,317 to 17,287. Weymouth had the biggest decline from 55,601 to 53,735.

But the decline in the labor force may be turned around as the South Shore's economy increases. According to Coalition Chairman Janet O'Brien, the South Shore economy is improving as more businesses come into the area. Since 1984, some 2.5 million square feet of floor space have been taken over by businesses.

"Businesses are beginning to spring up on the South Shore and people are now beginning to come from other towns to work here," she said. "We are becoming an employment center."

What happens when the deal is sealed?

Anticipating a move, particularly if it is to another city outside your area, is a most important consideration, said Maureen McCaffrey, manager of the Relocation Department of the Jack Conway Real Estate Company, based in Hanover.

"You should be prepared to make definite moving plans and handle the myriad of details to make the move to your new community as smooth as possible," she advised.

Unless otherwise provided in the sales contract, a buyer normally gets possession of a home at the time of settlement or closing on the home.

"As a result, you should make plans to clean, remove trash and vacate the day prior to settlement, or in any case not later than settlement day," McCaffrey said. All appliances, of course, should be in good working order in time for the buyer's final walk-through inspection, she notes.

Once the settlement date has been set, the seller needs to take a number of other items into consideration and make plans accordingly, said McCaffrey. Some of these items that a seller should consider, include the following:

•Eliminate everything you won't be moving and taking with you to your new location. You may want to have a garage sale to eliminate some of these items.

•Begin to use up food in your freezer.

•Check with your insurance agent for information on purchasing full coverage on those items you do move. Make sure all your household goods are adequately protected while enroute to your new destination and initially after arrival.

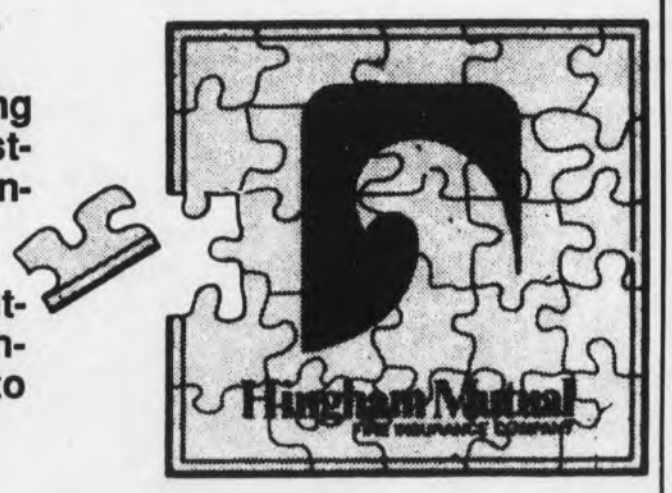
•If you plan to vacate your home more than 30 days before the settlement date, be sure hazard insurance covers risk during that period and until the deed to your home is recorded.

•Obtain transcripts of your children's school records.

•Be sure to have birth and baptismal records made of all family members.

•Secure medical, dental and optometry records for all family members.

•Make plans for closing appropriate bank accounts, if necessary, and for transferring funds to financial institutions in your new location. Of course, you will want to be careful about closing out any certificates of deposit or other time accounts in which penalties may be added for early withdrawal.



•Notify utilities to transfer accounts based on the settlement date set and/or your moving plans.

"These are just some of the activities you should anticipate in the moving process. You will save a great deal of time as well as energy if you plan ahead. And your move will be off to a very good start as a result," McCaffrey said.

Multiple Listing Service aids shopping for a home

By Bob Tis
Mariner Correspondent

Julie Guild of Cohasset, a 17 year veteran of the real estate trade in the South Shore, calls her business "interesting, but also frustrating."

"It's a people business," explains Guild, "you have to like people to do what I do. Buyers are liars. Oh they don't mean to be but all of a sudden they will look at something and all their rationale will fly out the window. They find an emotional attachment with a house. It's love at first sight."

Guild, a partner at Coastal Country Properties Ltd. of Cohasset, is the new president of the Plymouth County Multiple Listing Service.

This service allows Real Estate offices all over eastern Massachusetts to show homes from Hingham in the north to Plymouth in the south, for a $500.00 membership fee. Presently there are 227 M.L.S. offices carrying 2,146 listings most of which are on the South Shore.

"I can't think of one firm in the area off hand, that isn't a member of the Multiple Listing Service," says Guild. "It's really to everyone's benefit. It saves a lot of time and effort for everyone involved."

That Multiple Listing Service actually revolutionizes shopping for a home in the greater South Shore area.

At any member real estate office, almost every home that is on the market (2,146 presently) is virtually at your fingertips.

Well over half of the brokers have computer terminals that will immediately produce a detailed sketch of any house on the market.

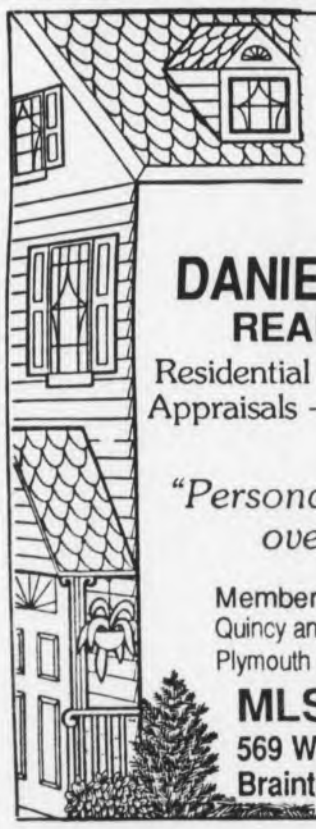
When you go to look at a house the broker that is selling the house and the broker that is listing the house will accompany you.

It's still my job to get the best possible terms and price for my client," says Guild. "Many sellers are living in the past, the days of bidding wars are over. People have tended to overprice houses. They can't really do that anymore, buyers are in a position to negotiate. It is a buyers market," Guild said.

Guild said buyers in this area are predominantly the first time buyers. The younger couples with no kids and a double income are buying houses to build up equity and for the healthy tax deduction.

Julie Guild

Things are changing, instructs Guild, "Everyone doesn't work in Boston anymore, everyone doesn't have to commute. This is causing escalating prices in surrounding towns. It is a ripple effect. Building is rampant and prices are going up in towns like Rockland, Hanover and Randolph," says Guild.



Interest rates took an upward swing two weeks ago. Guild feels that this could slow the market down. The "in" thing to do these days says Guild is refinancing.

"Refinancing mortgages is a very popular thing to do because people's houses have increased in value so much. This gives them a chance to make a quick profit and to trade their way into a more expensive home."

Julie Guild is a big proponent of the Multiple Listing Service and real estate in general. The silver haired mother of four says of the M.L.S. "You get a better feeling for the market, you can see the interaction between brokers."

"The competition is still there, with all of these member firms, brokers are always expanding." It is no secret that real estate is a hotbed of activity in the South Shore. Julie Guild seems to be at the helm.

"People still call you up because they have faith in you," says Guild in a bottom line sort of tone.

We'll help you get the home you want.

Home inspections are a key part of the home purchase

By Bob Tis
Marine Correspondent

A free seminar presented by the Boston Five Cents Savings Bank instructed South Shore residents about the best ways to go about buying a home.

Steve Dawn, District Manager for the Boston Five, welcomed about 100 prospective home buyers to the Thayer Public Library in Braintree.

Various speakers addressed the most pertinent subjects facing home buyers.

Atty. Lou Sorgi advised buyers on the legal aspects of purchasing a home. "People tend to buy houses in the spring," says Sorgi, "it's very busy and this will not excuse the many deadlines in the purchase and sales agreements."

Sorgi explained the contractual obligations of buying a home. "When you make an offer on a home, you make an offer to make a contract."

After an offer is made, a Purchase and Sale Agreement is drawn up. "This is just a furthering of the offer," says Sorgi. "It should include details for a full home inspection, a deposit and dates and deadlines for the financing and the closing date.

Pat Rizzo, a professional home inspector, explained his trade. "The majority of people aren't even aware of home inspections. There is quite a difference between looking over a home and having a certified professional check it out. After all, how much legal and financial responsibility is Uncle Charlie going to accept if your house caves in?"

Details on just what a confidential inspection report by a certified home inspector might include can be obtained by contacting The Home Inspector of North America, Inc., at 1-800-WE CHECK.

Paul Jevne, former president of the Plymouth County Board of Realtors, voiced his happiness in being able to address such a large crowd of prospective home buyers.

"The first-time buyer is going to spend a lot of time in the office," explains Jevne. "Sometimes it is better to visit a banker first."

According to Jevne, the two most common ways of buying a home are: waiting until you find your dream home then putting your home on the market at a reasonable price; and, looking at the market to see if there are a few houses that you would be happy with and then placing your house on the market at your price and waiting it out.

Statistics show than an average home on the South Shore sells for $170,000 and an average condominium sells for about $155,000.

"I'd recommend you shop for a broker," says Jevne. "Not all brokers are realtors. It is best to commit to one broker; if you play the field the broker will sense that and maybe won't work as hard for you."

The last speaker of the evening, Rich Renna, a loan officer for the Boston Five, addressed the evening's most sobering question, "What can you afford?"

The criteria for loan acceptance takes quite a few things into consideration. At least two years of steady employment with stability and growth potential is the most important criteria.

Renna also indicated that most loan officers look for a strong credit history and sufficient assets to close a downpayment.

Most banks will also make a personal appraisal. "We come out to look at the house ourselves," said Renna. "We want to be sure that the market value is there to support your purchase price."

Predictions for the first-time home buyer placed in escrow, attorney fees, title and deed registration, fees and other costs associated with the purchase.

In general, a first-time homeowner can expect to pay between 2 to 2½ percent of the mortgage on closing costs.

Farragut, with offices in Boston and Plymouth, offers customers the benefit of filling out the application at home, Martorana noted. But the entire process, from application to closing, can take anywhere from six to eight weeks. "It's a very lengthy and thorough process."

Most conventional banks offer similar first mortgages, although some are not tied to federal financing and can set individual guidelines on down payments and interest rates.

And, unlike mortgage corporations, banks have other assets and can sometimes be more flexibile on loans and mortgages. The application process can be quicker in some banks.

Rates have been on the increase since late March, and it's anyone's guess when they'll level off, most bankers agree. As of the first of May, the interest rate at most banks is about 10½ percent to 10.75 percent.

SECOND MORTGAGE OR HOME EQUITY LOAN?

The market for second mortgages and home equity loans, or lines of credit, is on the increase, with most banks offering different types of packages to either borrow on a home's equity or refinance a first mortgage.

The benefit of both types of loans is that a homeowner can use the equity that has built up on the value of the home. In some cases, where a homeowner borrowed when interest rates were soaring around 14 percent, refinancing can mean a lower monthly mortgage payment at today's rates.

The basic question is, which type is best for an individual? What's the difference?

Under a line of credit, a homeowner has an open-ended line of credit based on the amount of equity that has built up in the home. The money can be used at any time for any purpose, and if it's paid within a certain time it can be borrowed again.

The danger of an open-ended line of credit is that the interest rate is tied to the current prime rate and can change monthly. As the interest rate soars, so does the monthly payment—sometimes far beyond what was originally borrowed.

A second mortgage, on the other hand, is similar to a first mortgage, but often involves less closing costs and points. In general, rates on second mortgages are fixed for a certain time, from one to three years, with caps on specific rates.

Most banks will appraise the current market value of a home before issuing a second mortgage or home equity loan, but some will accept the assessed value, which is usually lower than the market value and reduces the amount a homeowner is eligible to borrow.

Citizens demand CHL assignment suspension

By John Magadieu
Mariner Staff

As the board of health voted May 13 to continue its hearing with Cohasset Heights Ltd. to June 10, a number of residents protested, demanding suspension of the landfill's site assignment until the issues of spotter and liability insurance are addressed.

At the "public hearing" May 13, board members John Burns and Sharon Becker and special counsel Michael Leon told the assembled citizens the CHL representatives filed a lawsuit against the town citing procedural violations of the landfill's rights because of actions during the May 4 session,specifically a Tropicana-and-Draino demonstration by Brian Lipsett of Pond Street.

Referring to a CHL 'expert's' testimony calculating the dangers to Lily Pond, Lipsett explained he was trying to present such a "risk assessment" in real terms.

Along with the extension, Leon explained, the board promised the CHL representatives they will be provided police protection and a detailed agenda for forthcoming proceedings. The extension was to allow them additional time for proposals they will submit to the board.

"This hearing was to be about closing the dump," argued James Cody of Jerusalem Road., noting the absence of Cohasset Heights' representatives. "Their attorney has been using due process as a tactic to delay these proceedings."

Cody recalled the hearing session of March 30, when the board came to within a vote of shutting down the landfill, before CHL's attorney Anton Moehrke informed the board such action was not suggested on the agenda that night and a shutdown would be a violation of CHL's right to due process.

Since then, Cody added, CHL has brought forth a parade of experts while continuing to dump about 300 tons of trash per day at the dump atop Crocker Lane. "If we're going to extend the hearing, let's suspend the site assignment for the duration of the extension."

"In actuality," Becker responded, "a moratorium is not something we can do, that's why that motion was

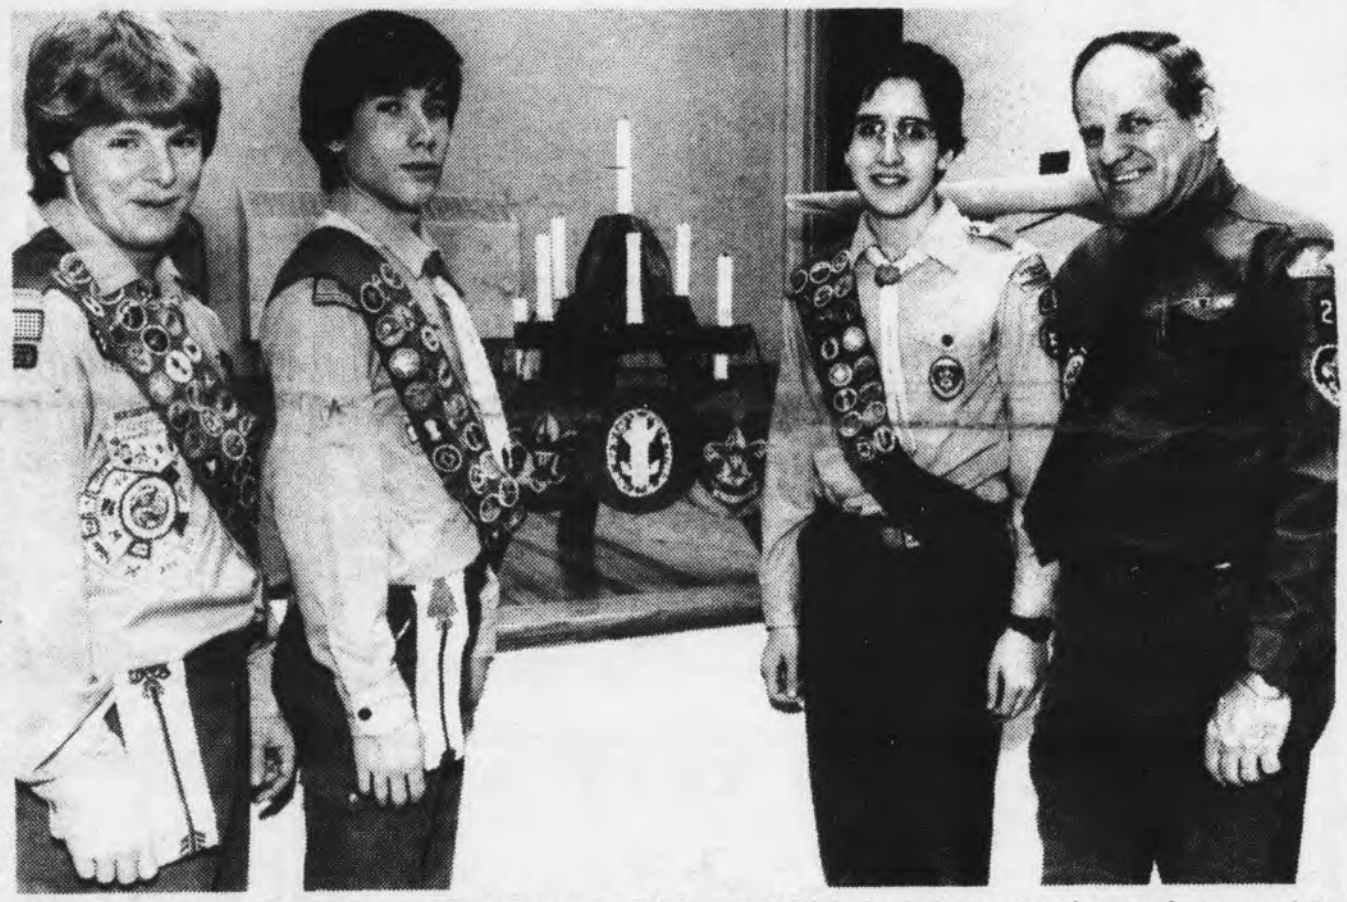
Three Eagle Scouts honored in special ceremony

In a ceremony last week, Cohasset's Troop 28 bestowed the prestigious honor of Eagle Scout on three of its members.

It was "the first time in a long, long time" that three young men received the honored Scouting rank at the same time. "It certainly is unusual," Scoutmaster Merle Brown said of the three Troop members. "Normally we have one a year which is fine for a small Troop. This year we had 12 kids in Troop 28 and to have three Eagles from that number is a pretty good percentage."



The three newest Eagle Scouts from Cohasset are Michael and Nicholas Lelecas and Mark Lavange. They received their award during ceremonies Friday, May 15 at St. Stephen's Church.

The accomplishment is made even more unusual because Michael and Nicholas are twins. The two brothers, who admitted to a bit of competition in achieving this rank, have been in Scouting for nine years. The 17-year-old brothers are juniors at Cohasset High School.

Mark is an 18 year-old senior at South Shore Regional Technical High School. He will be attending Wales and Johnson in Providence, Rhode Island next year and hopes to become a chef after graduation.

Scoutmaster Brown explained that the road to becoming an Eagle Scout is indeed long. "Each of these boys joined Scouting as Cubs and then came into Troop 28 and rose through the different ranks. Along each step of the way they earned merit badges, some of which are very difficult. Each rank also requires the Scouts to perform a service project. The Eagle Scout requires a minimum of 50 hours of work, although each one of

Fishermen want to know where they can dock boats

Selectmen will meet with special counsel Wednesday, May 27 for an update on the town's court case against William Figueiredo.

The board decided to meet with attorney Mark DiGiacomo after about 40 irate citizens showed up at Monday's meeting to demand action.

As Memorial Day weekend approaches and the fishing season gets revved into high gear, townspeople with boats are concerned they will be denied access to Cohasset Harbor because of the lack of mooring space.

Chester Janiak, an attorney representing Figueiredo reminded the board, "In the summer of 1986, Mr. Figueiredo received a request from the harbormaster to submit an application to maintain floats in Bailey's Creek; he complied and submitted the application. But the harbormaster denied the application. Mr. Figueiredo maintains he has the right to maintain floats in accordance with the decision rendered by the Dept. of Environmental Quality Engineering."

The town is appealing a decision handed down by the state last September, regarding the proposed placement of floats in Bailey Creek by the Parker Avenue resident.

The town says the DEQE ignored a previous injunction prohibiting the floats when it proposed a plan whereby Figueiredo could install floats in front of his property. The state agency designed a plan which indicated the precise measurement, placement and size of floats.

The original court case began in 1979, when a preliminary injunction was issued by the probate court, prohibiting Figueiredo from placing any moorings or floats in Cohasset Harbor.

Harbormaster Harry Ritter determined private moorings along Bailey's Creek at Parker Avenue would take up valuable town-owned mooring space and reduce the navigation area in the harbor.

The case was brought to trial in October, 1983. After viewing the harbor and the mooring site, the judge ruled in favor of the town and issued a permanent injunction against Figueiredo. According to the ruling, he was prohibited from placing any floats below the mean low

U.S. Constitution essay contest winners

As part of Cohasset's celebration of the Constitution, various activities and programs have been scheduled throughout the year. The Constitution Bicentennial Commission, appointed by the selectmen last year to organize Cohasset's observance, wanted to include students in this historic celebration.

The commission agreed to integrate another organization's involvement by utilizing a successful program that would incorporate two important themes.

The Colonel Thomas Lothrop Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution (DAR) has for several years sponsored an essay contest at Cohasset High School. Each year, the national DAR organization suggests an appropriate subject, something that will coincide with an on-going historic celebration or observance. Last year, according to member Barbara Dillon, the topic was the Statue of Liberty.

And this year, it was a subject of dual interest to Dillon. As a member of the local DAR chapter, and an appointed member of the Constitution Bicentennial group, she was pleased to sponsor a contest on the Constitution.

Donald Kelly's eighth grade class has participated for many years in the essay project. Previously, he taught American History and it was an appropriate forum to present the contest to his students. DAR liaison Dorothy Bates helped to coordinate the event each year.

Although he now teaches World Cultures in the seventh and eighth grades, Kelly felt the contest would still be a stimulating activity for his eighth grade students.

"The essays were written late last fall," he recalled. "It was to be a proper research paper, using the form taught here at Cohasset High with use of research material and a bibliography. In addition to being a good history paper, it is also a time to use their English skills.

"I really think the students benefitted from this study

Town meeting July 14

Selectmen set a special town meeting date of July 14, as close as possible to the deadline set by SEMASS for the town to indicate whether it will participate with the trash-to-energy disposal facility.

Selectmen learned Monday, SEMASS is holding to the deadline date July 18.

"This is one of the big reasons we're having the meeting," Mittman commented.

The warrant for the special town meeting will open May 26 and close June 2.

"I'm concerned about the time frame for voter registration, and for printing and mailing the warrant," commented Donald Andrew, the board's executive secretary.

Hayes is special council

Selectmen appointed Joseph Hayes of Scituate special town counsel for the zoning board of appeals for its case against Target Industries.

The board also appointed Peter Wood to fill the unexpired term of A.J. Antone on the harbor study committee. The seat was an at-large post due up next year.

In other personnel matters, the board agreed to pay for step raises in the harbormaster's office, the tree and park office, the town accountants office, the water dept. and the wire dept.

Fuel tanks to move

Fire Chief Daniel Brock requested the selectmen to take action to remove three underground fuel storage tanks at 185 and 215 Chief Justice Cushing Highway.

"Under law," he explained, "the selectmen are the town licensing authority for such storage facilities.

"If there is a problem where the tanks become hazardous, or if they are abandonned, then it's time to take action."

Brock said he was notified by the board of health that the three tanks were abandoned and not being used.

"I sent a note to Theresa Williams at the realty trust responsible for the land and at first, got no response.

Later, she said she would take them out," he said. "Although Williams picked up an application, there was no application for the permit. The law allows three weeks to comply and she ran over that.

"The licensing authority is the board of selectmen and it can order the tanks removed; they have not been removed under my order," he said.

"If we order them removed, how fast will it take them?" Selectman Clifford Mittman asked.

"If we catch the right company at the right time," he said, "the job will cost us $3,000 to $5000 and it will take a few days."

The actual removal of the tanks will take only one day, Brock noted, but to determine the extent of leakage will take longer.

Brock said Williams has chosen someone to remove the tanks and has some place in mind to bring them, but no one to clean the tanks before they are transported.

"For the town to do it," explained Donald Andrew, executive secretary, "we would need an appropriation."

The selectmen then decided to send Brock before the advisory committee with an estimate, on the contingency Williams does not come through with an approvable application form by Friday, the town will swing into action.

Rosano right of way

Ross Rosano went before the board of selectmen Monday seeking the board's approval to widen a railroad right of way to make room for a nine-lot subdivision on Rosano Road, off North Main Street.

"By altering the right of way," explained Michael Leon, Rosano's attorney, "he could move the subdivision road farther away from existing houses."

Presently, it comes as close as 35 feet to a neighbor's swimming pool. "That still leaves it a legal lot," Leon noted.

Leon said his client does not anticipate widening the road any more than five feet as a result of the right of way expansion.

The selectmen told Rosano they will consult with Town Counsel Richard Henderson, but indicated they expect a decision favorable to the developer's intentions.

State to play

Selectmen refused to waive permit fees for the state for renovation work to be performed by the Cohasset Housing Authority on a state-owned apartment building off Elm St.

The $400,000 phase two of the project "will require considerable effort on the part of our building inspector," executive secretary Donald Andrew said.

"I don't mind taking money from the state," Selectman James Gallagher commented. "They certainly take a lot from us."

Memorial Day route

The annual Memorial Day parade and ceremony will begin with the assembly of marchers at 8 a.m. Monday, May 25 at the George H. Mealy American Legion Post, 38 Summer Street.

The marchers will proceed to the North Cohasset Cemetery, where they should arrive at approximately 8:45 a.m. The Honor roll will be read at 9 a.m. and then the marchers will travel to the Woodside Cemetery at 9:30 a.m. and to the Beechwood Cemetery at 9:45 a.m.

Parade marchers will assemble on Sohier Street at 10:30 a.m. and proceed to the Central Cemetery at 11 a.m. and into the Square by 11:30 a.m. They will reach the concluding ceremonies at the Veterans' Memorial Park at Cohasset Harbor by noon.

Legion Post 118 Commander Lawrence Sousa said between 550 and 600 American flags will be placed on the graves of deceased Cohasset veterans. Wreaths will be placed on the graves of those soldiers killed in action.

Early deadline

To allow our employees to enjoy the Memorial Day holiday, the Mariner will have an early deadline of 5 p.m., Friday, May 22 for all advertising, classifieds and editorial copy.

Old Colony included in bond issue

By Marilyn Jackson
Mariner Staff

A request for $195 million to restore the three Old Colony railroad lines is included in the governor's $2.9 billion bond authorization package.

"This would include full rail service to Boston," said Rep. Frank Hynes, D-Marshfield.

"The state needs to fund between 40 and 50 percent of the rail construction costs to demonstrate its full commitment to the restoration and maximize the federal dollar contribution," said Hynes.

Governor Dukakis submitted the package to the legislature this week.

Hynes said the Joint Committee on Transportation, of which he is a member, will hold public hearings throughout the state on the bond proposal, probably beginning in early July.

He said full restoration of the three lines — the Middleboro line which already carries the summer trains to Cape Cod as well as freight year-round, the Plymouth line and the Greenbush line — is expected to cost $385 million.

"This certainly demonstrates our full commitment and should argue very successfully with Ralph Stanley of the Urban Mass Transit Administration, which provides the bulk of the financing for such projects," said Hynes.

When Stanley came to Boston this spring, he indicated the project would go to the top of the list if Massachusetts showed its financial support.

State transportation officials have prioritized the Old Colony rail project. Work on the two smaller lines —Middleboro and Plymouth — could proceed while the environmental impact review is conducted for the Greenbush line.

Hynes said the governor submits a transportation bond request about every two years. The $2 billion bond authorization enacted in 1984 included funds for reconstruction of the Neponset River bridge.

"In fact," said Hynes, "some of that money already is being used to compete an environmental impact report."

Residents want suspension of dump site

withdrawn."

"How can the board allow them to continue to operate when they are not responsible to this hearing," Cody queried. "I'm appalled. I feel that my rights to clean water are being violated by their operation.

"I feel that there is a double standard here," he said, "the dump's rights and opportunities to do business versus the townspeople's rights and opportunities to clean water."

Cody's sentiments echoed those listed in a letter submitted to the board May 11, which was signed by 25 Cohasset residents.

The letter began thanking the health board for its concern for the well-being of the town's citizens and the town's future and encouraged the board to "aggressively pursue measures that will protect the town from irresponsible waste management practices."

While they agreed there is a need for more information about what is going on at the private commercial landfill and about the effects on surrounding wetlands, they urged the board to deal with "the matter at hand" - the site assignment.

"If CHL is not in compliance with the site assignment and its subsequent amendments," they told the board, "then the site assignment is void and it is incumbent upon the board to suspend the site assignment."

Those who signed the letter expressed their objection to the course to which they believe Moehrke and CHL's 'experts' are directing the board.

"The board has allowed the attorney and 'experts' for CHL to take control of the hearing," they said, "diverting the board's attention away from the site assignment issue by introducing testimony which is not pertinent to the site assignment violations by CHL. This is a waste of the citizens' time and tax money."

The letter cited what the citizens believe are violations of the landfill's site assignment:

1. Amendment #3. "The spotter for the landfill (Paul Barry) is unacceptable because of a clear conflict of interest;"

2. Amendment #4. "The manifest system is inadequate and does not provide the information required by the amendment;"

3. Amendment #7. "The landfill has been operating without insurance or similar surety;"

4. Amendment #9. "The bond posted by CHL for closure and post closure costs is not adequate;"

5. Amendment #11. "The groundwater monitoring program of CHL's engineers is incomplete and according to testimony is based upon improper sampling procedures;"

6. Amendment #12. "The landfill operation has contaminated the water resources of the town;"

7. Amendment #15. "If any amendment is in violation, then the site assignment is suspended."

Along with site assignment suspension until the landfill is in compliance and "the complicated legal and technical issues are resolved to the town's satisfaction," the residents requested that the board require CHL to post a $15 million cash bond to indemnify the town "for despoilment of the town's water resources, water supply and the ecological balance.

"This is a reasonable figure," the letter stated, "considering that the dept. of justice has recommended the Environmental Protection Agency seek this amount from potentially responsible parties to Superfund sites."

The residents also asked the board to require CHL to install monitoring wells and collect samples between the "upper wetland" and the landfill.

They also requested surface water and soil sediment samples be tested by "an independent engineering firm that does not design landfills or consult for landfills. These samples should be analyzed in parts per trillion."

In addition, the residents asked the board to require that leachate from the landfill be treated, handled and transported as a hazardous waste and that the leachate tanks be isolated from the water table and be tested for leaks.

Finally, they asked the board to require that the surface water collection system be "totally redesigned" to prevent erosion and contaminant runoff. "Surface water must be treated as leachate because elevated levels of chemical contamination were indicated in a recent GHR report."

The people suggested the health board notify "any and all towns, businesses and disposal firms whose waste is being deposited at CHL, that they are potentially responsible parties and may be held liable for the cost of cleaning up existing contamination."

The citizens proposed the establishment of a working committee with representatives from the conservation commission, water commission, health board, zoning board of appeals and concerned citizens "to coordinate strategy with regard to this problem."

The residents further insisted that all town boards and committees oppose any expansion of the landfill. That issue will be debated before the zoning board of appeals Thursday, May 28.

Fishermen want a float decision water level at Bailey's Creek.

Since that decision was issued in February 1984, the harbormaster reported that Figueiredo had placed floats below the mean water level. Rather than start a contempt of court hearing, Ritter required Figueiredo to file an application to place the floats in the area legally.

As Janiak noted, the plan Figueiredo submitted was denied by the harbormaster, who said the floats, as indicated on the plan, were below the mean water level and were in violation of the court injunction.

Ritter ruled that Figueiredo's floats were placed too far into the harbor and interfered with navigation through the waterway. He ordered Figueiredo to remove the floats.

Figueiredo appealed Ritter's decision to the DEQE. The state agency approved Figueiredo's plan, specifying the configuration of the floats, the length and the positioning off his property.

"The decision issued by the DEQE contained two important facts," Janiak told the board. "First, the placement of floats in Bailey's Creek promotes the use of the waterways; second, the floats are no obstruction to navigation through the harbor.

"The town has not disputed these two facts," he said. "It is fundamentally unfair for the town to block the placement of floats in light of the DEQE findings, which the town has not disputed.

"It's not simply an issue of fairness to Mr. Figueiredo," he added, "but for others who wish to use Cohasset Harbor."

One of the "others" spoke up readily.

"I've been a lobsterman in Cohasset for 7 years," said Dana Waitkus. and I was told two weeks ago I can't put my boat in there; I risk losing my livelihood. I've got a wife and a child to feed. What do you suggest I do?"

Selectman Clifford Mittman responded, "We will have a special meeting on this May 27 with our special town counsel. I can't guarantee it will solve or end anything. I feel sorry for those who depend on the harbor for their livelihood, but unfortunately you're going to have to live with it.

"The only thing we can do now," he said, "is get to know exactly where everybody stands at this point."

The Historial Society's two unusually fine historical buildings on Elm Street at Cohasset Center will open once again for the summer season on Saturday, June 20. Ranking high among Cohasset's truly historical buildings, the Capt. John Wilson Historical House and the Maritime Museum will remain open to the public through September 30. The Society's Senior Curator will be present during open hours. Those hours will be 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. each afternoon except Mondays. Admission to each building is 75 cents for adults, 25 cents for children 6 to 12 years. Society members and their guests are admitted without charge.

The Capt. John Wilson House is an 1810 Sea Captain's home, displaying antique furnishings and artworks from old houses of Cohasset. The Maritime Museum was Samuel and John Bates' Ship Chandlery and Counting House, part of the Bates family's fishing and trading business started at "Ship Cove" or Cohasset Harbor in the mid-18th century. Today the old chandlery houses an extensive collection of maritime and general historical items from the town's seafaring past.

Abutters express concern over subdivision

By John Magadieu
Mariner Staff

Abutters of a proposed 31-house subdivision off Lamberts Lane brought their concerns before the zoning board of appeals Thursday.

John Smoot of Hull Street and Ann Suprino, who owns a back lot off Cunningham Road told the board they fear they will be subjected to increased trespassing on their lots if the subdivision is constructed.

The developer, Charles Wills offered the board a conservation easement on a parcel across Cunningham Road from his proposed project.

Wills proposed giving the town, for one dollar, a conservation easement for 500 years on the plot opposite his intended development, to keep the land forever (practically) green and unspoiled. Under the conservation parcel, however, is planned a common septic system for the proposed 31-house subdivision.

According to the proposed proposal, "The conservation easement hearby conveyed does not grant to the grantee (town), to the public, or to any other person any right to enter upon the parcel, (except for the conservation commission and its designees) to determine compliance."

Wills' attorney Theodore Regnante compared the plan to a condominium project in North Reading, where he said a similar easement has afforded the town protection of its greenspace.

The Essex County Greenbelt Association built a nature trail on that North Reading parcel, he noted. "The parcel will be restricted to residents because of the liability question," he said, "but public access is open to discussion."

Regnante said the easement offer is beneficial to his client, because it does not require going before the state Dept. of Environmental Quality Engineering.

"We would agree to a similar arrangement in the developed area, excluding the restrictions on putting up tennis courts, decks, flagpoles and swimming pools. Not including the parcel across the street or yards, common open space at the new complex should comprise about 45 percent.

The zoning board members appeared receptive to the plan.

"I compliment them on their easement," said board member Terrence Farrell. "I think it's a good idea."

Board member Edward Lubitz noted, "The liability insurance issue is a concern, especially if this parcel is made open to the public. I don't have any answers."

"We think it would be better if it were not open to the public," Regnante agreed. "But if the town says it wants that parcel open to the public, that's okay too."

Suprino, who owns seven-and-a-half acres abutting the proposed conservation parcel queried, "If that land becomes open space, can we build there? ...And what if people come walking onto our land?"

Suprino also expressed concern that if water is diverted for the development's sake, her land would flood.

"I can't imagine it would affect her land," commented Peter Ogen, Wills' engineer. "Her land rises sharply, 10 to 15 feet. It's inconceivable that activity on this land or on the adjoining parcel would have any effect.

"Our drainage will be contained on our land," he assured her.

"If it's inconceivable that it would have no effect, perhaps you could draw up a legal agreement," suggested Donna Pride of Hammond Avenue.

With regard to the trespass issue, Farrell said, "If you're concerned about a traffic problem running through the property, don't create an attractive way to get in.

Marie Plante of Jerusalem Road expressed support for the project, noting the planning board also supported the plan as an "appropriate use."

Smoot, whose property is bordered on two sides by the proposed 31-house subdivision said he objects to the proposal because he is presently surrounded by woods and doesn't want to lose them. "I don't think there will be much woods left."

Smoot noted his property is the "most direct route" to the Curtis Compact store and said he suspects his property will be inundated by kids going back and forth for "slush puppies.

Wills argued, the dirt bikers and other kids will disappear if the land is developed. "Not many children are expected in this development; we figure it will be about the same as at 100 Point Street, where there are only two school-aged children."

"When he said a conservation easement would be better to do this than going through the DEQE," Smoot said, "a little bell went off in my head. Why avoid the DEQE?"

Farrell assured Smoot, "They won't circumvent the DEQE. They will come in through the conservation commissions review."

The board did express concern over traffic in the area.

"I think Lamberts Lane is a dangerous road," Farrell commented. "Increasing traffic by 62 cars or so will make it even more dangerous. I'm terrified driving there."

Wills said he will address the traffic problem. "We know there's terrible sight distance; there's no question this issue will come up."

Farrell risked being further terrified, as the zoning board scheduled a walking tour of the site.

Cohasset Savings completes conversion

Cohasset Savings Bank has completed its conversion from a mutual to a stock form with the issuance of 996,667 shares of common stock to approximately 1,300 depositors after a complicated, lengthy allocation procedure made necessary when the issue was substantially oversubscribed.

"We regret that it has taken longer than expected to complete the conversion and that many subscribers will be disappointed in not receiving the number of shares they subscribed for," bank president Donald E. Bates said. "But our staff has been working overtime and with great patience to make sure that all subscribers have been treated fairly and that all conversion regulations have been followed to the letter. Our people have performed magnificently and deserve a lot of credit."

The stock has been priced at the announced maximum of $8.625 per share and has been approved for trading on the nationwide electronic NASDAQ market under the symbol CHTB. Trading began May 14. Tucker, Anthony and R.L. Day, Inc., Boston, is making a market in the stock.

The bank originally offered 866,667 shares for purchase by its depositiors Feb. 18. By the expiration date of March 25, the issue was substantially oversubscribed, requiring an allocation procedure governed by Massachusetts banking regulations and outlined in the offering circular. This procedure is based principally on the amount of each subscriber's eligible deposits as of Aug. 31, 1986, so that depositors with small accounts may not be getting the full amount subscribed for.

Three Eagle Scouts honored from Troop 28

these kids did a lot more than that.

"One of the main elements of becoming an Eagle is to show leadership throughout your project. You're supposed to have others helping you, and to coordinate and lead them. Becoming an Eagle Scout is quite an honor. Once you're an Eagle Scout, you're always an Eagle Scout - even if you move away or go on to college. It is very much a prestigious award."

Michael's project actually spanned more than a year and involved an extensive clean-up and refurbishing of Whitney Woods along Rte. 3A. He selected the project from a list provided by Arthur Lehr, leader of Cohasset's Explorer Post, and head of the town's Civil Defense.

In addition to clearing the walking paths in the woods, Michael built two bridges across a stream and marked some of the trails that had been overgrown. After clearing the Milliken Memorial Path of debris, Michael installed benches. "I talked with Al Yalenezian, who is a Trustee of the Reservations, and he said that path is a very popular place for cross-country skiing. So I made the benches so they could stop there," Michael explained. He began planning the project in July, 1985 and completed it in September, 1986. He worked a total of 539 hours on the project, working much of the time during the summer of 1985, stopping in October and beginning again in the warmer weather of May, 1986.

"In the middle of all this cleaning, we got Hurricane Gloria and I had to reclear a lot of the paths I had finished," he stated.

"A lot of kids can't hack the responsibility of completing an Eagle project," he continued. "It really is an incredible responsibility. You have to manage your time and be pretty responsible. Sometimes, there's a lot of peer pressure against you - to be a Scout and to wear a uniform, especially as you get older. But that's never bothered me. Becoming an Eagle Scout means that I've achieved the personal goals I set for myself. It's like a staircase, and going up one step at a time." Michael said he will now attempt to earn the top merit badges in Scouting, the bronze, silver and gold Palms.

"I hope I'll be an incentive to the younger Scouts in the Troop. I hope they continue and remain in the Troop as long as I have," he added.

Twin brother Nicholas cleaned and refurbished Wheelwright Park, including the construction of new benches, and the clearing of picnic areas. He also added signs along the trails. His project lasted 233 and one-half hours. One of the requirements of an Eagle Scout project is to solicit help from the community. Nicholas received his building supplies from local stores and residents.

"Becoming an Eagle Scout was a goal I set for myself since I was first in Scouting. I saw other kids attaining that rank and it felt good, so I knew I would do it," he said, adding there's always "a lot of competition between my brother and I. I guess it's just sibling rivalry. But it was important to both of us to become Eagle Scouts."

Scouting, according to Nicholas, is an interesting activity. In addition to the glory of earning merit badges, it has also proved to be an invaluable education. "There's so much to learn outside of school. I know most things my friends don't know. They may be academically smarter, but I know a lot of other things like how to survive in the outdoors."

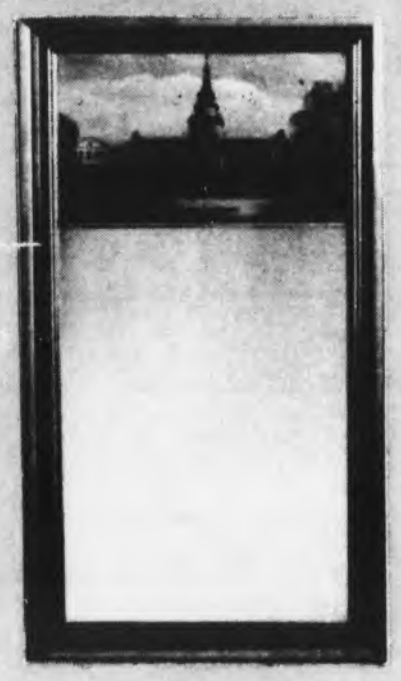
Nicholas said his plans include college in another year. He will remain in Scouting.

Mark's Eagle project was creating and organizing an emergency card file system for the fire department. He worked from May to October last year, riding his bike to every home in town, asking residents to fill out a questionnaire for the card system.

"There were several questions on the form, including where everybody in that house slept, if anyone had any physical handicaps, and if anyone was allergic to medications or had any medical problems. The whole idea is for the fire department and the EMT's, once they arrive at a house, to know where everybody is in the home, and if there are any additional problems there," he said, adding the fire chief was grateful to receive the new filing system.

"Mr. Lehr told me the Explorers had started this project in 1960, but they never finished it," Mark added. "And I figured, if this saved one life, it would be worth all the work."

Once the information was gathered on the questionnaire, Mark borrowed the use of a computer and printed the information onto index cards. He worked about 150 hours on the project.



Mark's grandfather, Ernest C. Blossom of 139 Border Street, is Cohasset's oldest living Eagle Scout and the second person to attain that rank in this town. His uncle, Fred C. Blossom of New York, was also an Eagle Scout. Mark wanted to be the third generation in his family to carry on the tradition.

"My mother and father got me into Scouting, but I was the one who wanted to stay in it. It has always been a lot of fun. I think I'll continue with this Troop through college and come back to help out as often as I can."

Our wish to you

It is prom time. Time for beautiful clothes, new hairdos, fancy limos. And memories.

If there was one wish that parents could grant their children right now, it would be to savor these days. Enjoy them with all the energy and vigor your youth can savor. We wish you memories.

Don't waste these precious times trying to impress someone with your immature expertise - fast driving and heavy drinking. It will leave a lasting impression on no one.

All the lecturing in this world won't stop some foolish person from driving drunk. We've had celebrities, sports stars and experts talk and talk and talk. And still, young people and old people are being killed on our streets because someone thought they could beat the odds with a bottle behind the wheel.

What a foolish gamble. You take a date to the prom, and bet you can make it to and from the dance in one piece. How senseless. You have the life of another human being in your hands, and you are willing to place losing odds on it.

We can lecture to our children a thousand times a day, and perhaps none of it will help. And in the back of our mind is that aching sensation, that blurred memory of our prom and how lucky we were to survive another drunken stupor.

Sometimes it is indeed heresy for us to lecture to our children - reprimanding them for an illegal bottle of beer when it simply illustrates "the chip off the old block" theory.

Perhaps we should confess to our children the close calls we've experienced, the horrible accidents we have witnessed because of this drinking problem many of us share. Communication is the key and education is the solution.

Somehow, our children must be convinced that good times are experienced without the aid of alcohol. They must be warned that drinking impairs our senses, and that no one is immune to its effect.

We must begin to talk very early. Prom time is clearly not the time to initiate our discussions.

But it is this time of year when we watch with anxiousness, envy and sadness as our children mature into their new lives. We can only wish them the best, and hope they benefit from the harsh lessons we were taught.

Will they listen? Some will surely stop to hear. Others are likely convinced our theories do not apply to them.

And so we must watch them closely, hope silently and with strength that they will enjoy these brief moments in their lives. We wish them happiness, fun and friendships. And we wish them a long, long life filled with happy memories.

Mother Goose for Moderns

by Max S. Maire

Jack and Jill went up the hill
To fetch a pail of water;
Jack fell down, so deadly ill,
And Jill came tumbling after.

Crosspatch, draw the latch,
Set by the fire and spin:
Take a cup and drink it up,
Then call the doctor in.

Ding dong bell,
Poison's in the well,
Who put it in?
Maybe Rin-tin-tin.

Seesaw, Margary Daw,
Cohasset has a new master;
And he shall have many pennies a day,
And we shall have fine, dirty water.

Little Jack Horner
Sat in a corner:
His ego was bruised, so he cried.
He then turned around
To sue the whole town
And said "What a big boy am I!"

Simple Simon met a trashman
Going to the dump;
Said Simple Simon to the trashman,
"My stomach needs a pump."

Sing a song of sixpence,
A swamp that's full of lye,
Four and twenty dump trucks,
Baked in a pie;
When the pie was opened,
The smell, it was so wild;
Wasn't that a dainty dish
To set before a child?

Bye baby bunting,
Daddy's gone a-hunting.
Gone to get some water, clean;
A long trip it will surely mean.

Hickory dickory dock,
The rat ran out the clock,
And made money,
It's not funny;
Hickory dickory dock.

This little piggy went to Cohasset;
That little piggy stayed home;
This little piggy had roast beef;
That little piggy had none;
And this little piggy cried, Wee, wee, wee!
All the way to the bank.

Tom, Tom, the expert's son
He learned to play when he was young.
But all the tune that he could play
Was "Over the hills, I'm gone away."

Jack was nimble,
Jack was quick,
Jack drank water,
Now he's sick.

Rub-a-chump-chump,
Some men with a dump,
And who do you think they be?
The expert, the fakir,
The mover and shaker;
Turn 'em out, knaves they be.

Due process, due process:
To catch a fat pig.
Flown away, flown away,
Scared by a grig.

Turkey Lurkey; poisonous pie
Kissed the swamp and made it die.
When the boys came out to play,
All the experts ran away.

Dirty, dirty: Oh, debris,
How does your dumpsite grow?
With sludge and slime that's guaranteed
To make your water glow.

Bergson's looks like spring

Letters

To the Editor:

Who can help but notice the cheery splash of spring outside Bergson's new restaurant on Rt. 3A, Cohasset? All pleasingly landscaped by Kennedy Nurseries, the grounds present eye-catching beauty with hundreds of red and yellow tulips for the passing public to enjoy.

Our thanks to Bergson's. The town of Cohasset can be very proud of this fine eating establishment.

Health and fitness at annual Health Fair

Social Service League members Ginny Riley and Maura Ditmar hand out literature about the League and the services offered.

The Buckle Up Bear encouraged all Health Fair visitors to fasten their seat belts. (Actually, it was Carol Oteri—minus her hat. She's the administrative assistant to the Board of Health, sponsors of the health fair).

Lillian Lincoln had her blood pressure checked by fair volunteer Nancy Gallant. The blood pressure checks were just one of the many free health services offered at last week's fair.

Firefighter William Litchfield and Capt. Robert Silvia demonstrate the "Jaws of Life" during the fair at Cohasset Common.

Christopher Clark watches the demonstrations at a safe distance with his mother, Melissa. The pair took a walk over to watch the excitement of last week's health fair.

Recreation programs. . .

The Cohasset Recreation Department will offer three levels of instruction for dog obedience classes to be taught by Laurie Ann Cleveland.

All classes will be held at the Cohasset Town Common and will begin Thursday, June 4. The Beginner class will be at 6:30 p.m., and the Intermediate/Advanced Class will be held at 7:30 p.m., Thursday's on the town common.

The purpose of beginner classes will be to teach novice pet owners basic obedience and responsibile pet ownership. Subjects to be covered are proper use of voice corrections, stay commands, getting the dog to come, heel, etc. Helpful hints on ownership and responsibility will also be included. The obedience will include those exercises beneficial to the pet owner as well as those thinking about eventually showing their dogs. The intermediate/advanced class is designed for dogs that have completed the Recreation Department Beginner class.

Owners are required to have their dogs equipped with a humane choke chain. The proper size of the chain is determined by measuring the dog's neck and adding four inches. ABSOLUTELY NO SPIKE COLLARS ARE ALLOWED!!

It is also strongly suggested that the handlers wear comfortable shoes and clothes for this session. For all classes: The fee is $25 per dog for the eight-week, one-hour-per-week-program. Dogs should be a minimum of three months of age. To register, call Cohasset Recreation Dept. at 383-6791. Non-residents will be accepted.

Annual Junior Trout Fishing Derby

There will be a junior trout fishing derby, sponsored by Trask Tackle Company, the Scituate Rod and Gun Club, Zebco, and Coca Cola Company Saturday, May 23 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., at the Scituate Rod and Gun Club, off Rt. 3A in Scituate.

The program is for children 12 years old and under, however, children must be accompanied by a parent. There is no charge for the program, and free bait and tackle will be available to children who have neither.

Participants and parents who are beginner anglers may consult with Rod and Gun Club members for answers to questions and lessons in casting, or any other aspect of fishing.

There will be free refreshments and many prizes as well. Children will be divided into three age groups as follows: 5 years and under, 6-8 year olds, and 9-12 year olds. Registrations will begin at 10 a.m., Saturday, May 23, at the Scituate Rod and Gun Club.

For further information or details, you may call Trask Tackle Company, at 545-4228, or stop in at their North Scituate store.

Summer Programs

The Cohasset Recreation Department's playground program registration for children aged 4-12, will be held at the town hall, beginning Monday, June 15 through Thursday, June 18, during the following times: Monday-Wednesday, 9 a.m. to noon; Thursday, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., and again from 6 to 8 p.m. Parents must complete registration form at the office and parental signature will be required.

Fees are: 6-12 year old, full-day program, $15 first child, and $5 for each additional child within the family for the 6-12 year old group only. Four and five year olds: $13 for first child, and $5 for each additional child within family for this program only. Discounts are not effective between programs.

The Summer Playground Program will begin Monday, June 29, 1987 at 9 a.m. at the Osgood School, and continue seven weeks through August 14. Six to 12 year-old groups will be in session from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. daily, Monday through Friday. Four and five year-olds will be in session from 9 a.m.to noon daily, Monday through Friday for the seven-week period.

Playground staff will walk children to and from swim center, hourly, for those children who have swim lessons. Please inform your child's counselor, in writing, of swim lesson schedules. Also, parents should have a copy of the summer-1987-flier that will come home with your child from school in early June, or available at the recreation office. There are a number of special events and programs, some of which require separate registration. Adult programs and concerts and Music Circus registrations are also outlined in the summer flier.

Youth Tennis

Registrations for Youth Tennis for ages 7-18, will be held at the recreation office during afternoons from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m., beginning Monday, June 15, through Thursday, June 18. Evening registrations will be held Thursday evening, from 6 p.m. Lessons are offered on a Monday/Wednesday, or Tuesday/Thursday schedule for one-hour each day.

Times vary for ability groups and age grouping, however, all lessons will be between the hours of 9 a.m. and 1 p.m. Friday's are held open for special instruction clinics, N.E.L.T.A. and in-house tournaments as well as make-up lessons. Classes do not meet during inclement weather and explicit rainy day instructions are outlined in the 1987 summer flier. The fee for the seven-week youth tennis program is $15 for the first child and $5 each for subsequent children in the same family.

Please be aware of sailing and/or swim lessons because there is probably a greater amount of flexibility with the tennis lesson times. Groups will be formed with two basic criteria: age of participant and level of instruction desired.

Classes will be offered at three levels of instruction: beginner, intermediate and advanced play. Register for the appropriate level of instruction. Instructors will test and may re-assign you if they feel you are at the wrong level.

Other Programs

Various other summer programs, events, and activities for all aged groups will be offered this summer. Volleyball continues from the winter, along with various aerobic exercise classes, and dog obedience training. New session registrations will be announced in local news media and cable television. Golf and adult tennis lessons will be offered based on six-week sessions. Golf classes are for age 11 through adult for those interested. A session is currently underway and new classes will be formed during the end of June. The same applies to dog obedience training classes for which there are three levels of instruction offered.

First place essay in U.S. Constitution contest

The Constitution

By Travis Coley
Dec. 12, 1986

I, James Madison, urge you, the people of the United States of America, to come together like brothers and be a part of one unified country under one constitution. This constitution is for the good of mankind. After fighting in a long, bloody war to give our country freedom we should be unified as one, not split into isolated states. This constitution will give liberty to the people and equal power to all states big or small. The constitution will build and mold this country into a more powerful and perfect nation. This nation, a nation of free men has been blessed by God with many resources. These resources should be shared with all. If the means of sharing and fair trade of these will be in your best interests.

This brings us to the question of liberty and authority. What does this mean to the constitution? This new constitution was based upon a balance of liberty and authority. It was written on the basis of protecting the people's liberty while establishing authority in the central government. These questions were brought throughout the writings of the constitution. For instance, the Bill of Rights states the liberties that the people have under this constitution. On order to prevent any one man or group from becoming too powerful a separation of powers shall be established by creating executive, legislative and judicial branches of the central government. This government would be made up of resources is brought about the nation will prosper.

This new constitution will provide the power to tax foreign goods which in return will protect the industries of our united states. The central government will be able to set up fair trade within the states of this country. The waterways will be protected for commercial transportation. Giving the central government this right is in the best interest of you, the American people.

The central government under this constitution will be able to provide protection by means of an Army and Navy. The money for housing, feeding and clothing the armed forces will be issued by the central government. The constitution will grant the means to pay off national debt due to war.

The power to negotiate with other countries will be present under this constitution. Treaties can be set up with other countries. A strong central government will gain respect for our country in the eyes of all nations throughout the world.

This proposed constitution will create a judicial court system that will protect the rights of all of the people.

The three top finalists were recently honored by the Cohasset Chapter of the DAR in conjunction with the U.S. Constitution Bicentennial Commission. The eighth grade award winners were: (l to r) Michael Cisneros, Travis Coley and Kristin Martin. DAR historian and registrar, Mrs. Dorothy Bates, presented the awards. (Alan Chapman) experience for the students and for the judges."

Some of these rights are: a man is innocent until proven guilty, a right to a fair trial by jury, no excessive fines or unusually cruel punishment and protection from unreasonable searches. This court system will also provide law and order. The laws laid down by the government which you vote on will serve to protect you, the people. These laws, the representatives you, the people, choose to fill each office.

In conclusion, this new constitution would bring this country together as one. Our country would be guided by one central government elected by the people. This country would strictly benefit the welfare of all people governed by it. If this constitution is ratified, changes that will put this country back on it's feet, earning the respect of other nations will occur. Under this new constitution protection from any foreign dictatorships will be established. The essence of this constitution is to create a more powerful and prosperous nation. For these reasons I think that you, the people should ratify this constitution.

Each year, the Cohasset DAR chapter submits the winning entry to the state where it is judged among the best. The winning paper is then sent onto Washington, D.C. for national competition.

Everyone who participates in the annual essay contest received a certificate of appreciation from the local DAR organization. There were 23 participants this year. The winning essayist, Travis Coley, received a silver medal, signed by DAR President General Ann Fleck. The second place winner, Kristin Martin, received a bronze medal and Michael Cisneros received a certificate of award. The awards were presented to the students by Mrs. Bates.

The essays were judged by Dillon, Mrs. Ann Pompeo and David Wadsworth, chairman of the Cohasset Constitution Bicentennial Commission. "David and I were talking and came to the conclusion that it would be particularly significant if we could combine this annual contest between the DAR and the Constitional commission. He agreed that it would be appropriate, especially since the commission has been anxious to include the young students in its activities this year," Dillon explained.

Wadsworth, curator of the Cohasset Historical Society and an acknowledged U.S. Constitution buff, said the students demonstrated "considerable insight " in their written essays. "They were very comprehensive," he commented, "The top essays showed a very comprehensive understanding of the substance and importance of the Constitution. They really had a considerable insight into the importance of this document in U.S. history."

As the chapter's historian, registrar and liaison with the schools, Mrs. Bates will soon present the DAR's annual Good Citizen Award to a graduating senior. This year, Lisa Shumaker was honored by the DAR during a recent luncheon.

The award, which will be presented to Lisa during Class Night ceremonies, is inscribed as follows: "through demonstration during the entire course of the qualities of Dependability, Leadership, Service and Patriotism, Lisa Shumaker is hereby awarded this DAR Good Citizens Certificate."

Cohasset Little League Update

The Yankees and the Mets played a two-game series this week. The Yanks won Monday night 9-5, but the Mets avenged the loss with a 4-3 victory Thursday night.

Monday's win went to Bill Jordan with some help from Joey Andrade in relief. David Leahy took the loss for the Mets as he had trouble with his control for the second straight outing. Batters, beware! When David finds the plate, he is tough and control comes with experience. Scott Theriault pitched effectively in relief of Leahy to keep the game tight, but Joey Andrade made a sensational 6-3, inning-ending double play to quell a Mets rally in the third.

On the offensive side of the game, Jordan led the way for the Yanks with a double and a single. Joey Andrade contributed a double and Ben Sparks added a single. For the Mets, Rolandelli matched Jordan with a double and single, David Leahy added a double and Brian Buckley and Michael Burns hit solid singles.

Thursday's game was really exciting! The outcome hinged on two outstanding defensive plays early in the game (sse box-score for details) before settling into a pitchers' duel between Rolandelli of the Mets and Andrade of the Yanks. Michael Burns was the hero of this one. Coming up with the bases loaded in the bottom of the sixth, Michael lined a solid hit to center to score the winning run. Scott Theriault had a perfect night at the plate to help the Mets cause. Billy Jordan and Charlie Endris contributed 2 hits apiece to the Yankee attack.

The two-game set between the Sox and the Braves was a mirror-image of the Mets-Yankees series. In Tuesday's game the story was all Andy Kuhn as he shut out the potent Braves line-up four to nothing. Not to be denied the Braves responded Friday night with a timely offensive display to win 10-6.

Tuesday night John Maynard pitched Bravely but was overmatched in this one by Andy and the Sox defense. Andy gave up just four hits and registered 7 K's to record his first win of the year. The Sox made every play in the field seem routine so the Braves never got anything going offensively. For the Sox, Greg Lowenhagen had a triple and Chris Stevens and Michael Equi had doubles, Michael's producing two very important runs.

In Friday's reversal, despite a twelve strike out performance by Peter Fahey, the Braves managed ten runs on six timely hits. John Maynard and Doug Ellinger had two each. Chris Kondrat and Greg Pyle each had one. Ellinger, winning for the second time this year, spaced eight Red Sox hits but pitched tough when needed. On the hit parade for the Sox were Nicky Welz, Chris Stevens, Eric Drysdale, Lowenhagen and Fiore with two apiece, and Andy Kuhn with a booming double off the base of the fence in center field. Good exciting baseball fans!

In addition to Little League news, we have a box-score from a Minor League tilt between the Dodgers and the Giants. Chip Moore and Jim Magner had good nights offensively for the Giants to key the win. Chip and Jim both had two hits with a double apiece. Jim had 3 RBI's.

Farm League director, David Leahy, reports that the league has over 75 ballplayers and has completed their second week of play. The kids play Saturdays from 9:30 to 11:00 a.m. in front of the high school. Everyone is hitting, throwing, and making great plays in the field. David offers many thanks to all the parent-coaches and especially the fans for their enthusiastic involvement.

And we of the Little League would like to offer David and Dick Stevens, his Minor League counterpart, and all their coaches many, many thanks for their patient work in the developmental programs. Great job!

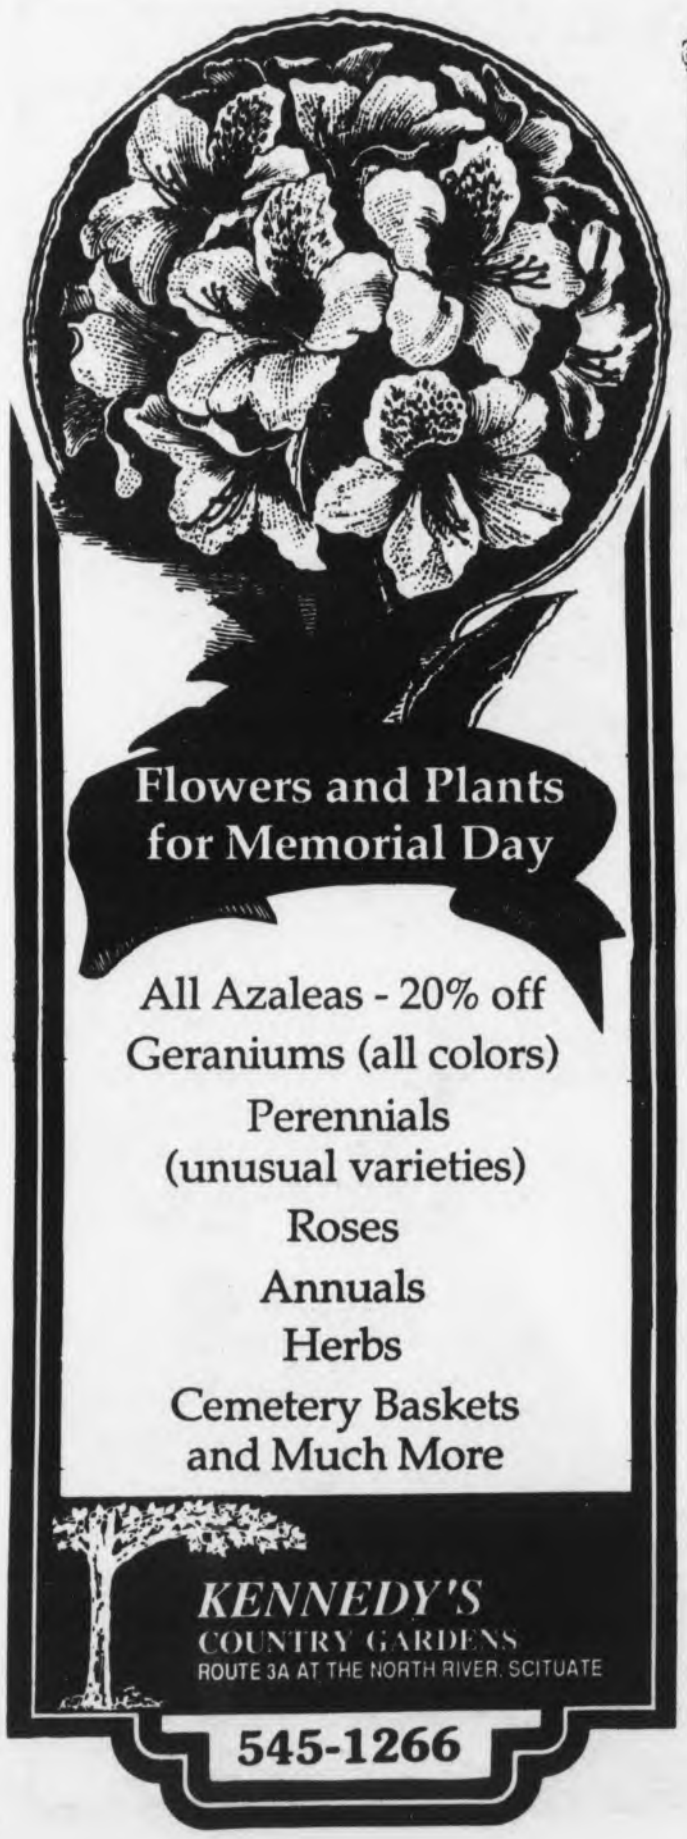
Troop 28 news...



Troop 28 BSA of Cohasset proudly congratulated three Boy Scouts: Mark Lavange, Nicholas and Michael Lelecas, who earned their Eagle Badges. Merle Brown, Troop 28 Scoutmaster, and Richard Poirier, Old Mills District Executive, presented the scouts their Eagle Award. The Scouts received recognition and congratulations by President Ronald Reagan, Senator Kennedy, Senator Kerry, Congressman Gerry Studds, Governor Dukakis, House of Representatives-Speaker of the House-George Kevarian, The state senate, Cohasset Selectman Rocco Laguelle, and Cohasset Rotary Representative, Dr. Michael Equi.

Fr. Al Demos, Dean of the Greek Orthodox Cathedral in Boston, Fr. John Maheras, of Cohasset's Panagia Church and Rev. Ritts, from Cohasset's Congregational Church, said the opening and closing prayers for the ceremony.

Mark Lavange — During Mark's trail to Eagle he has earned all but one of the 12 skill awards and 38 Merit badges, an outstanding accomplishment. For Mark's project he worked with the aid of a computer and a lot of help from the Scouts, friends, and the Cohasset Fire Department to set up a card file on the locations of the handicapped and young children in the homes of Cohasset residents to help aid the Fire Department in an emergency. This was a very worthwhile project and was appreciated by the Fire Dept. and the people of the town.

Michael Lelecas — earned the prestigious Dr. Howard Reid Award. Michael chose the 'Great Outdoor Project', the cleaning of the many trails at Whitney Woods. Mike worked many hours preparing and organizing for this project. He set his plan into effect with much

CANVASS NEWS:

With two thirds of the gifts now reported, our canvass total is $49,500. This clearly represents success in our canvass program. The potential exists among the one third yet to give for us to reach our goal of $79,000.

CONGRATULATIONS — to George and Joan Kovach on the birth of John David Kovach (Jake) on Saturday, May 2.

VILLAGE FAIR: The 1986 Village Fair was extremely successful earning a net profit of almost $22,500.00 and with each participating church receiving $4,500.00 of the proceeds. Plans are underway to begin organizing the 1987 fair under the leadership of St. Anthony's Parish. It is time, therefore, for First Parish to consider its commitment to the fair.

A small group of church members who have been involved in prior fairs attended an organizational brainstorming meeting earlier this spring at St. Anthony's rectory. We tentatively agreed that First Parish would continue to supprt the Village Fair; however, we also expressed the strong concern that the fair had become unwieldy over the past few years and it was our hope that expectations for profits and saleable items might be downgraded for 1987 and that First Parish's participation would be contingent upon fulfillment of these expectations. A majority of those attending from First Parish felt that while there are areas where our church contributes successfully each year (popcorn, cheese, set-up, bargain bazaar), there has also been considerable "burn-out" from members expected to produce significant numbers of items for many of the tables.

Participation in the Village Fair by members of First Parish should be pleasurable and certainly not overwhelming! There are many of us who feel positively about the fair and eager to perpetuate its lengthy tradition, but on a more limited basis. Many of us who have worked on prior fairs (Millie Mitman, Carol Martin, Gail and Bill Bell and others) would certainly participate again conducting small workshops, contributing crafts, working the weekend of the fair and organizing tables.

At this point we need to supply the names of two persons from First Parish willing to serve on the Central Committee in order to demonstrate our commitment to the fair. We are seeking two individuals who are willing to express our concerns to the Central Committee and who are also willing to help organize the parish members who will be participating in the '87 Village Fair. If you have an interest in serving, please contact either Ed, Millie Mitman (9766) or Carol Martin (6577).

enthusiasm, lining up Scouts and friends to work with him, getting all the necessary equipment and material to do the job. The many people who use the park, and the Trustees of Reservations greatly appreciate Michael's efforts.

Nicholas Lelecas — to earn his Eagle Badge showed his leadership ability by doing a project outside of Scouting. Nicholas fulfilled these requirements to the best. Nick chose to clean out the skating pond and trails throughout Wheelwright Park, Cohasset; a large job to tackle, and Nicholas did it to the fullest. There are now benches to sit on after or during a leisurely walk through the woods. This project was appreciated by all who use this park.

Keeper of the Clock, Noel Ripley, inspects the troubled innards of the town clock located in the steeple of the First Parish Church. (Kathy Perlow)

Keeper of the clock begins repairs

By Jane Lane
Mariner Staff

The imposing clock face stares down at the green Cohasset Common. It is a a familiar sight, friendly and reliable - at least most of the time.

Many passersby have noticed that for the past few weeks, the town clock in the First Parish Unitarian Church steeple has been stuck in its own sort of time warp. It has been quarter past five o'clock far too long. And it's bothered more than the perpetual clock-watchers.

As the town's official Keeper of the Town Clock, it bothered Noel Ripley enough to correct the problem. By July, Ripley is hopeful the faithful timepiece will be back on track, marching forward with its usual steady pace.

Ripley explained that the 600-pound weight attached to the gear mechanism of the clock, dropped about 50 feet to the bottom stair of the tower. It was a miracle, he said, that the last wooden step prevented the solid metal wight from dropping through the tower floor into the church basement.

How it happened, he can not say. When it happened, he does not know exactly. Ripley, in his volunteer service as official clock keeper, visits the tower about once a month. It was during his last visit that he found the fallen weight.

Climbing effortlessly through the ancient wooden timbers that encase the clock tower, Ripley explains that the weight provides the energy which winds this automated clock. It will cost at least $500 to repair the clock, he says, but that is a price worth paying. "Other than the few things which were messed up by the weight falling off, this clock is in fine condition," Ripley surmises. A professional watch and clock repairman, he marvels at this mechanism, built by the townspeople in 1860.

"This whole building," Ripley says, describing the entire interior structure of the first Parish, "is a wonderful old building, constructed in 1747. And the nice thing is, it hasn't been messed up since that time. All the repairs have been in keeping with the period in which it was built. My feeling is, you owe it to a building to keep it up. Angry citizens ready for battle vs. landfill

By John Magadieu
Mariner Staff

The people of Cohasset are gearing up for a tremendous tussle with the operators of Cohasset Heights Ltd. before the zoning board of appeals Thursday night.

A group of concerned citizens has collected 400 signatures of Cohasset residents opposing the expansion of the private commercial landfill atop Crocker Lane, as described in plans the Barry brothers submitted to the state Dept. of Environmental Quality Engineering.

"These plans call for a doubling of the landfill, such that when capped, the pile will amount to 115 feet of garbage," the group said.

The petition calls on all town boards to expose any expansion of the Cohasset Heights landfill.

At the May 28 meeting, the citizens' group will cite a study by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts' Special Legislative Committee on Water Supply, entitled "Municipal Water Supply Contamination."

According to the report, 41 municipalities in Massachusetts have been affected since 1960, by chemical or bacterial contamination of municipal water supplies that resulted in closures or remedial action.

Of those supplies that have been closed, only 26 percent are currently back on line. "The closure of a supply due to contamination generally means that it is lost to the community," the report stated.

New drinking water standards promulgated by the federal Environmental Protection Agency "may bring up to 100 sources into noncompliance," the report said.

While contaminants vary, the study focused on supplies polluted by volatile organics, substances such as those found in groundwater samples at Cohasset Heights.

"Nearly every contamination incident included in this report is the result of an inappropriate land use," it said. "legal or illegal, in relative proximity to a water supply source."

Cohasset Heights is one and one quarter miles uphill from Lily Pond, and is connected to it by wetlands, the citizens group maintains. "CHL is an inappropriate land use in close proximity to a public water supply."

The report noted that the development and maintenance of water supplies in Massachusetts is left to local government as a matter of state policy.

"The commonwealth provides financial and technical assistance to supplement local capabilities, but leaves primary responsibility with individual communities... In

Local 'Witches' premiere is slim

Plans for a private showing of The Witches of Eastwick in Cohasset remain unsettled.

The local Chamber of Commerce has been attempting to locate a copy of the yet-unreleased film for a benefit premiere in Cohasset. The film, which is scheduled to open nationwide June 12, was shot on location in Cohasset and various other Massachusetts communities last summer.

The Chamber intended to show the film following a gala, seven-course formal dinner at Hugo's, probably sometime in late June. They intended to show the movie in the high school auditorium, if all permits were approved.

But according to the Massachusetts Film Bureau, the producers of the movie plan no premiere extravangzas, and have not replied to the repeated requests of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce. In fact, they have already rejected premiere offers from USA Cinemas and General Cinemas.

Cohasset's week . . .

Road closing okayed

Town Counsel Richard Henderson advised selectmen that closing off Tupelo Road to Rte. 3A, as approved by a vote of the April town meeting, is legal.

After talking with a representative of the state Department of Public Works, Henderson outlined the procedure for closing the street. According to traffic engineer Robert Gregory, prior to the closing of Tupelo Road to the state highway, the town must submit plans for the closure to the state. The town and state must be made aware of any sewer, utility, or drainage area that may be affected by the closure, he stated.

The state also requires that the area to be closed must be completely excavated, loamed and reseeded, "so that traffic from Rte. 3A will not begin to turn into a road which is merely barricaded," Henderson advised selectmen.

A permit must also be obtained from the state DPW before construction begins.

Town meeting voted in April to discontinue the intersection of Tupelo Road and Rte. 3A to vehicular traffic. The article authorized selectmen to erect a barrier at the terminus of the road.

Tanks to be removed

The fire chief will not need an anticipated $11,000 budget transfer he anticipated for the excavation of abandoned fuel storage tanks along Rte.3A.

Owners of the Williams property at 185 and 215 Chief Justice Cushing Highway have filed an application for removal of the three tanks with the fire chief. Selectmen had set a deadline of Friday, May 22 in which the application had to be submitted.

Chief Daniel Brock said the permit for removal has been filed, and the tanks will be excavated within two or three weeks. No budget money will be necessary, since the Williams' will be paying the cost of the removal, he noted.

Several weeks ago, the chief ordered the abandoned tanks removed from the site. They had been discovered by an engineer employed by Cohasset Heights landfill to study the source of an odor near the landfill.

Although it is not known if the tanks are leaking, the chief ordered the abandoned structures removed. When no application was filed with his office, selectmen demanded the notice be filed by last Fiday, or the town would have the tanks removed and a lien would be placed onto that property. Chief Brock explained to the advisory committee last week that a lien would prevent a perspective sale of the land.

If oil has been spilled from the tanks and contaminated the ground, the excavation costs could rise to $100,000, he said. The chief said the tanks have been on the property since 1953, although he was uncertain how long they had been empty. "The law states," he noted, "that tanks can't be underground more than six months after they have stopped using them."

Executive Secretary Donald Andrew explained the budget request could not have waited until after the new fiscal year, "because with this litigation with Cohasset Heights, we don't want this issue to complicate that case."

"This gives the CHL landfill people one more thing to scream at us about," Selectman Burt Pratt said. "They said this is what is causing the terrible stench. They are seeking all excuses, which is one reason to remove the tanks as soon as possible."

Mooring list warnings

Boat owners are warned that June 1 is the deadline for reaffirming their intent for a mooring location in the harbor, or they will automatically be dropped from the waiting list.

Also, all boats moored in Cohasset Harbor must display a current 1987 mooring decal showing that the mooring fee has been paid for the current year.

Failure to display a decal is cause for the removal of mooring tackle from the harbor, plus levy of a fine in accordance with the Harbor Bylaws of the Town of Cohasset.

respecting the tradition of home rule in this state, the commonwealth's water supply policies depend greatly on responsible local action to protect drinking water," the report said.

Despite the fact that municipalities are responsible for maintaining their own water supplies, the legislative study commission found that "municipalities have not adequately assessed the boundaries of water resources which serve as water supplies. Without having identified these critical areas, municipalities have been unable to implement protective measures."

According to the commission, "The potability of every water supply, surface or ground, depends upon the land uses allowed within the areas that are critical to the resource.

"Leaving land use decisions in the hands of municipal governments has allowed communities to make their own decisions on the quantity and quality of growth permitted," the report observed. "Not only do these decisions impact the character of a community, they impact the quantity, and ultimately, the quality of potable water supplies.

All of the communities suffering from lost supplies included in this report, the commission said, lost those supplies because an inappropriate use of the land, legal or illegal, occurred in proximity to the water resource. Often, uses were allowed because the threats to the resource were not understood or controlled, or the boundaries of the resource itself were not sufficiently identified.

"Conscious land use decisions must be made on the local level that consider impacts upon water supplies," the report said, "or the the number of communities losing supplies to contamination will grow."

So far, at least 400 Cohasset residents have indicated they do not want to see their town added to the commission's list.

Brothers publicity," film bureau spokesman Julie Wren stated. "But from what I surmise, they apparently don't want any kind of publicity on this film before it is released."

Remembering the box office flops which followed bad press reviews, Wren said Warner Brothers is horrified at the prospect of bombs like Ishtar or Heaven's Gate on their hands. "Those two movies received bad reviews and died at the box office before most of the public got a chance to see it. My guess is that Warner Brothers doesn't want to have the press see this film first. They want to let the public decide if they like the film," she stated.

Wren has attempted to contact Carl Samrock, Warner Brothers chief of publicity, adding her endorsement to the Cohasset showing. But she has received no reply to her statements.

"I've put in my two cents worth," she said. "But I've heard nothing definite. As far as I know, there'll be nothing special in Boston for the premiere of the film - zero. I loved the idea that Cohasset came up with, but I just don't know if they'll be allowed to do it."

The local Chamber planned to show the film after the formal dinner, and charge $50 per ticket. The proceeds would go toward the Milliken Field renovation project.

Chamber of Commerce organizer Donald Staszko was unavailable for comment.

Wren explained that the cost of showing the film will be exorbitant because of the wide screen which must be used, and the professional projectionist who must be hired for the event. "The cost of doing this will be real significant," she said. "And whether Warner Brothers will allow it, is another question."

The state film bureau representative said she has not viewed the film, but she believes it will carry a Restricted (R) rating. "I believe there is strong language in the movie," Wren said, "but I was told there is no nudity."

She noted that an opportunity for a Cohasset showing seems slim, "but certainly not hopeless. I hope everyone at the Chamber of Commerce keeps trying. Everyone in Cohasset was so cooperative during the filming last summer. Believe me, Hollywood will remember Cohasset, and so will this film bureau."

Hundreds watch solemn pageantry of Memorial Day

Hundreds of residents, some carried in strollers, some walking with the aid of a cane, watched in silence as the veterans of Cohasset paid tribute to this town's fallen soldiers.

The grey skies gave way to an occasional burst of sun as hundreds of residents lined South Main, along the Common and onto Cohasset harbor for the last stretch of the Memorial Day parade.

Steve Wigmore, past commander of the George H. Mealy American Legion Post, led the marchers through the town. Accompanied by the single, rythmic beat of a drum, the 45 ans, each dressed in the uniform in which he served, stopped at the cemeteries for a brief, solemn tribute to the deceased soldiers.

The Cohasset Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts, Cub Scouts, Tiger Cubs and Brownies, and the Deer Hill School band, joined the marching veterans at the Osgood School. Together, they walked slowly to the Central Cemetery, to the Veterans' Memorial at the Common, and to the Veterans' Memorial Park in Cohasset Cove.

At each of the locations, an invocation was recited, followed by the strains of a lone bagpiper performing "Amazing Grace". The solo was followed by the firing of three rounds by four soldiers. A lone bugler played Taps to the silent audience, echoed by another refrain of Amazing Grace by a bagpiper.

Among the marchers this past Monday were selectmen Cliff Mitman, Martha Gjesteby, Burtram Pratt and James Gallagher.

Procession leader Wigmore said this was the first time in his memory that Selectman Rocco Laugelle had missed a Memorial Day march. Laugelle did not attend because of an illness.

At the conclusion of the parade, Wigmore chided Cohasset veterans by noting that the number of marchers "is dwindling."

He explained that many of the World War II veterans "are getting pretty old. They're now about between 60 and 70 years old, and there are not too many that want to march around the town. I just wanted to drop the hint that if all the veterans don't help us out, there may not be a parade in the future."

Wigmore, who was Legion commander from 1978 to 1980, said the Legion and the newly-formed Veterans of Foreign Wars Post, will never allow the Memorial Day parade to become a memory. "More and more kids who fought in Vietnam are coming out and marching, but we need everyone to participate," he explained. "I saw some fellas along the parade route and they said, 'oh, next year.' But we really need them to walk with us every year."

In his 29th consecutive year as a Memorial Day marcher, Wigmore said there were past parades that included at least three marching bands and hundreds of marching veterans. "But the bands are so costly now, we really need at least one band, and we really can't afford more than that," he said

The popular bagpipers that have performed in Cohasset for the past several years are from Malden. The Kevin Barry Bagpipers perform throughout the long parade route, and also play for the veterans and their families at the Legion Post after the official ceremonies.

Legion Commander Lawrence Sousa did not attend Monday's ceremonies, protesting what he called a lack of support from the town to the veterans' organizations. Wigmore led the parade in his absence.

John Atkinson, 17, a junior at Cohasset High, volunteered his services as the bugler during the Memorial Day observance. Atkinson said he heard about the financial plight of the Legion, called Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray and volunteered his services free of charge.

Children held white balloons emblazoned with the U.S. flag, as they watched the mournful marchers proceed down Main Street to the harbor. They respectfully watched and listened, crying aloud only when the sharp blasts were fired from the guns of the four-man military squad.

At the concluding ceremonies by Cohasset Harbor, colorful flags encircled the parade marchers. Rev. John Keohane from St. Anthony's Church talked about the special meaning of Memorial Day, 1987.

"We honor the memory of the departed veterans. Veterans never die, if they live in the hearts of those who love them. Today," he said, "we add two names - the USS Stark and Mayport, Florida. Those names recall the sacrifice of 37 sailors, the sadness and loss of the families of those brave men. They are remembered and we are grateful to them."

Rep. Murray, who had earlier marched with the veterans of Hingham and in Hull, talked about the need for future generations to understand and appreciate the significance of Memorial Day. It is a day not of revelry, but of solemn reflection, she stated, "to honor all the gallant men who gave up their lives in war, and all our heroic defenders from the time of the Revolution to the men now stationed in the Persian Gulf. "

Rep. Murray added, "this year, we add another chapter to the book. There are new graves where flags are perched. To the families of these newest heroes, we mourn with them."

At the conclusion of the Memorial Day ceremony, a wreath was placed at the harbor memorial, where the names of all Cohasset men killed in wartime are inscribed on a monument. Gold Star Mothers June Simeone, whose son Craig was killed in Vietnam in 1969, helped place the wreath along with Margaret Keating, whose son Allen was killed in action, and Mrs. James Lyon, whose son James Paul Lyon was a Cohasset soldier killed in wartime.

It was noon, and the flag was raised to full staff. The Deer Hill band played the Star Spangled Banner, and the crowd dispersed until next year.

Advisors review veterans' request

After an often heated exchange last week, the advisory committee is now considering a request by the American Legion to reimburse the veterans' organization for the purchase of 2,200 flags.

Advisory committee members agreed the town is responsible for paying the cost of flags to decorate the graves of Cohasset veterans, but they admonished the American Legion commander for purchasing flags for two veterans' holidays, one of which comes after the end of this fiscal year. Commander Lawrence Sousa explained he bought 2,200 flags this year, enough to observe Memorial Day and Veterans' Day.

Advisory committee chairman Fred Koed agreed the town is financially responsible for purchasing the flags for the two holidays, but only Memorial Day flags should have been purchased from the fiscal 1987 budget. The remaining flags for the Veterans' Day observance should have been purchased from the fiscal 1988 budget. Koed also noted that the budget, entitled Veterans' Celebrations, was increased in fiscal 1988 from $900 to $1,500.

Executive Secretary Donald Andrew, a Vietnam-era veteran, explained to the advisory committee last week that there is a third veterans' holiday which should also be observed - Vietnam Veterans' Day, which arrives in March. "We had eight men from this town die in that war," Vietnam veteran Donald Staszko told the committee. "That's the highest per capita of any town in Massachusetts."

Andrew told the committee a $404.80 budget transfer was necessary because the flags were delivered last fall, "and you can't pay last fiscal year's bill from this upcoming budget." He also said if the town observes Bicentennial Day in September, the flag supply will be further depleted.

Koed asked whether 11 gross, or 1,584 flags were enough to observe the national veterans' holidays, and American Legion Commander Sousa agreed. "Then order them July 1 and it's good until June 30, which will cover Memorial Day through Veterans' Day," he explained.

"What about our other expenses?" Sousa asked. Six hundred dollars was added to the veterans' celeberations budget last year, but that money is to be divided by the American Legion post and the newly-established Veterans of Foreign Wars post. Executive Secretary Andrew explained that the Legion is expected to receive $900 from that total, and the VFW will receive $600, which will just about cover the cost of flags, or the payment of a band in the Memorial Day parade.

Andrew told the committee he has a personal check from Sousa to cover the extra costs of the flags, but he has refused to cash it.

He suggested in the future, the Legion and the VFW itemize their expenditures for the veterans' holidays and explain them in detail to the advisory committee. He warned the committee that next year, the two organizations will likely ask for a bigger budget.

"Something has to be worked out," he said, "to get this whole issue resolved. Following town meeting, a lot of bad feelings resulted." Andrew was referring to the defeat of a special town meeting article in which the VFW requested $600 for FY 87 for its start-up costs.

Advisory committee members said the article was likely defeated because no one from the VFW was there to explain it to the voters.

Andrew said, "for the fiscal 1989 budget, we will come in with a different budget, looking to expand the celebrations, including Vietnam Veterans' Day. My feeling is that a town that can spend money for as many other activities, can spend $2000 to honor its veterans. Memorial Day and Veterans' Day bring this town together more than any other holiday." He told the committee to expect a modest increase in the veterans' celebrations budget next year.

Committee member Jane Goedecke said it wasn't clear whether the organizations were seeking to expand or were merely trying to maintain the current level of celebrations for these two holidays. Sousa said the Legion simply can't afford the type of observance it has traditionally sponsored in the past.

When asked what the committee's feelings were regarding more budget money for the veterans' organizations, Goedecke replied, "we will weigh it against the other needs of the town. If you are telling us you can't maintain the current level, absolutely, the town should help. If you want to raise the level of services, I'd want to know what you want to raise your level to. If you're asking the town to participate in that, then there's a need for discussion."

Everyone is invited to share in exchange

By Jane Lane
Mariner Staff

Plans are underway for a summer with an international flair. And everyone is invited.

As part of the on-going plans to acquaint Cohasset with its French sister-city of Souppes Sur Loing, about a dozen local families will be hosting young French residents this summer. For three weeks, several young teens will be escorted through the town, becoming involved in the activities and programs of summer in Cohasset.

But the larger purpose of this exchange visit, according to the Cultural Exchange Committee chairman, is to involve the entire town and all its residents in welcoming our friends from foreign lands into Cohasset. Although not everyone will participate as a host family, there are many other ways local residents can touch the lives of these young visitors, chairman Judy Keim explained.

"Some people are simply not able to take in a visitor from Souppes this summer, and we understand that," she stated. "But there are so many other ways everyone can be involved. Anyone can invite these kids to a barbeque, or to a luncheon, or to spend a day at the beach. Just by getting to know these kids, and welcoming them to our town will be a way for anyone to be involved in this exchange.

"I'd encourage anyone here to call us when these kids arrive, and invite them to spend a day with you. You don't have to be a host family to be involved. We want everyone to understand that," she added.

About a dozen young teens will be arriving in July for three weeks. Most of the youths will arrive in Cohasset July 3 and remain here until the 24th. Three or four others will come at a different time, Keim said.

Another exchange committee member, Weezie Welz, said most of the Souppes kids are young teens, about 12 to 14 years old. And their counterparts in Cohasset are anxious to meet them.

Ali Welz, 12, will be hosting Fanny Drouet, a 13 year-old Souppes teenager. Fanny will share her time in Cohasset between the Welz residence and the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Kirk of South Main Street. The Kirks have a 12 year-old daughter, Rebecca.

Another young teen, Carol Peatrie, 13, will be arriving at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Minnar. Carol will be escorted around town by the Minnar's 12 year-old daughter, Corinna. The second half of Carol's stay will be at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Bieryla of Old Coach Road. They have a young daughter, Nichole.

"These young Cohasset girls are very excited about hosting new friends this summer," Welz said. "They're just starting French in school and they're very anxious to try it out. These kids are also very involved in summer activities, including the Sailing Club, swim team and tennis. So the kids from Souppes will have lots to do, and the nice thing is, they'll be staying close to all their own friends from Souppes. They'll still be seeing lots of each other, so they won't feel isolated while they're here."

Another recent placement included the Jeffrey Wall family of Old Pasture Road. They will host 14 year-old Jean-Guillaume Mathiault. The Walls have a son, Eric, a seventh grade student at the high school.

Two additional host families are still needed for the upcoming summer visit. A 16 year-old boy would like to visit Cohasset in July, and an 18 year-old boy would like to arrive in August for three weeks.

"What makes this exchange visit different is that we are not saying to the community, 'do us a favor.' It is a true exchange. Through hosting a family or youth, the host family begins an on-going relationship and can exchange a trip to Souppes and all that community offers. You can go at anytime, for any length of time," Keim explained, noting that her two sons are planning a trip to Souppes, likely during the grape harvest season in Burgundy, France.

"I envision family exchanges between our community and theirs, for a number of years," she added. "I hope as many Cohasset kids meet and talk and share experiences with these kids from Souppes, as possible. It's a great opportunity for many people."

This opportunity is not a one-way street, she noted. The residents of Souppes, a country subub of Paris, are prepared to receive residents of Cohasset throughout the year. "All it really takes is a little creativity on everyone's part," Keim said, noting that anyone who is traveling to Europe is welcome to Souppes. A pre-arranged stay in Souppes can be worked out with help from the cultural exchange committee. There are families in Souppes who would welcome Cohasset visitors, Keim said. And there is a large hostel facility, a hotel, and a community center where meals can be prepared for the traveling sightseers.

Keim, and her husband, Peter, were among the several Cohasset couples who journeyed last fall to Souppes. The graciousness of the families there overwhelmed the U.S. visitors. "My husband and I speak a little French, but we were amazed at how well we could communicate. I can recall sitting down to breakfast with my hostess and my little French dictionary and having a wonderful conversation," she said, adding that any host family should have a French phonetic dictionary handy at all times.

Fanny Drouet

"I studied some French in high school and college, and thought I had forgotten it all. But after a few days in Souppes, I found myself dreaming in French. It really all comes back so easily when you are conversing in the langauge," she laughed.

The teens who will be spending the summer weeks in Cohasset will use the time to strengthen their English skills. Keim explained they are preparing for some grueling examinations upon their return to France, and their stay in Cohasset will assist them in their language studies.

"I hope this will be the beginning of many opportunities for exchanges between our towns," she said. "I've always felt strongly this exchange program is an opportunity for everyone in this town, not for a select few. Everyone should feel this program is here for them. I really want everyone to reach out and take advantage of this unique opportunity. It's up to each individual."

A meeting of all the summer host families will be held June 10. Welz and Keim described the meeting as an informal gathering of the local families - a time to discuss plans for the visiting Souppes youths, and a time to discuss questions or problems.

Welz said, "we have a lot planned for this summer - trips to Quincy Market, or down to the Cape or to the beach. They're events that can be shared by a lot of people in Cohasset, not simply the host families."

Swim club honors

The Greater Boston Swim Club held their fourth annual banquet May 11 at the McKeon Post in Dorchester. Trophies were donated by the Fallon Ambulance Co. of Milton. Catering was provided by Coach Ted.

The 86-87 season was the most successful yet for the Greater Boston Swim Club. Three swimmers attended the YMCA National Championships in Orlando, FL in April. The team also produced four district champions for the first time. Several swimmers placed in individual competition in the N.E. Age Group Championships, another GBSC first. Many team and personal records were broken.

The highlight of the evening was the awarding of trophies. Each team member received an individual trophy. Also, the most valuable swimmers in each age group were recognized.

In the eight and under age group the boy's winner was Ian Callender of Dorchester and the girl's was Lauren DeVito of Cohasset. The nine and ten year old awards were given to John Fitzberald and Susan Costello of Dorchester. Awards for eleven and twelve were given to Matt McAuliffe and Grace Walton, both of Dorchester. Thirteen and fourteen winners were Dan McAuliffe of Dorchester and newcomer Daryl Smith of Hingham. Fifteen to eighteen awards went to Mike Holland of Dorchester and Janice Silk of Milton. The age group most improved swimmer was Wyatt Callender and most valuable was Matt McAuliffe. Senior most improved was Mike Holland and most valuable was Janice Silk.

The Greater Boston Swim Club practices nightly at the Murphy Community School in Neponset. New members are currently being sought for the summer season. Competition takes place in the Boston area as well as throughout New England.

No previous experience is necessary to join. For more information contact Ted Loska at 282-7218 or Steve Quimby at 583-6581.

Have You Been Meaning To See A Chiropractor?

Dr. Richard Lewis and Dr. Lisa Lewis
Pain is important to your well-being. It is nature's early warning signal. A message relayed through your nervous system that tells you when something is wrong. As such, pain is merely a symptom and not the cause of most health problems. Therefore, the sensible approach to health is not to merely turn off the pain (or treat the symptom). But rather fo find the causes and correct them.

☐ Hugh and Geraldine McEwan, long time Cohasset residents who are now retired and living in California, are extremely proud and happy for their daughter Sharon McEwan Brennan (1962 CHS graduate). They attended the graduation ceremonies of the College of Education and Commencement Exercises of the University of Kentucky at Lexington where Sharon received her Doctoral Degree. Sharon majored in Instruction and Administration in Graduate School while holding the position of Director of Laboratory Experiences and Certification of teachers of the College of Education. Her two daughters are also excellent students; Susan is a senior at Indiana University and Kimberly is an honor student in high school. Sharon is married to 1957 CHS grad Dr. James Brennan, who is a Professor of Mathematics at the University of Kentucky and whose parents live on Bancroft Rd. in our fair town.

☐ Kitty Howe sent me an interesting bit of information to be passed on to you readers: Are you aware that there are 2 makes of Degradable trash bags at Stop and Shop? One is called Good and Tuff, the other Good Sense. She advises that you read the back of the Good Sense box and help the public and the environment in using these at the dump. Also, a hole should be poked in the bag so that it won't float in the land fill.

☐ Al Odermatt wants to announce the next Cohasset Community Triannual Bloodmobile will be held on Tuesday, June 16, 1987 from 2:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. at the First Parish House, 23 North Main Street. Mr. Odermatt, chairman, indicates that notifacation cards are being mailed to past donors; and Group Donor Promoters will contact these donors and sign up new donors.

The outgoing president of the Garden Club of Cohasset, Mary Larson (l), was presented a gift by new president Phyllis Peck (r), along with luncheon co-chairmen Chris Whonskey (second to left) and Jane Goff. (Eileen Picariello)

☐ Congratulations go to Bryan Edwards of CHS who was named Player of the Year on the 1987 Boston Globe All-Scholastic Basketball team for the second consecutive year. Bryan accepted his award from Larry Ames, Boston Globe high school sports editor. The Globe All Scholastic Awards Program honors high school athletes who have demonstrated exceptional talent in a particular sport, and Bryan certainly has done that. He has been named to the South Shore small team three times (he was MVP this year), the Nike and Converse All-America teams and the Street and Smith pre-season All America Team.

☐ The next time you pick up the local Rotary telephone book, be sure that you remember the $18,000 that they gave in scholarships to this year's graduating class! That little book goes a long way in paying for these scholarships! Congratulations to the seven seniors who were awarded the scholarships: James P. Walsh, Marlisa Clapp, Kerri L. Rhodes, Karin P. Anglin, Scott F. Fitzsimmons, and Mark C. Lavange.

☐ We hear that the Deer Hill Band and Choruses had a super concert last week, and that all of their hard work paid off! Its for certain that the audience loved it, we heard the applause everywhere!

☐ Congratulations to George and Joan Kovach on the birth of their son, John David Kovach (better known as Jake). Jake was born on May 2.

☐ Hip Hip Hooray for Joanna Fone, who graduated from Trinity College in Connecticut this weekend. She is about to join the work force, and we wish her every success in her endeavors.

☐ While on the subject of best wishes, here's to Joy Ditmar who is planning to be married in August! Seems like only yesterday she was graduating from CHS...was it really five years ago?

☐ According to his pals, Rocky Laugelle is running the place! The Josceyln Clinic that is, where he is a patient. Everyone is pleased with how well he looks, and say that he has control of everyone, from patients to doctors to nurses. Keep up the good work Rocky, and come home soon...its time for you to run the town, you've been away long enough!

☐ Hats off to Mrs. Dorothy Bates, who is one of our town's more active members...she never sits still for long, and is active in the Church, School system and the Girl Scouts as well as the DAR. Mrs. Bates should be an inspiration to all of us! She certainly is the reason a lot of us are able to balance our checkbooks today, with her fine math teaching abilities!

A lesson of peace

We observed Memorial Day this week with solemn pageantry. Memorial Day is not festive, as a Fourth of July, nor is it as familiar as Thanksgiving or Christmas.

It is not a day of revelry and merriment, but of reflection and sadness. Yet no other holiday in our year brings this community closer in spirit than Memorial Day.

The streets of our town were lined with people, straining to look at the heroes in our lives. Little children wondered what each different uniform meant, perhaps most greatly confused by the combat fatigues worn by the men who fought in Vietnam. Most of these men did not wear the dress uniform, remembering most vividly that they fought for our country in shades of the jungle.

It is interesting to note that our proud veterans of World War I and II are dwindling in rank. The parade route may feel too long for many of our aging soldiers. We're thankful for those who do attend, and make our Memorial Day more meaningful for all generations.

The men of Vietnam are now coming of age. Once rebuked by a confused country, they have gathered together, fought against our ignorance, and now stand proud and honorable.

They are the fathers who must teach the children. They must make them aware that Memorial Day, perhaps more than any other national holiday, is a day that must continue. There must be at least one day when all work ceases, reflection begins and honor is paid to all these men and women.

The war in Vietnam was the first conflict in which this country was destined not to win. There was no opportunity from the very beginning. These men, our brothers, our sons, our cousins and uncles, were shipped over to this foreign land on a pretense, only to find them selves fighting for one thing - not to stop communism, not to stop the invasion of the Soviet Union into a peace-loving South Vietnam. They were fighting for their survival.

The men who march in combat fatigues are no less the heroes for their actions, perhaps they are more. They were the first Americans sent into an unknown jungle with little opportunity for survival, and only a flickering knowledge of why they were there.

These true American heroes must be the ones to pass on the terrible lessons they learned. It is now their turn to describe to the children the futility of war, the mindless waste of technology and human life. It is the responsibility of the men who returned to tell their sons and daughters that future generations of heroes must be borne from ballfields, space crafts and classrooms.

But we have been reminded so many times that even in the role of peacekeeper, simple men are reluctantly made heroes. The world is a confused, complex place and although there may never be another war, that possibility seems remote.

The list of the men and women we honor each Memorial Day grows longer each year. It is important to remember them and their accomplishments with a simple thought. As selfless and magnificent as their actions, these heroes would wish one thing. That future heroes of this country be spared from combat - that they not suffer the sounds of war.

The First Forty Years

by Helen Lang Hooper

Hail to Nineteen-Twelve, a year
Full of History and renown
Of a group that we hold dear,
Known as Mother To Our Town
Those were days of walking nurses,
Paid a pittance for their chores,
Even with their empty purses
Fed the hungry, healed the sores.
A bicycle, the League decided,
Would improve the nurse's day.
My! our nurse was so delighted!
Helped to speed her on her way.
Epidemics then were many;
Members sold those Red Cross Seals.
Those were days when every penny
Made a difference to appeals.
Formed a Conservation Group;
No wheat or sugar as before,
They made great bowls of simple soup,
And helped to win the First World War!
Soon a carriage was provided,
Nurses drove from door to door.
Half a day, the League decided,
Pay one dollar and no more.
Twenties brought new sewing classes,
Taught the very latest fads,
Sewing for Cohasset lasses,
Basket-weaving for the lads.
And the new inventions came;
Ladies of the town said 'Whew!
We don't understand the game
Oh How they work or what they do!"
"How to keep refrigerated
Without ice, our heart's desire,
Show us, for we long have waited,
How to cook without a fire!"
Then, in Nineteen Twenty-One
Something happened of great note.
Privileges were finally won:
Women got the right to vote!
Programs by the League were good for Ladies of the town to know!
What each party really stood for,
What would help the country grow.
In the Twenties there was raving
At the changes in the law.
Members hailed Daylight Saving,
Liked the way it was before.
Fought to keep all little children
Free from work in stores and mills.
Life was often so bewild'ren
Full of complicated ills.
Then, cod liver oil was bought,
Thirty gallons of the stuff!
Members said, "That really ought To be, for all our needs, enough!"
In Thirty-Five the Thrift Shop came
To save a dollar here and there.
It brought Cohasset splendid fame,
Displayed fine bargains, rich and rare.
And the Thrift Shop helped support
The League for what it had to do.
T'was there Cohasset ladies bought
The dresses that were nearly new.
A center for the youth suggested,
Parent education, new Child psychology digested,
Entertainment, lectures too.
Yet another change appeared:
Clinics for the well and ill,
So much sickness disappeared.
Those clinics, they are with us still!
Through the Forties, day by day,
New programs started slowly, while
As time went on the nurse's pay
Increased, which brought a happy smile.
OH! There was a loud hurrah
When, for such a modest sum,
Members bought the nurse a car;
Patients loved to see her come.
Forties brought new transportation;
Members formed a motor corps,
Filled the people with elation;
Life was simpler than before.
To our staff, both then and now,
Sing a song of grateful praise!
They're the ones who show us how
To succeed for many days.
Howson, Bates and Fanny Jones,
Mary Oliver and Weir;
These are some of many names
From the past that we hold dear.
Later, Jean and Margaret,
Mary Ann and Judy B.,
Dana, secretariat,
Keep us where we want to be.
Judy F. has joined the force
Helping Mary Anne, while she Goes to school to take that course
Which will bring her a degree.
Social Worker, without peer,
Is our special Carolyn.
From what she does, it's very clear
Why our League will always win!
Oh! The Presidents gone by,
Officers and volunteers!
They're the very reason why
From all of us a thousand cheers!
Neely White and Franny Walton,
Mary Campbell, Lucy Morse,
Mitzi Railsback, Mrs. Johnson,
Helped to keep us on our course.
Ad McGrath and our Jean Cotton
Were so special in their day.
Ericsson we've not forgotten
Helped the League to show the way.
Yake and Morton, what a pair!
Mullett, Langford, our Joan Bell,
Lucia Woods was also there:
All of them, they did so well.
We salute the very dandy
Worker who's the reason that
All of us agree that Andy
Means to us "Magnificat!"
Ginny Riley, she's the one
Who helps us all commemorate
The things gone by that have been done,
The reason that we celebrate!
So, we salute the time that's past
In this, a very special, year;
And we hope our work will last
Because, you see, we're all still here!

Town needs to help Veterans' group

To the Editor:

I have just finished reading the Cohasset Mariner concerning the Veterans and the Memorial Day celebration. This town, for all its claims to be an affluent town, and it is, is nonetheless a "cheap" town. Monies can be spent on many things, some worthwhile, others not, but the "powers that be" choke on paltry sums to honor our veterans. It is a disgrace, that three young men, one not a resident of the town, one not a veteran, should have to pay out of the their own pockets for flagpoles for the Veterans' Memorial at the harbor, that the town "couldn't afford." Our American Legion has had to come up with the money for the veterans' graves. Cohasset citizens look down their noses at the City of Boston, yet my father's grave, a veteran of World War I, has never gone without its flag. The "celebration" is pitiable enough, but without the Legion's funds and organization, and the help of the new V.F.W., Cohasset would have nothing!

Population growth leads to disaster

To the Editor:

I support Debbie Cook in her letter to the Mariner of April 23, 1987 warning of demographic disaster unless rapid population growth in many parts of the world is not substantially reduced. It goes without saying that I disagree with the reply of Owen L. O'Malley in the Mariner of May 14 that Debbie Cook's letter is "propaganda" and "nonsense."

She notes that "the world deserts will double by the end of the century." This conclusion is verified by a recent study by the World Bank of seven West Africa countries which concludes that "uncontrolled population growth in subsistence economies is degrading the Second place winner of Constitution contest

by Kristin Martin

"Hear ye, Hear ye, all gather 'round the Constitution has come to town."

My fellow citizens, we are here today to see to it that a new Constitution for our country is ratified. I and others here today feel there are many good reasons why this Constitution should be unanimously approved. Nine states must ratify the Constitution and three fourths of the amendments must be approved before the Constitution can go into effect. For any of you here still in doubt, I want you to know that I believe the Constitution is the best set of basic ideas and rules which any group of people have ever thought up and written down, and I hope and pray you will agree to follow its rules in order to help the United States achieve its common purposes — a good central government and much individual liberty.

We have all worked long and hard to write a good Constitution. Do you remember that in 1766, the First Constitutional Convention was held in Annapolis, Maryland. Only five states sent delegates. At our first meeting on May 28, 1787, George Washington was elected our chairman and we delegates adopted rules and continued to meet for four months.

Old Pelutiah Webster in Philadelphia was the first man to actually write out our ideas for a democratic Constitution of the United States. He wrote a pamphlet for the board which explained his four-point program for our government. So Pelutiah Webster was really the originator of this Constitution we are here to decide upon.

I am the oldest member and, next to Washington, the most famous of the Constitutional Convention delegates. And, the longer I live the more convinced I am that God governs in the affairs of men and I likewise believe that without His help we shall not succeed. I recommended, you will remember, that each meeting be opened by prayer. I strongly believe in God.

I have made it my job in this convention to keep peace among warring groups of delegates. However, I sit at these meetings silent most of the time, looking at the sun on the back of Washington's chair.

I hope in my heart the adoption of the Constitution will be unanimous. I cannot help expressing a wish that every member of the Convention who may still have objections to it, would, with me, on this occasion put your doubt aside to make approval of our Constitution unanimous. I would not be speaking to you in this way today if I didn't believe that this Constitution we have drafted will work.

It's obvious that America needs a central government with more power to regulate disputes, organize the country, and pay off our enormous war debts. Many of you, I know fear a Constitution and say when you argue that it should have more rules protecting the individual citizens. So, therefore, when we wrote it we have proposed twelve amendments we hope the states will ratify.

Listen carefully, follow delegates and I will tell you what individual rights you will get from these amendments if you vote for the Constitution. Amendment number one guarantees protection of your human rights which many of you feel the government has. In many foreign countries you would not have these rights! You will get protection against the wrong use of power by a national army, protection from having soldiers stay in your house against your wishes, and you will get protection of your liberty and your privacy except when it seems probably that you have broken the law. I continue, fellow delegates with these further amendments: you will get protection against a trial by any method which might be unfair to you, you get protection against unfair decisions in civil cases, that is, respect is given the decisions of the jury and allowing for the possibility of a different decision if the jury fails in its duty, and further you get protection against being unfairly treated in the courts. These amendments will also assure you of protection against losing any rights that have not been mentioned in the Constitution which is yet another assurance that the people's power will not be taken away from them. The individual powers of the many states will be protected and you will also have the assurance that the voter's choice will become president.

I know many of you are afraid of giving up your state power and your individual citizen powers, but believe me the amendments will surely protect you.

I agree to the sentiments of this Convention with all it's faults because I strongly believe a general central government is necessary for our country. And I sincerely believe, further, that this is likely to be well administered government for many years.

"I* doubt, too, if any other Convention we may obtain may be able to make a better Constitution; for when you assemble a number of men to have the advantage of their joint wisdom, you inevitably assemble with those men all their prejudices, their passions, and their wisdom."

*Benjamin Franklin's speech helped make the adoption of the Constitution unanimous. This quote was taken from his speech.

Long hours of discussion led to unified document

by David Wadsworth
Bicentennial Committee Chairman

The Constitution of the United States, our nation's founding document, was the final product of the Philadelphia Constitutional Convention of 1787. Called to answer the need for drastic changes in the first post-Revolution government, that convention of 12 states gathered at Independence Hall in late May of 1787. Friday, May 25 saw a majority of state delegations in attendance, and the Convention formally opened. By Tuesday the 29th the delegates were ready to begin the prolonged series of discussions, debates, motions and votes that culminated four months later with the signing of a new proposed Constitutional document.

Almost immediately after the Convention opened, Virginia's delegate Governor Edmund Randolph posed the first slate of items to be debated and resolved by the Convention. Rising to propose a revised form of national government, Randolph presented a list of fifteen resolutions dealing with governmental powers and organization, collectively known as the "Virginia Plan." Among the proposals, the plan called for a bicameral legislature with one chamber elected by each state, the number of representatives to be determined by a state's population of "free inhabitants," and the second chamber to be elected by the first chamber.

The Virginia Plan also proposed expanded authority of the national legislature to pass laws binding upon the state, an executive to be chosen by the legislature, a national Judiciary also to be appointed by the legislature, a process by which the proposed constitution could be amended in the future, and other specifics regarding the structure and frame of national and state governments. Randolph's radical plan had the backing of both James Madison and George Washington, and its intent was to sound the death-knell for the existing and ineffective Articles of Confederation, which had governed the nation through its first six years. Even a quick glance at the Virginia Plan shows that it did not in its entirety become incorporated in the final draft of the Constitution, but it was a beginning. The scope of the plan was so great, however, that the Convention resolved to establish itself as a "Committee of the Whole" that it might discuss the "state of the American Union" informally and freely. Chairman of the Committee of the Whole was Massachusetts senior delegate Nathaniel Gorham, who then presided each day. Almost the first act of the Committee was to recommend the scrapping of the Articles of Confederation and the establishment of a strong national government having a supreme legislative, executive and judicial function. Thus the die was cast early and from that time on the main efforts of the Convention were directed toward designing such a government. The Virginia Plan was to be discussed, debated and changed during ensuing weeks, until it became but one part of a broader concept of federal union, adapted by compromise to the unique circumstances existing among the American States.

By mid-June the Convention had thoroughly discussed the Virginia Plan, and the Committee of the Whole had drawn up its own initial resolutions relating to a national government. One obvious element of the Virginia Plan was found to be controversial in the utmost way. Under its provisions, state representation in a national legislature was to be based solely upon population, an idea found intolerable by the small states. Smaller states such as New Jersey and Delaware feared that such a plan would lead to complete domination by the "large" states such as Virginia, New York and Massachusetts, whose populations were far more numerous. Some "small state" delegates even saw possible extinction of the less populous states and annexation by their larger neighbors. From these fears would emerge, as the Convention progressed, one of the great compromises which saved the Constitutional idea by making it palatable to all states, large and small.

Ultimately the bicarmeral legislature would contain one chamber elected upon the basis of population, but in the second chamber, each state was to have equal representation, also elected by the populace. These two chambers would be the future House of Representatives and Senate of the Congress. Thus was the spectre of large state domination removed to the satisfaction of the small. Long hours of discussion, argument, speechmaking and intense concentration characterized the first busy weeks of the Convention of 1787 during that early Philadelphia summer as our present national Constitution first began to assume identifiable form.

Rapid population growth will lead to disaster

resource base throughout Africa."[1]

She also views a rapid pace of deforestation with alarm: "Acute shortages of fuel will affect 350 million people by the year 2000." The Worldwatch Institute confirms this as follows: "The Earth's forest cover is diminishing most dramatically in the Third World as a result of land clearing, firewood gathering and logging . . . Only time will tell the complete tally of ecological cost, since the forest damage continues to spread."[2]

There are many other danger signs that point to a need to slow population growth in many parts of the world. The above source also points out: "World agriculture is producing surpluses, but for the wrong reasons. A portion of today's surplus is being produced by diminishing the agricultural resource base — for example, by plowing highly eroded land and overdrafting underground water supplies . . . .Burgeoning populations in many urban areas are overtaxing local water sources, fuel supplies and waste disposal capacities . . . .Nothing short of fundamental adjustments in population and energy policies will stave off the host of costly changes now unfolding, changes that could overwhelm our long-standing efforts to improve the human condition."[3]

In view of the severe soil erosion, depletion of underground water supplies, overgrazing and deforestation that have resulted from application of "currently available technology and agricultural methods" cited by Mr. O'Malley, it is high time that the pressure of population on the human environment in many developing countries, which are growing at a rate of three percent per year, be taken seriously. This is a far cry from dismissing efforts to come to grips with the problem as propaganda and nonsense.

Committee chairman Koed noted when the veterans asked for $600 more in the FY88 budget, the committee complied. "I think that's an indication we are receptive. The best thing," he said, "is to talk to us and present the case - not through the newspaper - come to us. Why make it confrontational? We know you have a strong argument. We've always paid for your flags, but you ordered some for next year, and that should come from next year's budget." Koed was referring to a story in the Mariner two week ago, in which the veterans voiced their outrage at the town's lack of financial support to the two local organizations.

Selectman Burt Pratt, who attended the meeting along with the veterans' representatives and Andrew, said he hoped everyone would forget the misunderstanding. "Next year, they should sit down and come up with a proper veterans' celebrations budget, and bring this back to speed," he stated.

Keeper of the clock begins repairs

you have to keep it in the same style."

Once inside the tiny, square loft at the top of the clock tower, Ripley describes with ease the portions of the clock which make it tick. He points quickly toward the parts which must be replaced, and portions which will be refurbished. All the while, he repeats that the clock itself is in fine condition.

About ten years ago, according to the keeper, he and staff members and students of South Shore Vo-Tech completely refurbished the clock. It was in poor condition then, he recalls, but for $3,000 in parts, the students and teachers repaired the town clock. "It would have cost the town $20,000 if a professional had done it, and they did a great job," he says.

Ripley is actually the first keeper of the town clock. It was a job he requested, he says. "I asked Mary Jane McArthur, who was a selectman then, if I could take the position. I've always felt that these voluntary town positions should have fun titles to go along with them. More people would volunteer then, and it would be a fun way to entice people to get involved and stay active in the town," he adds.

Since that time, Ripley has tried to encourage others to learn the trade and continue the tradition at the town clock. "I know someday, but not soon, I won't be here to repair this thing, and it's very important that this clock keep running. It would be a shame if the town let this stop," he says. "The town's Tree and Park Department used to come up here and wind the clock, and believe me, it takes some time. It's so much easier for one person to volunteer his time to do it."

Once a month, Ripley ascends the ladder steps into the tower loft and examines the interior of the ancient clock. "I've been doing watches and clock for 15 years. I also maintain the Hingham town clock, the Norwell town clock and clocks in Boston. There's not any money in the job, but it certainly is fun," he says. "It's different, challenging and a little complicated. Actually, a clock is very logical and if someone is mechanically inclined, then the whole process is logical."

Ripley said he is able to maintain an accuracy within seconds, quite an accomplishment for a clock which has ticked away more than 100 years. "This is the best clock there is - an Edward Howard," he explains. "It's probably the most popular type of clock in this area. Edward Howard also built the clocks at Harvard, the Boston Customs House, and in Hingham and Cambridge."

Ripley believes all clocks, no matter what size, shape or age, are "fun. They all have their own personality. I get a degree of satisfaction looking up at this clock and seeing the correct time," he says.

The latest repairs, which will be completed by Les Tyerla of Weymouth, will hopefully be completed in July. "It's a very time-consuming job," he notes. "And once the repairs are done, it will take some adjusting to have it run properly. The last time we repaired the clock, it took about two years before I had it running perfectly."

Ripley holds many memories inside this lonely watch tower, one of which will soon be famous.

During last summer's filming of The Witches of Eastwick, Ripley was summoned by the director of the film. He was sent up to the tower room, and told to wait for his instruction.

"It will be in the scene when the car comes zooming into the Common," Ripley explains. "Then they'll show this scene where the hands of the town clock are spinning around and around, very quickly. Well, that was me, spinning the hands of the clock around . They had one of those production assistants up here with me, and by walkie-talkie, they told her when I should start moving the hands of the clock.

"I did it about three or four times, and I was up here for a few hours in the heat. I'm not sure it was worth the money they paid me, But at least I'll know that was me behind the clock," he laughs.

Coastal improvements

Gov. Michael Dukakis has submitted a $258 million bond authorization request to the legislature which would earmark $30 million for improvement projects along the coast.

The funds would be used to rebuild town piers, docks or boat ramps which have not been well maintained or have aged to the extent where they need to be renovated, according to Richard Delaney, director of the state's Coastal Zone Management office.

In 1983 the governor approved an $18 million bond authorization for similar projects, allowing a maximum $1 million construction grant for one project and a maximum of $1.5 million to a community.

Delaney said the legislation proposes increasing the limits to $1.5 million for a single project and $2 million to a community, to reflect the increased costs of doing business.

Beechwood Congregational services

The Beechwood Congregational Church invites everyone to worship Sunday mornings at 10:45 a.m. The pastor is Stephen S.J. Hall. Child care is provided.

Children in grades K-8 are invited to Sunday School from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m. Friends are always welcome.

We were pleased to have the Rev. Robert Campbell fill in for Pastor Hall while he was in Paris last week. Rev. Campbell, Pastor Emeriti, served the church for twenty years.

Our thoughts and prayers are extended to the family of Marion H. Ellis who died May 5. Her dedication and support to our church has become legend.

Mothers Day began with the first "Mothers Day Breakfast" at our church. The omelets were made by Pastor Hall.

May 10, a special time was set aside during the worship service, in memory of William C. Laidlaw and Peter Cogill who lost their lives in Viet Nam. They have not been forgotten.

Second Congregational Church

Minister: Gary A. Ritts, Office Phone: 383-0345; Secretary: Muriel Wheelwright, Parsonage Phone: 383-1422; Office Hours: Monday through Friday, 9 a.m -Noon.

New members to be taken in on Sunday, June 7 at the regular morning worship service. If you have not already been contacted and would like to join at that time, please give the office a call.

Trustees continue to make great strides!! Along with the Finance Committee and the blessings of the Church Committee, we will be moving forward with three new capital improvement expenditures and the continuation of our face lift. The painting of the eastward three-quarters of the church will resume sometime in June. Coming within the month will be the beginnings of computerization, with the purchase of some basic "hardware" and a "software" package for word processing (bulletins, newsletters, sermons, correspondence, etc.). Some additional bookshelves will be added to the minister's study and complete renovation of the parsonage kitchen is about to begin! We are indeed blessed to have this visionary group of men and women overseeing the financial well being of our ministry.

Church school: Parents and children! Put a star beside Sunday, June 14 — that's Children's Sunday — All the classes will participate in the worship service, then there'll be a "Love Lifts Us Up" balloon launch on the Common, followed by a picnic. It's a very special Sunday and I hope you'll be there! This week attend church and then classes. (I hope none of you are behaving like sponges!!) GW

Youth news: Upon the recommendation of the Board of Deacons and the approval of the Church Committee, we now have an ad hoc Board of Junior Deacons ("ad hoc" until organizational details and by-laws additions can be ironed out). Their duties will officially begin next fall although we will be seeing them from time to time in worship leadership. Elected from next year's senior class, were David Shultz, Jen Coley, Margo Nedrow and Steve Myer; elected from next year's junior class, Sara Bishop; and elected from next year's sophomore class, Pam Haase, Steve Ritts and Karin Story. Congratulatins to these bright teenagers and God's blessings upon them as they begin their terms of service.

News of the community: WELLSPRING (The Hull Interfaith Thrift Shop and Fellowship Center) has been created with its roots in the Judeo-Christian commitment to sharing and service. People from Hull and several other South Shore communities work as volunteers in the thrift shop and lend a hand in other activities in the Center. Congregations and other individuals offer support by providing gifts of money, food and clothing. Wellspring is a place for fellowship and activities of the heart. The name is taken from Proverbs 4:23 (NIV): "Above all else guard your heart, for it is the wellspring of life."

Canned goods: If you forgot your canned goods for the Quincy Crisis Center or want to bring more, bring them to the "Crisis Corner" in Bates Hall any Sunday

New Members To Be Taken In on Sunday, June 7, at the regular morning worship service. If you have not already been contacted and would like to join at that time, please give the office a call.

Baptism to take place also on June 7. If you or someone you know would like to have a child baptized on that day, please be in touch with the church office right away.

Graduating Seniors (college and high school) are invited to attend church June 7 for special recognition and well-wishing upon their achievement at having reached this milestone and for their visions carrying them into the future.

Youth Group Service Project was a first for four members of our newly formed 7th-10th grade youth group. Brooke Anderson, Carrie Ripley, Steve Ritts and Matt Silvia (with the help of Allison, Judy and Gary Ritts), aided by three mowers and two rakes spent two hours at Quincy Crisis Center's new venture in Hingham, The Mary Martha Learning Center (for unwed mothers). Congratulations on a good and loving job!

High Council speaker

Brother Gary Kohl of Newport, R.I. will deliver a message from Stake President, Robert S. Wood, at the 9 a.m. family worship hour at The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, Gardner Street in Hingham.

Bro. Kohl's topic is: "Calling Upon the Powers of Heaven." He will stress the value of personal revelation in our lives through prayer and priesthood blessings as applied through the Church programs of "home teaching" and "visiting teaching."

Amy Arkell of Hingham will be Youth Speaker.

Bible study and classes for all age groups follow until noon. The public is welcome.

See you soon.

Religious Education News

Family Flower Sunday was another colorful and touching event. To hear young people read their statements of belief and seeing all the fresh, new flowers in abundant bouquet, made me know without a doubt, that spring has truly arrived.

I'd like to thank everyone for making it a special event, especially Ed and Sally Atkinson and Roella Hobbs. They took over many of the small but important details that a new RE Director is likely to forget.

I also want to thank everyone for the gift certificate presented to me on Sunday. That was such a thoughtful, generous gesture and is much appreciated.

May 31, we will be hosting a well-known doll maker/-storyteller from New York.

Martha Heller from Martha-My-Dear, Inc. will be in the area that weekend and has agreed to do a workshop for the younger children on creating "characters" out of dolls and puppets. She will be displaying some of her own unusual collection and also providing each child with their own personal character puppet. I strongly suggest your child attend this workshop. So before you all depart for the beach, come to this special event. Remember Sunday, May 31 from 10:30 a.m. to 11:30 p.m.!

LAST DAY CHURCH SCHOOL

Sunday, May 31, will be the last day of church school for the season. A special reception will be held following the 10 a.m. service in Walton Rodgers Hall. The kindergarten class will exhibit art work and cake will be served. Congratulations to the students and teachers who contributed so much this year.

INVOCATION

The Rector will give the invocation at the Cohasset High School graduation June 7. Congratulations to graduating St. Stephen's seniors: Cindy Bell, Rob Jackson, Nicole Prisble, and Greg Wallingford from Cohasset; and Lindsey Berents from Noble & Greenough.

GOSPEL IN DIFFERENT LANGUAGES

On Pentecost, celebrated Sunday, June 7, the Gospel will be read in as many languages as we can find readers! This is to signify that when the Spirit descended upon the Apostles peoples from every nation heard the Good News proclaimed in their own language (Acts 2:11). If you would like to be a reader of the Gospel in a language other than English, inform the Rector and specify the language. Versions of the Gospel in different languages will be provided.

BICYCLE TRIP MAY 30

All are invited to join us on a bicycle trip from the Bourne Bridge along the Cape Cod Canal to Sandwich and return. The terrain is flat and totals 17 miles.

Please call me any evening or leave your name and number of bicycles with the church office so that we can arrange sufficient bike carrying capacity. Skip Berents, 383-9535.

County corrections bill

State Sen. William Golden, D-Weymouth, and Rep. James Brett, D-Boston, have introduced a bill establishing a county correctional assistance program and an executive office of criminal justice.

The bill has two major provisions—one, calling for a grant-in-aid program to assist counties in the operational costs of county correctional facilities, and the other to create an executive office of criminal justice, effective Jan. 1, 1989.

The grant-in-aid program sets county corrections funding obligations at the fiscal year 1985 level and establishes a grant program based on five criteria for the grants to be awarded by the Executive Office of Human Services.

Golden and Rep. Brett urged speedy action on the measure, citing the critical condition of many of the houses of correction.

"Our county correctional facilities are in crisis. Overcrowding, limited county resources and pending court actions require immediate action on this legislation to diffuse an otherwise explosive situation," said Golden.

"I have a sense of urgency regarding the county corrections crisis and the state of our houses of correction," said Brett. "If we don't act soon to assist counties, the state will have to share responsibility for the consequences."

Town to develop mandated housing plan

By Jane Lane
Mariner Staff

Once again, the state has reprimanded Cohasset for its failure to devise a comprehensive plan for the development of low and moderate income housing.

The state Executive Office of Communities and Development (EOCD) warned town officials in a letter last month that if the plan is not approved by the state by June 15, the EOCD secretary will "direct all state agencies to withhold discretionary grants from the town." State monies for the sewer treatment project would be affected if such a mandate was enacted.

The Cohasset Fair Housing Committee will be meeting with EOCD officials Thursday, June 4. At that time, local officials will present a draft profile of the town; a project they have been completing for the past four months.

It is the committee's expectation that a housing plan will be developed and ready for scrutiny by town meeting in April, 1988. Once the plan is approved, "we can really get moving," the committee chairman stated.

"Our committee has been charged with developing a fair housing plan for the town. Our first step," according to chairman Rev. Clifford Cutler, "was to create this profile of the town. In effect, it shows the under-representation of minorities and lower and moderate income housing in Cohasset, and the over-concentration of the high income and single-family income housing."

At Thursday night's meeting, the local committee will seek input from the EOCD officials. "We want them to do more than review the plan," Rev. Cutler said. "I want them to guide us through the types of housing programs that might make sense in Cohasset - programs that would be available to us. The idea is that after we talk with the state officials this week, our committee can move on to some type of action plan - to avail ourselves of those housing programs."

The fair housing committee, the chairman stated, has been meeting once a month since they were appointed by selectmen in September. The committee members

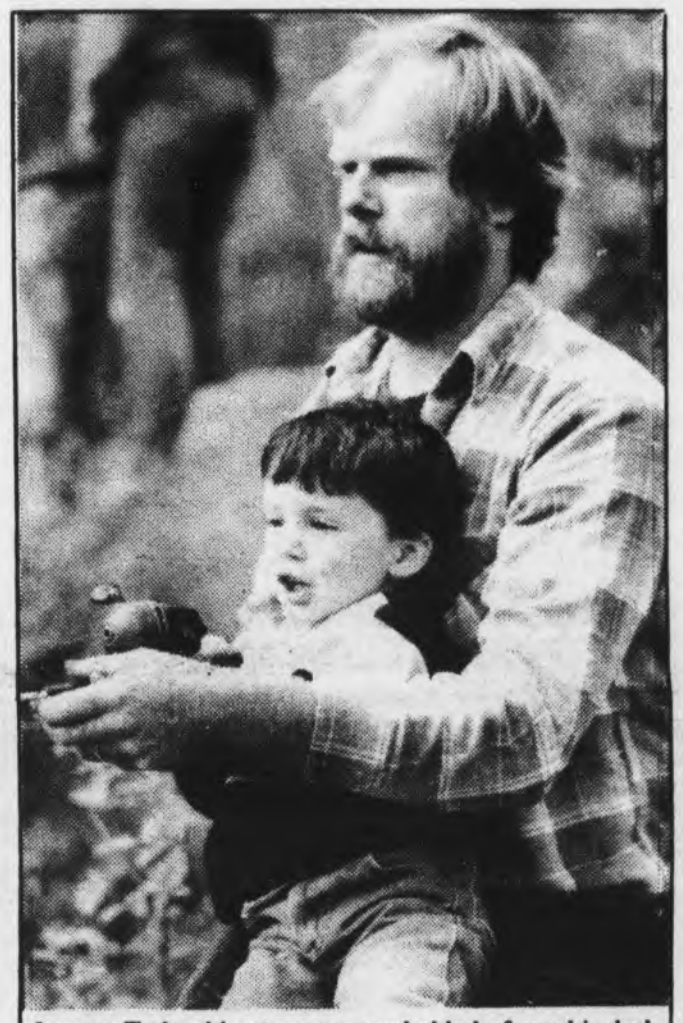
Stop & Shop hours are limited

The proposal to restrict the operational hours of food retail stores is now law. The state attorney general's office has approved the bylaw supported by residents at the April town meeting.

Voters approved an amendment to the town's bylaw, which will limit the hours of operation at any Cohasset food store from 7 a.m. to 11 p.m. The bylaw was developed specifically to prevent the Stop and Shop Co. from opening a 24-hour store at its future site along Rte 3A at Sohier Street.

The bylaw, as approved by the office of Attorney General James Shannon, also limits the delivery of food at any retail store between 11 p.m. and 7 a.m.

A similar bylaw was approved by a majority of town meeting voters in 1986, but the proposal was denied by the attorney general. The previous article, former Attorney General Francis Bellotti noted, contained language that was too general and would not be upheld in a court of law.



The 1987 version was adopted from an approved bylaw in the town of Burlington. That bylaw refers specifically to the restriction of the sale of food during certain hours.

Attorney Kevin O'Donnell of Fairoaks Lane, was pleased to hear that the revised bylaw was approved by the state. "It gives us some relief," he said upon hearing the news. "But I certainly don't look forward to the opening of the store. It's really unfortunate that this town decided to zone Rte. 3A the way it did to allow this type of use of the land. You see how nice Rt. 3A looks in Scituate, and in Cohasset to the Hingham rotary. It's too bad we had to develop the land the way we did in this area."

O'Donnell became involved in the effort to develop a bylaw solely to protect the town against 24-hour commercial operations. "As a neighbor of the store, I am concerned for the traffic and the noise. It's something that will not really benefit the town. A super market of this size is something for a regional shopping center. It certainly won't help the people who live near it."

The attorney was not involved in the actual wording

Witches to return to the South Shore

You are all invited to a Witches party.

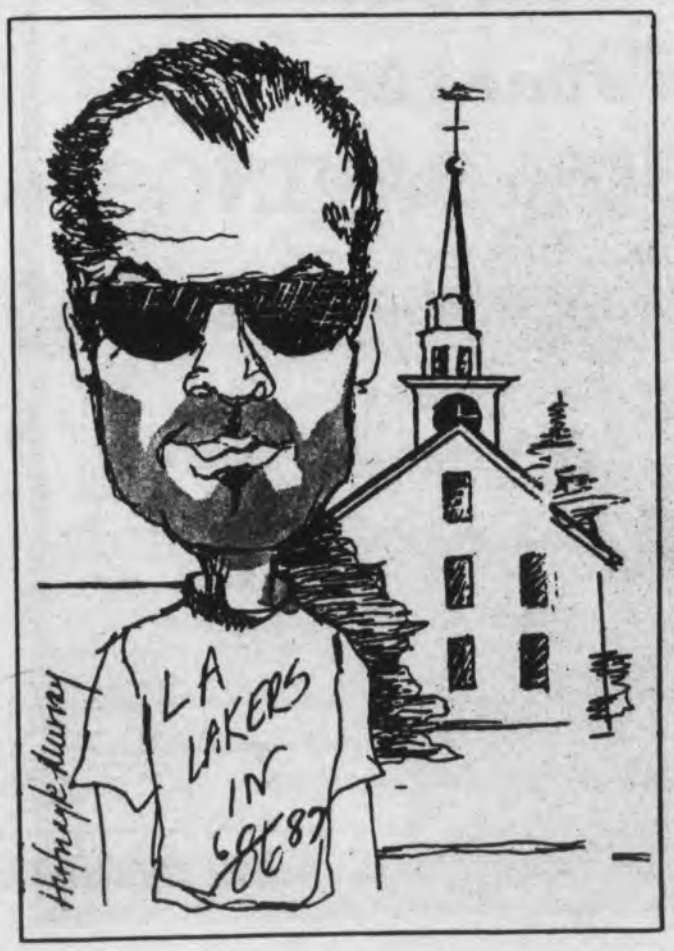
Thanks to months of hard work by members of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, The Witches of Eastwick is making a return appearance on the South Shore.

A benefit showing of the Warner Brothers film will be held June 15 at the Hanover General Cinema. The evening will include a four-course surf and turf dinner at Hugo's Lighthouse Restaurant at 6:15 p.m., followed by a motor-coach journey to the Hanover Mall cinema for a 9:30 p.m. show.

Residents throughout the South Shore, many of whom performed as extras during the filming here last summer, are invited to attend the gala event. There will be a limit of 352 tickets sold. They are $50 per person, and can be purchased at Cards 'n Shards on Main Street in Cohasset Village, Kimball's By The Sea at Cohasset Harbor, and King Jewelers in Cushing Plaza.

The movie, which contains strong language, is rated R. According to the movie industry standards, that rating will prohibit children under the age of 17 from viewing the film.



Proceeds from the event will benefit the Milliken Field renovation project in Cohasset. Plans are underway to begin extensive renovations to the town's athletic fields.

Don Staszko, along with other members of the Cohasset Chamber board of directors, worked for about eight months to bring the completed film back to the South Shore. At times, he admitted, it looked as if their plans would fail. But late last week, after about 20 letters and 100 phone calls across the country, the Cohasset Chamber was given the green light.

"I was beginning to think things wouldn't work out," Staszko admitted, "not necessarily from the people I was talking with, but from other people and organizations who had been rejected for similar plans."

This will not be a premiere of the movie, he emphasized. The Witches of Eastwick will premiere nationwide Friday, June 12. It will be, according to Staszko, "a gathering of the people from the South Shore who saw this film being made in their towns. Chamber members and residents of these towns saw the product being made, and appreciated the hours and work that went into the product. Now we will be able to see together, the by-product of all that work. It was a very educational experience and I think people will appreciate how the things they saw being made, look once they are on the screen."

'Born leaders' among the 1987 CHS class

Sunday may be the final day of their years at Cohasset High School. But the class of 1987 will not soon be forgotten.

They belong, say the school administrators, to one of the best academic classes to pass through the school. And included in the 101 graduates, they add, are some natural-born leaders.

According to John Leary, director of the school's guidance department, the members of this class have been accepted to a diversified number of colleges. "I'd have to say this is a pretty good class, academically," he says. Among the colleges the students of 1987 plan to attend include the University of Pennsylvania, Cornell, Harvard, Dartmouth, and Brown.

Although the majority of students will be attending four-year colleges, some students plan to attend junior college, and there will be one or two students at prep school in 1988.

"Not that Ivy League schools are the only colleges around, but there have probably been more kids accepted to Ivy League schools from this class, than for a quite a while," Leary says.

"This class will be remembered for the quality of their academic performance," he continues. "Along with that, some of these same students were also very talented athletically and demonstrated a lot of leadership ability. They are a sincere and interesting group of kids that have made this school a better place to be."

Collectively, Leary notes, this graduating class possessed a great sense of humor. "And also a

Old Colony train meeting

A meeting with representatives of the MBTA will be held at the town hall June 8 at 7:30 p.m. to discuss a proposed Old Colony railroad station site.

The public is invited to discuss the proposed site along Rte. 3A near the former Winter Garden site. According to Stephen Polechronis, project manager of the Old Colony plan, "the purpose of the meeting will be to discuss the suggested station site in your community should commuter rail service be restored on the former Old Colony lines."

Selectmen will conduct the public meeting.

SEMASS delay requested

Selectmen requested a delay in the time when they should notify SEMASS of their intended participation. SEMASS has given communities until mid-July to submit a final answer indicating whether they will participate in the trash-to-energy facility.

Selectmen had scheduled a special town meeting for July 14, but last week they decided it could possibly be delayed until September. They requested an extension from SEMASS until the end of September. "If they grant the extension, then we've lost the primary reason for holding a special town meeting in July," Executive Secertary Donald Andrew said. "I don't think holding off another 60 days will harm us that much by waiting until September."

Andrew said selectmen should wait to hear SEMASS' decision on the request, and if it is denied, then a warrant can be put together immediately for the July 14 date. He estimated the July warrant would contain about a dozen articles.

"The Disposal Area Study Committee would like more time to study the alternatives," he added. "And we would like to have some alternatives recommended by that time."

Cohasset's solid waste study committee will send a letter to SEMASS, asking the Rochester-based resource recovery facility to extend its deadline to September.

Presently, SEMASS expects towns to indicate whether or not they will participate in its trash-to-energy program by July 18.

An extension would allow the town more time to progress in negotiations with SEMASS before bringing it before special town meeting.

The board has agreed that SEMASS is the most important reason for scheduling a special town meeting this summer, and there would be no significant problems in pushing back the meeting, which has been scheduled for Monday, June 22.

Town Hall addition contract

Selectmen renewed a contract to architects Donham and Sweeney to oversee the construction of an addition to the town hall.

The Boston architects presented the town with preliminary sketches of the addition and estimated its cost at $1,096,450.

There was a delay in the contract renewal when Selectman Burt Pratt said he had been notified of a possible decertification of the firm during a project it is conducting in Somerville. Although he had not yet checked the information at the state house, architect Brett Donham denied the allegation. He told selectmen Monday night that at no time had his company ever been decertified by the state. Selectman Martha Gjesteby said she investigated the charge and concluded it was unfounded.

Donham and Sweeney is currently completing two jobs in conjunction with the state, the architect told selectmen.

The town officials then voted 4-0, with Pratt abstaining, to renew the contract with the architectural firm.

New attendance policy approved

By John Magadieu
Mariner Staff

The school committee voted Monday to approve and implement a new attendance policy.

The new attendance policy formulated by an attendance policy review committee met with faculty approval for its clarity and direction.

"It was the feeling of the committee that the present policy was difficult to administer because of the difference between excused and unexcused absences," said Chairman Marilyn Watson. "The committee also felt the importance of consistent attendance, punctual make-up of work and minimal absence due to family trips continue to be addressed."

According to the committee, the new policy better addresses those concerns of the school committee, administration and faculty. "It is more concise in its presentation, more easily managed or enforced, and better emphasizes student attendance - all excuses inclusive - by eliminating the differentiation between excused and unexcused absences.

According to the new policy, when a student's absence exceeds the allotted number of days for a particular course, the student receives no credit for the course.

Formerly, when a student was absent 20 percent of any term due to unexcused absences, he got no credit for the term.

Under the new policy, five absences in a one-semester course which meets on alternating days will leave a student without credit for that course. Likewise, ten absences in a year-long course which meets on alternating days results in a big goose egg on the report card.

A student will not be granted credit for a one-semester class which meets daily if he has 10 absences from that class and he will get no credit for a daily year-long class if he misses 20 meetings.

The legitimacy of student absences will be determined "at the discretion of the school administration." Requests for exception from the policy must be in writing to the school principal.

According to the new policy, the following types of absence will be counted in computing days of absence: Personal illness; illness in the immediate family; absences approved in advance, such as appointments which cannot be scheduled for other than school hours, college visitations or family trips.

The following types of absence will not be counted in computing days of absence: Personal illness verified by a physician's note; death in the immediate family; court summons, verified; recognized religious holidays; and school activities, such as peer counseling, National Honor Society meetings, student council meetings and field trips.

After any absence from school, a student must bring a written excuse, signed by a parent or guardian, stating the date and reason for absence. The student must submit the note to the homeroom teacher during the homeroom period or to the attendance office if the student is late to school on the day he returns.

If a student fails to bring an excuse by the second day after he returns, he will be referred to the assistant principal to determine whether the absence should be treated as truancy.

If a student is absent because of a prolonged illness (14 days), the parent or guardian can make an arrangement for home study or tutoring through the guidance office.

According to the new policy, "While home tutoring is a valuable and necessary substitute for the regular classroom, it must be realized that it may lack some things which can result in a less valuable experience for the student.

"Participation with one's peers in the classroom and experience in the classroom presentations are losses which home tutoring cannot replace. Every effort must be made to enhance the home bound experience as much as possible. If it seems evident that the student will be out of school for an extended period of time (10 consecutive days or more, parents or guardians should contact the student's guidance counselor.

For students absent up to five consecutive days, make-up time of two after-school periods in each subject will be allowed.

Make-up for extended absences (six consecutive school days or more) will be determined by the assistant principal after consultation with the student's teachers. It is the student's responsibility to find out what work must be made up.

According to the new plan, if absence from class is due to tardiness or dismissal, work in all classes is still due on that day. Again, it is the student's responsibility to find out what work must be made up.

The school committee's attitude toward the new policy was well stated in a short preamble: "The Cohasset school committee recognizes that the maximum educational benefits to the students and the community of Cohasset can be attained only if students attend school daily. The school committee believes that regular and punctual attendance is essential for success in school activities. It also believes that the develoment of desired habits of punctuality and satisfactory attendance is a shared responsibility of the school, the parents, and most importantly, the student."

Plans for Heights trash monitoring unveiled

By John Magadieu
Mariner Staff

Representatives of the Cohasset Heights landfill unveiled their proposal for improved trash monitoring and their views of future operations on the 48-acre parcel atop Crocker Lane at a hearing before the zoning board of appeals May 28.

As many as 30 concerned citizens braved the muggy heat of town hall and skipped the Celtics playoff game against Detroit to hear the review of an application by Cohasset Heights to modify its special permit to allow a change in the materials the landfill is allowed to take in and to allow expansion of the landfill's area.

The dumping ground facility, according to the board, was originally granted to James Tyeryar in 1976, allowing the collection of rocks, stumps and demolition debris. Intake at the dump shifted to mostly household, commercial and industrial waste about 1980.

John and Paul Barry, the present owners and operators of CHL acquired the dump in 1982.

They received a cease and desist letter in 1986, barring them from accepting anything but demolition debris.

Cohasset Heights Ltd. appealed that decision. The land court upheld the Cohasset ZBA and the landfill's appeal of that decision is still pending in an appellate court.

Action before the board last Thursday, according to Anton Moehrke, CHL's attorney, was "to confirm by grant of modification that the landfill can take in solid waste in addition to demolition debris - to maintain the status quo at the landfill."

The modification, Moehrke added, also applies to the expansion of the dump's "footprint, which we believed we already had approval for by the ZBA."

Moehrke explained, he found "contrary to reasonable belief, we did not have permission to expand operations into the three-acre parcel 4B.

"This application is filed without prejudice to the land court decision and the appeal," he added. "It is not a concession."

Putziger noted, CHL's application did not seek relief from flood plain and watershed protection district restrictions. "We could not rule on that tonight."

"It's my understanding," Moehrke said, "that this would be expansion of a non-conforming use..."

"Our bylaw limits such expansion to 300 square feet," Putziger commented.

Area 4A, which is covered by the landfill's footprint, and area 4B, which is not, are both about three-and-a-half acres in size.

"If that is an impediment," Moehrke responded, "I would ask the board to first confirm the status quo.

"Household and commercial refuse do not have legal definition," he noted. "They are distinctions that have engineering meaning and real meaning, but they are not legally defined."

According to landfill operator Paul Barry, Cohasset Heights collects between 200 and 300 tons of trash per day, five days per week.

Most of the trash taken into the landfill is household, commercial and industrial waste, Barry said. The intake of demolition debris is limited.

"We would be specific about what could be dumped there," board member Mark DiGiacomo said.

"Almost all" of the businesses which send their trash to Cohasset Heights, mostly restaurants and textiles, Barry told the board, keep their rubbish contained.

He said the rubbish entering his landfill consists mostly of: styrofoam; tissue paper; cardboard; empty oil cans; tires and metal.

Most of the rubbish is highly compacted, he added. There is no way to know everything that comes in, but people handling hazardous waste have to handle it in a special way.

"If you asked me to put my hand on the Bible and swear there is no hazardous waste coming in there, I couldn't do it," Barry said. "That's the nature of the business."

"How can you know you comply with the permit this board gave you?" queried board member Edward Lubitz.

Moehrke assured him, the landfill has been under close scrutiny by the board of health.

In response to the health board's site plan review, CHL will propose to employ a new meter to monitor levels of volatile organic compounds in trucks coming into the dump, Moehrke said. "While nothing is perfect, this new machine has a high degree of reliability. Other landfill facilities have not employed this machine - this is above industry practice."

He noted that CHL also plans to install "the most modern technology" in landfill liners and collection systems and hopes to build an on-site treatment facility.

The landfill atop Crocker Lane has been operated in stages. Area one was used mainly as a receptacle for demolition debris. However, some household, construction and industrial refuse was placed in this area before it was capped. Area one had no liner.

"Rubbish was dumped in area one prior to our ownership," Barry commented.

An earthen liner, "rudimentary compared to what is available now," was incorporated in part of area two and all of area three, Barry told the board. "A state-of-the-art liner has been proposed for use in area four."

The landfill operator noted CHL is now completing its use of area three and expects to go into area four by late this summer or early this fall. If the permit modification is not allowed by the board, and CHL could intake only demolition debris, the timing would be about the same, Moehrke noted, because demolition debris is not compacted to the same degree.

The landfill's expansion into area 4A would extend its operating life two to three years, Barry said. And expansion into area 4B would extend CHL's business life another two to three years.

Barry indicated he will be back before the board to seek further expansion in the future. He said his business plan calls for utilization of 25 acres more atop Crocker Lane.

"So this could go for another 400 years," said an amazed Terrence Farrell, board member.

The board expressed concern about the potential for future use of the parcel by the town.

William Richmond, an engineer representing CHL recommended that the best possible future use of the parcel, after it is capped, loamed, seeded and settled, would be "passive recreation," such as occurs now at Whitney Woods in the adjacent lands belonging to the Trustees of Reservations.

He explained, building on the land would be very expensive, because it will be dome-shaped and will require fine ventilation for methane gasses. However, with soaring real estate prices, it may someday be worth it, he suggested. "It does have a nice view of the Boston skyline."

Finally, the board addressed the questions of litter and vermin at Cohasset Heights. Seagulls, it learned are kept away by use of "scare guns," while rats are controlled by tight compaction of trash, about 1,000 to 1,500 pounds per cubic yard. Portable snow fences are used to catch flying rubbish.

Like many in town, board members expressed concern for the town's drinking water supply at Lily Pond, about one and one-half miles. Dr. Brian Murphy, a risk assessor for CHL said there is no risk to the public water supply.

The board will seek out further information and public input on CHL's application at the continuation of the hearing, June 18.

Boaters upset with Figueiredo impasse

By John Magadieu
Mariner Staff

Local boaters reacted with anger Tuesday after learning the selectmen reached an impasse with fisherman William Figueiredo on the placement of floats in Cohasset Harbor.

"They made a proposal and we made a counter-proposal, which they rejected," board chairman Rocco Laugelle told a crowd of about 20 concerned citizens.

"Would you tell me how I'm supposed to make a living?" lobsterman Dana Waitkus commented.

"I don't want to get into that," Laugelle replied.

The proposals were not made public, because of pending litigation between the town and Figueiredo.

"We want to control the harbor for the good of the whole town," explained Selectman Clifford Mitman. "That's our major objective."

"Couldn't you let the townspeople use floats there while you fight it out," suggested Gary Vanderweil of Jerusalem Road.

"That could jeopardize our whole case," Mitman responded. "We think it can't be done without prejudice."

David Holway of Linden Drive informed the board, "The boat owners have their own attorney and probably will take action against the town to resolve the problem for this summer."

Vanderweil urged the board to "let common sense prevail; sit down and hammer something out."

The board told the throng it refuses to argue the case in public.

"But it's my money you're spending on the legal fees," Holway told the board, "and I resent it!"

Through 1986, selectmen paid $24,035 on legal fees for the Figueiredo case. The board has another bill of $7,388 to be paid.

At a public hearing May 27, Chester Janiak, Figueiredo's attorney told the board he believes the only issue is whether or not the Parker Ave. resident is allowed to put floats in the harbor as recommended by the state Dept. of Environmental Quality Engineering.

"The harbormaster has not challenged the DEQE's findings," he said. "There's no reason for the town to keep Mr. Figueiredo from putting in his floats; they had been in the creek in prior years and were not challenged by the harbormaster until last year. The fair and equitable thing to do, is to allow him to put in the floats."

"You feel as though the DEQE is more qualified than the town's harbormaster? queried Laugelle.

"Any applicant may appeal to the DEQE if his plan is denied," Janiak said. "The state legislature says that the DEQE has the final say, not I. It's not a question of whom I feel is more qualified."

"Isn't it true that the DEQE decision is in conflict with prior restrictions?" Mitman asked.

"In 1984, there was a dispute over who had the right to put in the floats; there was a different set of issues and that went the statutory route," Janiak said.

"In 1986, Mr. Figueiredo went through the harbormaster and was denied. The DEQE overruled that decision."

Janiak agreed, the 1984 court decision included float location specifications. "I think that was wrongly decided by the board and created a technical conflict between that decision and the DEQE decision."

"You keep talking as if the DEQE is the end of the road," commented Mark DiGiacomo, the board's attorney. "You have made an appeal to the superior court, which is where our case is now."

Mitman queried whether the DEQE decision went against federal regulations prohibiting private use of a public waterway.

"That question was never raised," Janiak responded. "Federal regulations have never been issued. If the Army Corps of Engineers wants to fight us over it, let them come down, but that's not for the harbormaster or the town to decide."

The board reiterated its concern about "the private use of public waterways," saying such activity could lead to the loss of federal funding for dredging and the displacement of some existing moorings.

"This circumvents the waiting list to get into the harbor and it circumvents the power of the harbormaster," Mitman said. "We should not give up our harbor to private interests."

The selectman noted, for the past four years, Harbormaster Harry Ritter has placed eight to 10 moorings in the area. Figueiredo's floats would accommodate 36 boats.

The owners of those boats now must wait until the case is resolved in superior court.

"We believe we have legal rights and we wouldn't pursue this further if we thought we were going to lose, or if we were in a no-win situation," Mitman said.

School Committee adopts elementary reading program

The school committee voted Monday to adopt a new reading program for Cohasset's elementary school students.

"The study of our elementary reading program began last year," Supt. Stephen Hart told the committee. "We needed to look at the continuity of the reading program. We found a real lack of coordination in grades one through six.

"Reading," he noted, "is a large and fundamental part of elementary instruction.

"This new program was well thought out and makes a lot of sense," Hart said. The schools will adopt three Basal Reading Systems to accommodate a variety of student learning styles.

The Scribner Reading Series, according to Shirley Tewksbury, a second grade teacher at Osgood School, teaches students to read via the "phonetic comprehension approach."

The Macmillan Connections Reading Program and the Houghton Mifflin Reading program were based more on sight learning, she said.

The initial determination of each student's "learning modality" is to be made by the kindergarten teacher through observation. And the determination of each student's modality will be used as a guide for placement in the appropriate basal reading program.

During an eight-week observation period at the beginning of grade one, first grade teachers confirm and recommend a final determination of placement.

"No one of these modalities should be considered high or low," Hart said, noting neither sight learning nor phonetic learning is offered exclusively in the three programs. There is a blend of approaches.

Committee member Diana Kornet greeted that news warmly. "I shuddered to think it could be so simplistic," she said. "For me to think of a third grader still relying on the sight method sends me through the roof."

The teachers admitted they are impressed with the caliber of stories in the new Basal series.

"Some of the stories in the older Basal's were pretty dead," Tewksbury said. "Now, they're going with more exciting and interesting stories."

"It's important that children know reading is fun," Hart commented.

Along with the three Basal Reading Systems, the schools will develop a system of record keeping accountability by each teacher of reading.

According to a school survey, all teachers, except for those teaching grade four, teach reading for 40 minutes per day, five days per week.

Fourth grade teachers teach reading 75 minutes per day, five days per week.

Provisions in the new program will be made for "in-service time" to assist teachers in enhancing the consistency of the Basal Reading Program with their own creative, individualistic accommodations to meet their students' individual needs.

The teachers will be encouraged to explore a variety of new ideas in the teaching of reading, including "curriculum integration, curriculum compacting and reading as a process approach," according to the curriculum evaluation committee.

Teachers at all levels of elementary reading instruction have expressed the need of assistance of a reading specialist. The reading coordinator was eliminated several years ago because of Prop. 2 1/2.

The new program will begin with the incoming first graders next school year.

The Cohasset school committee voted Monday to "reaffirm its present policy with no exceptions," by denying an applicant early admission to kindergarten.

Conscious of the recent switch in Hingham policy, whereby students must be five years old by September 1 to enter kindergarten, Cohasset chose not to follow those footsteps.

Presently, Cohasset students must be five years old by January 1 to enter kindergarten.

Supt. Stephen Hart recommended against a change in policy, saying the school ought to stay away from entrance tests and the like.

"Studies have shown there is a higher percentage of academic and social problems in the September to December group, as compared to the older students," he said.

New Deer Hill School music teacher appointed

Amid protest, the school committee voted Monday to appoint Suzanne Parker instrumental music teacher at Deer Hill School.

"Beverly Riley has been a good substitute and has done well," said Robin Lagemann. "She has been endorsed by the kids and the parents and I want to know why she has been bypassed."

The committee explained that of 35 applicants, both Riley and Parker made the final cuts and were given interviews.

"It was a very difficult decision," Supt. Stephen Hart commented. "We looked very hard; we made a commitment to looking at the overall music program and our choice was in its best interests."

"I happen to consider music and art education very important," Lagemann said. "Riley has teaching experience; your new candidate has no experience teaching, while her (Riley's) teaching has proven effective."

"The way the music dept. works together also is a factor," committee member Diana Kornet said.

"I'm just puzzled how someone like her could lose that position," Lagemann said. "She is experienced, effective and good with kids. What was the salary differential? Was that a factor?"

"A lot of factors were involved," Hart explained. "That was not a major concern. Ms. Parker has had a lot of music experience, though it's true she has not had much teaching experience, we think she'll do well. This is not to take anything away from Ms. Riley."

The committee also hired Margaret Lee as mathematics teacher at the junior/senior high school.

Nationwide science awards

Several CHS students were honored by the National Science League for their performances in nationwide science contests.

Each contest consisted of a set of six to 10 open answer problems to be completed in 30 minutes.

Michael Cisneros placed second in the northeast region and ninth nationally.

Caleb Slotnik, John Manning, Steve Almeida, Andrew Ross and seventh grader Rebecca Kirk all were lauded for their scientific prowess by the NSL.

Community center courses

The Cohasset Community Center will offer the American Red Cross First Responder Training — a course required to be a lifeguard. This twenty-one hour course covers respiratory emergencies, drowning, child-birth and emergency transport.

The class will meet June 9, 10, 16, 17 from 5 - 9 p.m. and June 18 from 5 - 10 p.m. This course will be taught by Mike Steiner, a certified Red Cross instructor. Cost for the course is $65.

A Babysitting Preparation Course will be offered starting June 1. This four week program will give participants a better understanding of the safety and care of children. It will explain what is expected from a babysitter, discuss safety and practical tips for baby-sitters, demonstrate basic first aid procedures as they relate to young children, and explore ways to amuse children whom they are babysitting through arts and crafts. This course starts June 3 from 3:30 - 5 p.m. and costs $18.

Tennis lessons for youth and adults start June 8 and go for six weeks. Four to a class at a cost of $24. Call 383-0088 for times.

Gymnastics Camp will consist of six one-week sessions starting June 29. Each day will consist of warm-ups, aerobic dance, time on the beam, time on the bar, a break for snack, work on the uneven bar, and conditioning. Camp will meet five days a week from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. at a cost of $52.50 per week.

You may enroll for as many sessions as you wish. Enrollment is limited and will be on a first paid basis. Call 383-0088 to register.

Who do you call for Tom Jones noise?

There are some people whose musical tastes do not include singer Tom Jones. They don't particularly care to hear him for free, either.

Selectmen heard more complaints this week about the noise level that emanates from under the big top at the South Shore Music Circus. Missy Deveney of Pleasant Street told the town officials she does not want the summer entertainment center shut down, she simply wanted to know where to forward her complaints about the excessive noise.

"Where does the buck stop?" Deveney queried selectmen Monday night. "The board of trustees (South Shore Playhouse Associates) says they are not responsible and then management says the level is up to the individual entertainer. Who do I call when Tom Jones is bellowing all over this town? I am speaking as a citizen - who do I call? The police say they have a license, and they can't do anything about the noise level. It is not fair to the average citizen to have that every night."

Deveney suggested that in order to combat the nightly noise from Sohier Street, neighbors should point their stereos in the direction of the Music Circus and turn them on full volume. "If they were a nuisance too, maybe we could get the Music Circus to listen to us. This is irresponsible," she added.

Selectmen Chairman Rocco Laugelle argued that noise levels at the Music Circus have been monitored by the state, in accordance with an agreement made by the Music Circus and the neighbors several years ago. Sohier street resident Robert Davenport noted that each time a decibel test is conducted, the Music Circus has been within allowable standards.

Selectmen also noted that this year they have reduced the Sunday operating hours there to 11 p.m.

Selectman Cliff Mitman suggested that the time to listen to residents' concerns is in the fall. That is after the Music Circus season, but far ahead of the time when future performers are booked for the following seasons. "That's when we can tell them what we want regarding time or the decibel limitations," he stated. "Next year we will deal with these issues and what the neighbors are looking for early enough so they can adjust accordingly."

Deveney asked selectmen whom she should call in the meantime, if she is disturbed by excessive noise this summer. "I have no recourse to go to, and it's (noise) all over town. I bet if you cancelled (a performance) one time, they'd turn it down," she said. "Nobody wants them to shut down. They're just acting irresponsibly."

In other action, selectmen interviewed six candidates for the position of harbormaster. The current harbormaster, Harry Ritter, will be retiring July 31. Selectmen intend to name his replacement at the June 8 meeting, with a starting date of July 1.

Paul St. John of Stockbridge Road said he was seeking a "little security" after his employment at General Dynamics. Although he said he was not familiar with the rules and regulations of the harbor or the state, he has long been familiar with Cohasset harbor. In answer to questions from selectmen, St. John said one possible solution to the limited amount of moorings is to dredge more of the harbor.

The second candidate was Wayne O. Smith, an assistant harbormaster in Scituate. Smith told selectmen he is second in charge of the 16 assistants in Scituate. Scituate prevents boaters from hopping from one mooring to another by patroling throughout the day and night. "Roosters" are allowed to stay at a vacant mooring for seven consecutive days. They receive a warning if they remain longer, although no one has yet to be told more than once to leave the mooring, he said.

Smith, who has worked in Scituate for a year, said the starting salary of about $23,000 will be sufficient.

The third candidate was Stanley Milton, an assistant harbormaster stationed in Green Harbor, Marshfield. Milton said he has had experience collecting fees for the 160 moorings in that harbor, and noted during the summer he has two part- time assistants.

"Roosters" are not a problem in that particular Marshfield harbor, he explained, although unauthorized boaters have to be warned not to habitually tie up next to the town floats and piers. He said he is familiar with the state codes regulating the waterways, and has been in Marshfield since 1984. Milton, who has a college education and a chemistry background, said he would accept the annual salary.

Steven Osborne, a former Norwell resident, was the fourth candidate for the appointed position. He was a Petty Officer in the US Navy for two years, and although not thoroughly familiar with Cohasset Harbor, he had read through the regulations and visited the harbor the past weekend.

He has worked for a marina in Scituate harbor and is familiar with setting moorings. Currently a resident of Seattle, Osborne said he would like to return to this area, if selected for the position.

The fifth candidate was Carl L. Christianson, a former assistant harbormaster in Hingham and now self-employed as a commercial diver. Christianson told selectmen he is tired of the job-related traveling, and would like to return to this area. As a company owner, Christianson said he is familiar with the fee-collecting process and with the Cohasset Harbor facilities. He said he would willingly work summer weekends, and noted that the starting salary is sufficient.

The final candidate interviewed Monday night by selectmen was James R. Sheerin, assistant Cohasset harbormaster for the past eight years. Sheerin was also a Cohasset firefighter and is now employed fulltime by the local water department.

He said the only way to stop "roosters" is to revise the current policy and enforce it more strictly. Fees for the overnight boaters can't be efficiently collected unless there are enough night patrols, he noted. Sheerin said he is satisfied with the starting salary.

Selectmen also interviewed three candidates for a position of patrolman in the Cohasset Police Department. They have requested a recommendation from the chief, and intend to make the appointment at the June 8 meeting. The three were previously interviewed by the former four-member board, but no one was selected when the vote was deadlocked. Peter Plante told selectmen prior to the meeting that he would not be attending the interviews, and a fifth candidate, Vernon Hubbard, did not attend the interviews and was therefore disqualified.

around town

☐ Have you seen the new grandparents "Around Town" lately. I'm talking about Nancy and Tom Anderson and Bob and Barbara Donahue of course. Their "children", Nick and Kathy, had a baby on Friday, May 22, and named her Casey O'Reilly Anderson. Congratulations to all families, and one thing is for sure. . .we'll be seeing a lot of Casey cause both of the Grandmothers love to walk (and we'll bet they have been practicing pushing a carriage for some time. . .).

☐ Congratulations to Christen Suzanne Chamberlain on her recent graduation from Simmons College.

☐ How about Dawn Meehan! At nine years old, she will probably be the youngest person in the pool at the National Junior Olympics as she donned her cap this past weekend! There were swimmers from all over the US there at New Britain, Connecticut. Dawn is part of a 12-girl sychronized team that trains at McMullan's Pool in Norwell. She was the youngest swimmer in the Bay State Games last year and came in fifth over all. After two years of competitive swimming, Dawn has accumulated 26 blue ribbons and has at least six trophies. Bet we'll be seeing her name in the Olympic Roster some day, she'll only be 14 when the 1992 Olympics are held!

☐ Happy Birthday to Mimi Chatterton. She's like Jack Benny, never gains any years, just celebrates the day in grand style!

☐ Best wishes go to Gina (Froio) and Chuck Bjorkland, the brand new bride and groom that are making their way across the country as this is being written, enjoying every minute of their honeymoon we are sure! Health and Happiness to you both, and here's to a long and happy life together.

☐ In case you missed it, the Deer Hill PSO has a special favor to ask. . .please save the UPC or bar codes from any Prince food packages. The Prince Spaghetti Company is having a contest to celebrate its 75th birthday and will be giving prizes for these bar codes. Deer Hill has its eye on a G.E. Camcorder color video camera. Either send these with your child to school, or drop them off in the PSO mailbox at Deer Hill. They sure will thank you for it!

☐ The Senior class is proud of themselves this week, and with good reason! Their senior class production was a huge success, and the talk of the town. We congratulate all involved for all of their efforts coming together to make an event that no one will forget for a good long while! The only thing that can top it for the hard-working cast will take place in a few weeks, graduation!

☐ Achievement awards were presented to associates of the Jack Conway Company's Cohasset office.

Mary Ellen Neagle negotiated the most sales and Bobbie Chaplinski listed the most property through the Cohasset office during April. Their names will be displayed on a plaque listing monthly top office associates.

☐ Susan Elizabeth Starmer is among some 775 Texas Christian University students who completed degree requirements and received their diplomas during spring commencement May 9.

Starmer of 22 Fernway, has completed a Bachelor of Science degree in Computer Science.

☐ The Cohasset Boosters Club held their Spring Sundae Gala Awards last Sunday, and the award winners were as follows: Baseball, their wonderfully enthusiastic manager, John Reid; Softball, Lisa Shumaker; Donald Mulligan, golf. The rest of the award winners could not be reached, but you can be sure that they will be here next week. The Boosters Club sure does an outstanding job supporting our athletes and the whole athletic program, everyone sure is grateful to them.

☐ Michael Lelecas, Nicholas Lelecas and Mark Larange were honored recently by receiving the highest award and rank in Boy Scouts. The Court of Honor was held at St. Stephen's Church hall. Troop 28 sure was proud of their three members for achieving this honor, and so are we!

☐ Summer will be officially starting this Saturday. . .that's when the Box Office opens at the South Shore Music Circus, the one harbinger of summer that everyone waits for!

☐ Tracy Lowenhagen, Alexandra Redfield, Dennis Leary, Chipper Weier, Meredith Deveney, Sandra Dunn, Nicole Bowles, Dudley Bryan, Jacob Powell, Brian Ormiston, Sliv Ohlson, Josh Stevenson, Beth Wagner, Kirsten Pounder, Erin Powell, and Felicia Bartow are all finalists for the Art Awards Show sponsored by The Patriot Ledger. The art works will be on display when the South Shore Arts Festival is on the Common on June 26-28.

☐ Congratulations go to Richard and Cathy Lordan, who are now the happy parents of a brand new baby boy. He was born on May 16 at South Shore Hospital. Sure hope that he likes this heat spell we are in the midst of!

☐ That's the news from here for this week, please let us know what is happening in your world this week.

To our graduates

Another brief year has passed, and another proud class of graduates will pass before us. It may have seemed like an eternity for them. But for us the years have flashed in front of our eyes.

Certain events of your young lives will remain with you forever. Your prom, a particular teacher, a certain football or softball game. But most of your time spent in high school will be blurred with the passing years. Memories of the happy, sad, trying and tumultuous times spent inside Cohasset High will grow more dim as you experience your future.

As you begin your college or employment career, you will meet new people, make new friends. The old buddies from high school will be set aside for new relationships and new experiences. The next years will be as exciting, fulfilling and rewarding as the past several - perhaps even more. A new adventure awaits you, and you should be eager and prepared to begin.

Leaving the comfort of longtime friends, the nuturing of your family is indeed a difficult transition. As you prepare to begin the next step of your journey, the thought of separation looms like a frightening apparition. You are likely fearful of the move, yet intrigued by the unknown. The thought of experiencing the new is intoxicating to the young adventurer.

The message we send to you now is to enjoy these days and live them with all the vitality of your youth. Savor them and keep your memories alive as you travel through your future.

Don't forget the friends you've made, the teachers who struggled to keep the fire of knowledge alive within you. You will soon realize these were among the best days of your life.

Along with the new friends you will meet and the lives that will affect yours forever, your future will hold many more days of learning. Keep that urge to learn burning inside you. Only then will you continue to gather the wisdom you will need to make the decisions of your future.

Keep that fire of knowledge burning inside you. Only then can you fully appreciate the future and be grateful for the past you have left behind. We wish you the best in the years ahead. Look ahead with passionate enthusiasm to the opportunities that await you.

And turn back without hesitation. We will be here for you, as always.

A reminder to parents

The fire this past week at the Cohasset Community Center should serve as a reminder. As responsible parents, we should be aware at all times of the whereabouts of our children.

Days are growing longer, and schooldays are coming to a close. But that is no excuse for idle teens to be standing around street corners. A large gathering of kids is a situation beckoning to occurr. They may all be terrific kids, but together in a gang they tend to do things they would never accomplish alone.

We wish everyone a wonderful, restful summer. But parents - keep watch.

The return of the docks to the harbor signal the start of June 29th season for the Cohasset Sailing Club on Government Island.

Cohasset Sailing Club season afloat

The start of the 1987 season at the Cohasset Sailing Club began several weeks ago with the return of the club's floats to Cohasset Harbor.

According to Commodore Paul Carlson, the deadline for returning membership applications was June 1. However, if you have misplaced yours, copies can be obtained from Membership Chairman, Harry St. Onge, 383-9457. Junior training classes begin Monday, June 29.

Other officers for the 1987 season include Steve Bartow, Vice Commodore; Jeff Bettinger, Treasurer, and Robert Davenport, Clerk.

Training programs will be under the direction of returning Chief Instructor, Allan Cooke and Adult Instructor, Robert Davenport.

The Cohasset Sailing Club is a non-profit organization founded in 1960 and open to any town resident. It offers a complete program of instruction with six levels of training from beginning Able Seaman to adult intermediate.

Last season the club added three new turnabout sailboats, bringing the total to six turnabouts and a fleet of ten 15' Mercurys.

Junior sailors can choose from four different levels of instruction based on age and sailing ability. Classes are held three days a week for two hours and include classroom instruction and practical application on the water. Juniors do not need sailing experience, however, they must have completed the fourth grade by June 1987 or be at least ten years old by Labor Day, 1987.

Adult training is scheduled for three hours on Saturday and Sunday mornings and is available in basic or intermediate instruction. Classroom time is combined with on the water instruction in boat handling, seamanship and racing in the outer harbor.

For the racing family, there's the Stanton Series which allows parents and juniors to share racing competiton on Wednesday evenings.

In addition to sailing instruction, club membership allows free use of all boats any time they are not being used for classes. Generally, this is any time after 4 p.m. on weekdays and after 12 noon on weekends. Dinghy space for 72 boats is also available as well as shore berths for small boats such as Sunfish, Laser and Windsurfers.

Club members are active participants in various inter-club regattas, during the sailing season and a clam bake and awards day program round out the social activities.

willingness to help," he adds. "There was a real sense of community among them. They were a very cooperative group, a bunch of good kids. In fact, they were one of the more personable classes I have worked with. They are all very likeable."

The counselor, who has personally assisted one third of the group as their guidance counselor the past six years, says there is "great natural leadership ability in this class. They are very definitely people who enjoy the leadership role and are willing to do the work that goes along with it."

One of the more outstanding efforts by this class has been its ability to strengthen and revive the Student Council program. "Mr. (John) DeLorenzo has kept them hopping, and they've done a great job. They've breathed a sense of school pride back into this school."

Through various senior activities, such as the senior class show, and productions such as Eddie Was Here, the senior class has established a leading role model for the younger students, he says. "Anything you asked this class to do, they did it. They took the responsibility and handled it well."

It has been a tradition for Cohasset schools to produce high academic achievers, and this class has lived fully to that expectation."The nice thing is, we have been able to maintain that high level of quality within the school system. I believe we prepare our students well for the future. For years, kids from Cohasset have gone off to college and find themselves just as well prepared as their college classmates. They come to us and tell us how well prepared they were, and that's gratifying," he adds.

This past week the school has been empty without the presence of the senior class. No one has felt the loneliness more than Principal Mary Ellen Gallagher and Assistant Principal John DeLorenzo.

"They're a great class - a great bunch of kids," Gallagher says, noting that the departing students were the first class to graduate under the school's two new administrators.

"We were just talking," DeLorenzo adds, "and we were saying how usually at the end of the year, we all feel kind of happy. But we actually feel lonely now. This was a great class. They made it the year of spirit and school wide pride. It was a super, cooperative class.

"And if I had to say anything about the class of 1987, it was that they went out of here with class. This was definitely a class with class."

The principal agrees, noting that the seniors this year were well aware of the leadership role they assumed in September. "We talked to the seniors about the need to serve as role models for the younger students, and they certainly did. Not only were the class leaders examples to the school, but the remaining seniors were all fine examples to the younger kids here," she says.

DeLorenzo and Gallagher recall how the seniors maintained their unsupervised area of the cafeteria without proding from teachers. "Throughout the year the seniors were given privileges,and not once did they abuse them," she notes. "They showed tremendous responsibility. The two of us have very poignant feelings about the class of 1987. We looking forward to this week's events and seeing them again."

DeLorenzo notes that the Student Council succeeded this year because of the cooperative spirit of this talented and academic-minded class.

Gallagher adds, "We both came to Cohasset at a fortunate time. There is no question, these kids are on top, all around."

Class President Eric Maki says more than anything, he will remember his classmates as a unified group of close friends. "We were all friends," he says. "We really got together for a lot of activities, especially the class show. We pulled together throughout the year and remained close friends.

"I think definitely we've shown that we had something to prove socially and academically. I'd like to think we have proved that," he adds.

After being with the same group of 100 kids for the past 12 years, Maki guessed the class of 1987 will likely be remembered for its academic abilities and achievements. "We were probably in direct contrast to previous classes, but that is how we wanted to be remembered. I think we've succeeded in obtaining all the goals we set for our last year here," Maki says.

Selectmen should come to compromise with Bill Figueiredo

To the Editor:

I feel the Selectman of the Town of Cohasset are not acting in the best interests of the townspeople in regard to their suit against float owner Wm. Figueiredo of Parker Avenue.

Billy (as we all know him), provides a valuable and much needed service to the townspeople and general boating public which apparently the Town of Cohasset is unwilling or unable to provide itself. Why should the town cater to the first few people (6-8) on the mooring waiting list, when 36 people are better served by a reliable and safe mooring area complete with private parking area that is provided by Mr. Figueiredo?

Letters

Selectman Mitman's concerns are three: 1) That people using the floats are circumventing the harbor mooring waiting list. When the top person on that waiting list has been on that list for 15 years, it offers little hope for present or future Cohasset boatowners to ever have a harbor mooring in their lifetime. So if a boatowner wants to pay to use the harbor, what harm can be in that? 2) Private use of public waterways would hamper future use of federal funds in harbor dredging projects. When was the last time Cohasset harbor was dredged? The floats have been approved by the DEQE which overruled the harbormaster's ruling. 3) The floats displace 8-10 town harbor moorings. Wouldn't the town and the general boating public be better served by allowing 36 slips on the floats rather than 8-10 on the list? Those on the endless waiting list also have the option of mooring their boats on Figueiredo's slips.

The town has spent to date $25,035.56 of taxpayers dollars on this frivolous suit which does not serve to protect the public good. Let's get our priorities together and come to a compromise solution which will serve both Wm. Figueiredo and the town and get on with the business of enjoying one of Cohasset's greatest assets its beautiful harbor.

The regular Sunday meetings for all age groups, will follow until 12 noon. The public is welcome at all meetings.

Bike ride hard work

From the 15 entrants in the recent sixth annual 100-mile bike ride, run by the Mormon Church of Hingham, seven completed the course. The bikers began in Sturbridge Village about 8 a.m. and proceeded to the first check point in Oxbridge Falls, then on to the LDS chapel in Foxboro. The final destination was Norwell at the home of Bob Chatfield, one of the leaders of the trip.

One youth biker from Marshfield completed the course. Others found 60 miles their limit.

Hingham Ward bishop, Brad Johnson, biked the entire distance. He had participated recently in the Boston Marathon.

Citizens group endorses phased plan

The MBTA's citizens advisory committee has endorsed a proposal for phased restoration of the Old Colony Line, with the provision that full service to Boston is ultimately reactivated on all three branches.

The committee voted 14 to 3 in support of the phased-in construction proposal.

At the CAC's May 28 meeting in Quincy, some committee members said they were skeptical of the phased construction proposal. They are concerned that after the first phase, with partial service reactivated, the MBTA will drop plans to complete restoration of the commuter rail service on the three branches of the Old Colony Line: Plymouth, Middleboro, and the Greenbush section of Scituate.

During the first phase of this proposal, rail service would be restored for the entire length of the Middleboro line, and partially on the Plymouth line. In both cases, trains would run as far as the Braintree MBTA station, where passengers would transfer to the red line. Subsequent phases would reactivate service on the Greenbush line to Scituate, complete the Plymouth branch, and connect the Old Colony Line with South Station in Boston via a new Neponset River Bridge.

Scituate selectman Richard Bowen said two years ago, the residents of South Shore towns voted overwhelmingly in favor of restored commuter rail service. Support of phased construction could mean the entire project will not be completed, that the MBTA would abandon it after the initial phase.

Bowen added he is not convinced by a recent Dukakis administration proposal for a $190 million bond authorization, saying "that doesn't mean the bonds will be issued."

Committee member Andy McClurg of Boston said people are concerned state officials will pursue the routes that provide the fewest environmental obstacles. He said he could support the phased reactivation, as long as there is an eventual connection to Boston.

Michael Williamson of Brockton said the believes state transportation secretary Frederick Salvucci has given those assurances of full restoration. The state's $190 million bond authorization shows that committment, he said, noting this amount is approximately half the estimated cost to restore commuter rail service.

The phased approach means construction could begin on portions of the Old Colony Line as early as the fall of 1988, with service to Braintree by the end of 1991.

Suspicious Community Center fire investigated

By Jane Lane
Mariner Staff

A fire of suspicious origin caused damage to the front of the Cohasset Community Center last week. Eight residents, including three children, escaped uninjured.

A gaping hole underneath a first floor window at the center was caused by the fire which began about 10 p.m. May 27. A resident of one of the three apartments on the center's third floor discovered the fire, alerted other residents and notified the fire department.

Damage to the building was estimated by the fire department at about $5,000. Most of the damage to the building has been repaired. No classes were cancelled because of the incident, although a class was conducted in the first floor of the building until eight that night.

The fire was contained to the front of the building, hidden from view by shrubs on the lawn. The rear of the building, where an addition will be constructed this summer, was not affected by the fire. Firefighters, in an effort to locate the fire's origin, had to break through two rear doors to reach the cellar where they had suspected the fire began.

According to Judy Volungis, director of the community center, a carpenter who repaired the damage found a book of matches which had been lit and stuffed under a clapboard beneath the window.

The eight residents who live in the three rental units on the third floor were evacuated and unharmed during the blaze. Smoke detectors located throughout the building were sounding just as one resident came in the front door and noticed the fire at midnight. The fire department responded immediately, Volungis stated.

Looking over the repairs to the building, Volungis wondered why anyone would set fire to a building which houses residents, including three school-aged children.

"There's a bunch of teenagers who hang around the corner across from the center each night," she said. "They obviously have nothing to do. But I wonder if their parents know they just hang around the street corners all night.

"I just want to alert parents that these kids are hanging around, when they should be home. These parents should know where their kids are, and obviously they don't," she added."Whoever set this fire should know that several people could have been injured if that fire wasn't detected. We could have had a real tragedy on our hands."

Classes at the center began on schedule Thursday despite the late night fire last week.

Construction is set to begin this week on the addition to the community center. The total cost of the project is about $375,000, which will be paid by donations. Currently, the community center has about half the necessary amount, with a major fundraiser about to begin.

The center recently received a large check from the Stop and Shop, along with a $20,000 anonymous donation. The Cohasset Savings Bank also donated $2,500 to the project.

"We're going to have to borrow the other half," Volungis said, "so that construction can proceed. But once the construction starts, I think people will see what we are doing here and the donations will really start to flow."

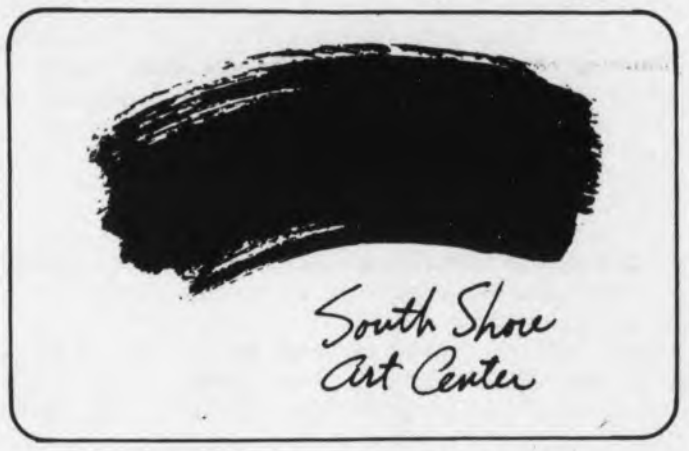
South Shore Arts Center prepares for opening

The beginning of a new era marked by the opening of a new facility comes for the South Shore Art Center on the eve of its 32nd annual summer arts festival.

Kicking off the Festival is a "Sneak Preview Party" June 26 in the new building for benefactors, patrons and sponsors of the South Shore Art Center. Guests will be given a grand tour of the building and will enjoy a buffet supper catered by Bare Cove Gourmet of Hingham and dancing to the music of "A Formal Affair", a five-piece dance band. Reservations may be made by calling the Center, 383-9548.



For three days — June 26, 27 and 28 — the Cohasset Common will come alive with performers, craftspeople and artists.Hanging under the brightly striped tents will be the juried exhibits in painting, watercolor, graphics, pastels, mixed media, sculpture and photography along with the members' exhibit open to all South Shore Art Center artist members and the Patriot Ledger Children's Art Show.

Interspersed throughout the festival weekend will be performances by the Just Around the Corner Theater, the Wickford Express, the Texas Instruments, the Summer Dance Theatre of Cape Cod, Dan Butterworth and his Marionettes and the Back Bay Brass Quintet. Rounding out the three days will be an invitational exhibit, an artworks raffle, children's workshops and artists' demonstrations.

The President's Choice Exhibit with works by painter John Tracey and sculptor Peter Lipsitt will inaugurate the new invitational gallery. The formal ribbon cutting ceremony for the Center's new home will come during the opening reception of this exhibit Friday, June 26, 6-8 p.m. The public is invited to view for the first time this facility just around the corner from the little red flat iron building which has for so long served as the Center's home. Music during the opening reception will be provided by violinist Jane Ezbicki, string and orchestra director for Wayland Public Schools.

Mime, magic and miracles will be performed by Just Around the Corner Company, Cambridge based professional theater company, Saturday, June 27 at 11 a.m. in the Cohasset Town Hall. Jim Vetter will create for his audience a fantasy world designed to touch the heart and challenge the imagination. With characters ranging from an old balloon seller to a young boy who wants to fly to a malfunctioning robot, he explores the importance of taking chances and expressing feelings. Spectators are selected to join in the performance.

British Isle ballads, drinking songs, American old-timeys, Irish tunes, Canadian and Cajun songs, original compositions and contemporary songs will be heard on the Common by the Wickford Express, strolling musicians, Saturday at 1 p.m. A delight to listeners of all ages, the five members of the Wickford Express play in different combinations of one another and on an array of instruments. From the boisterous sea chantey to the most beautiful ballad, the powerful acappella singing is rich with harmony.

A bluegrass band concert on the Common Saturday at 3 p.m. will be performed by the Texas Instruments, a four-member band who perform on the radio, in coffeehouses, at country fairs and jamborees and on television. The group's material ranges from traditional to very contemporary bluegrass and includes many original tunes.

Returning for a third summer is choreographer/director Heather Shepley and the Summer Dance Theatre of Cape Cod. Performing Sunday, June 28 at 1 p.m. on the Common, the Summer Dance Theatre will use creative movement to interpret for its audience varius shades of human experience. Twenty dancers perform a repertoire of modern, jazz, ballet, and dramatic works.

The whim of an invisible force, that of Dan Butterworth and his Marionettes, will be felt during a delightful performance by this man and his marionettes on Sunday at 2 p.m. in the Town Hall. As his marionettes begin to dance, to move, to prance, he enchants his audience with the magical splendor of puppetry and to the surprise of everyone the marionettes appear among the audience sitting on heads, crawling onto laps or sashaying up and down the aisles. Dan Butterworth and his Marionettes have played at numerous colleges, schools, civic functions, theaters and public gatherings throughout the Northeast.

Rounding out the cast of performers will be a chamber music concert by the Back Bay Brass Quintet Sunday at 4 p.m. on the Common. Unlike many other chamber music groups the Back Bay Brass Quintet uses many of its own arrangements and adapts every program to meet the interests of each audience. Formed under the auspices of Boston University and the Empire Brass Quintet, the Back Bay Brass Quintet has become dedicated to broadening the role of brass instruments in chamber music and advancing the form of the chamber ensemble in the world of music.

Throughout the festival weekend, the beautiful music of Cohasset's St. Stephen's Church carillon will ring out over the Common. The 51-bell Jessie M. Barron Memorial Carillon will be played by carillonneurs Mary Kennedy of Cohasset and JeanBroe of Scituate, both former students of Earl Chamberlain and currently associate carillonneurs at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church.

As the 32nd annual South Shore Arts Festival dawns on the Cohasset Common signalling the beginning of summer, it will also mark the beginning of a new era for the South Shore Art Center.

Festival goers may obtain more complete information on all the activities of festival by calling the South Shore Art Center at 383-9548. A nominal $1.00 fee will be charged for certain performances. The South Shore Art Center is supported in part by a grant from the Mass. Council on the Arts and Humanities, a state agency.

Science Center Kids' Festival June 20

There will be "Oceans of Fun" at South Shore Natural Science Center's Kids' Festival on Saturday, June 20, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Walk inside a 75-foot Fin Whale—see his backbone and baleen, hear whale songs. Meet and learn about sea creatures of New England at the Living Tide Pool. King Neptune will be visiting and, back by popular demand, Comedy Attack will be performing their energetic acrobatic/juggling extravaganza!

Have a "Whale of a Time" with sponge prints, games, face painting and much, much more. Landlubbers Galley will be open all day for refreshments.

Kids' Festival is funded in part by the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities, a State Agency, whose funds are recommended by the Governor and the Legislature.

Admission to Kids' Festival is $1.50 for adults and 75-cents for children 3 to 14 years. Children under 3-years old are admitted free.

South Shore Natural Science Center is on Jacobs Lane in Norwell, just off Route 123 and just two miles from Route 3. Call 659-2559 for more information.

Town works to develop state-mandated housing. . .

examined census data for the most part, he explained, comparing the data with the Standard Metro Statistical Area figures which clearly indicates the under-representation and over-centration of the town's population.

"We started off knowing zero," Rev. Cutler noted. "We first met with an attorney from the civil rights division of the Norfolk County District Attorney's office. It's only been in the last couple of months that we have clearly understood our role and the needs of the town. Now we are eagerly looking to take the steps necessary to implement a plan."

In the letter sent by EOCD in May to selectmen, the state officials accused the town of "not taking any other steps to develop a specific local strategy for the development of affordable housing. It has now been more than a year since Cohasset was first notified that it was at risk of losing state discretionary grants because of its failure to provide opportunities for low and moderate-income housing."

The state officials warned Cohasset that unless a plan is approved by the June deadline, state discretionary grants will be withheld. In addition, the state will conclude that Cohasset is "unreasonably restrictive of housing growth. this determination will only be withdrawn upon a showing by the town that it has made a significant effort toward redirecting its policies toward the development of affordable housing."

At selectmen's meeting Monday night, Selectman Martha Gjesteby asked if they could discuss the correspondence. She stated, "I think we need to seriously explore some type of housing to satisfy the state. This has been going on for years. My impression is that we only need four to six units. We have the Government Island property; perhaps we could divide that into more units or find some town-owned land for the units we need."

Executive Secretary Donald Andrew, who along with Selectman Cliff Mitman met with EOCD officials last spring, defended the town and noted, "We have taken significant steps. The Fair Housing plan is being worked on by our new committee, with help from the DA's office. The committee is hoping to develop a plan sometime this fall."

Selectman James Gallagher, a member of the Fair Housing Committee, echoed Andrew's views and said the members have strived to meet all the requirements established by the state. "We are well on our way," he said. "We will respond to this latest request."

Gjesteby cautioned town officials "not to jeopardize town grant money."

But Andrew explained that a mix-up in communications between the state and the town must have occurred, since the EOCD is apparently unaware of the Fair Housing Committee and its efforts to produce such a housing plan. "There have been changes in personnel in that state office," he explained, "and maybe there were crossed lines of communications."

'Witches of Eastwick' to return to So. Shore. . .

Staszko explained that the Cohasset Chamber was a leading proponent for this movie, and urged local officials to support the filming in the community. "Wayne Sawchuk was president of the Chamber, and he put a lot of work into getting this movie in the town. The Chamber received a lot of help from the South Shore Chamber of Commerce and the Massachusetts Film Bureau.

Witches, starring Jack Nicholson, Cher, Susan Sarandon, and Michelle Pfeiffer, was filmed in various South Shore locations last summer. Hundreds of film crew members crowded into Cohasset streets for seven weeks, using locations and buildings around the Common, the harbor, Beach Street and Cohasset Village.

Other South Shore locations which are now captured on celluloid include Scituate Harbor and Front Street, Damon's Point Road and Trouants Island in Marshfield, the Old Ship Church on Hingham's Main Street, Stonehouse Gardens in Norwell and at the prestigious Milton Academy.

The production crew then moved up to The Castle at Crane's Beach in Ipswich for a September shoot. Final touches were added at the studio in Los Angeles.

Hundreds of residents throughout the South Shore performed as paid extras in the mystery-thriller movie. One casting call held last June at the Deer Hill School in Cohasset found thousands standing in line for hours to audition for non-speaking roles in the film.

Marshfield's Caroline Struzik, a freshman at Marshfield High School, was selected to portray Carol Ann Medford, the teenaged daughter of the character performed by actress Cher. Caroline was sent to the various Massachusetts locations for the shooting of her scenes, and also performed back in Los Angeles at a Warner Brothers studio.

The Cohasset Chamber originally planned to hold two showings in the Cohasset High school auditorium. But the costs were so prohibitive, Staszko said, they sought assistance from a commercial cinema. This will be a one-time event, he emphasized, noting that no other organization in the country has received similar permission from Warner Brothers.

The Chamber decided the proceeds would benefit the Milliken Field project. "This movie was filmed in our community and involved the whole town for several weeks," Staszko explained. "We wanted to select a community project that will in turn benefit the greatest amount of people here. We feel the athletic fields project will do just that."

Staszko, who was prepared to fly to Los Angeles last week to request the film in person, said he has not viewed the unreleased film. "From what I have heard, the photography is beautiful and Cohasset shows very well in the film. My guess is that the entire South Shore will look very nice," he said.

The Chamber worked dilgently, he noted, to bring a memorable Witches event back to the town. "The Chamber worked very hard to bring the movie here, and we really wanted to do something special for its opening," he said.

In fact, in the event that Nicholson is found in the vacinity of the Boston Garden during the next couple of weeks, he will definitely receive a special invitation to attend the Hanover showing. "It will give him (a staunch LA Lakers fan) something to cheer about," Staszko noted.

The organizers, who breathed a final sigh of relief when told everything was in order late last week, advise people to purchase tickets early. "There's only a limited number," he stated somewhat wearily, "and this will definitely be a one-time event."

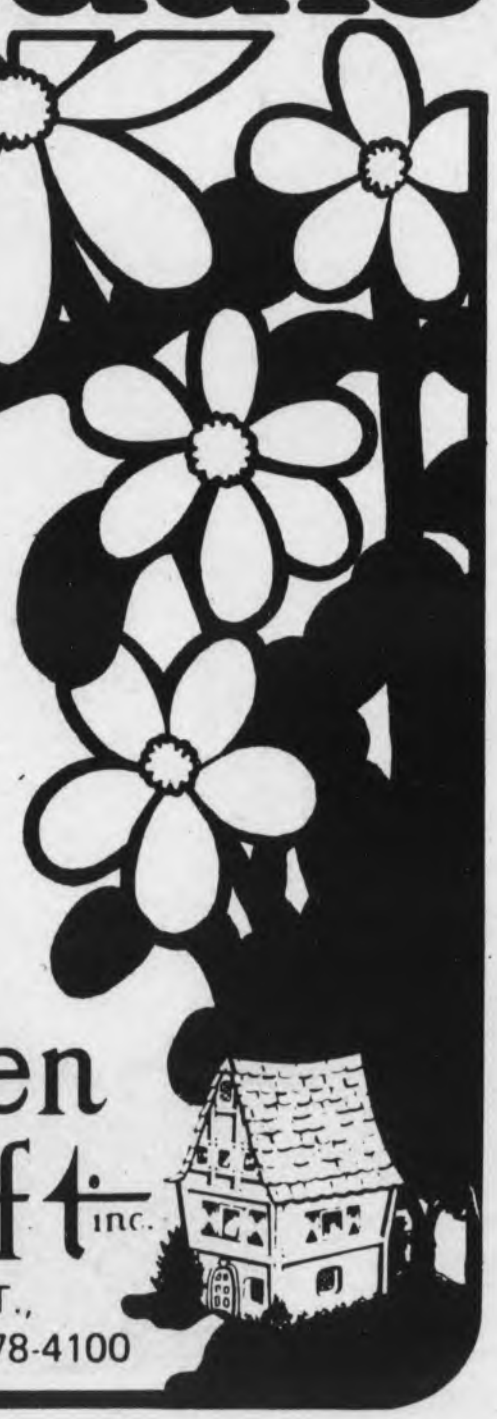
Lower utility bills coming

Eastern Edison Co. has filed with the Massachusetts Department of Public Utilities (DPU) lower fuel and oil conservation adjustment factors that would reduce customer bills starting June 1.



If the DPU approves the new charges, a residential customer using 500 kilowatt hours (kwh) of electricity per month would be billed $45.91, a 40-cent reduction from the current cost of $46.31.

"These reductions are based on lower forecasted wholesale costs Eastern Edison will be paying for electricity," explained Arthur A. Hatch, president.

"If the DPU approves these new reductions, the price Eastern Edison charges its customers, effective June 1, represents a 3.5 percent reduction since the first of this year," he said.

A residential customer using 500 kwh of electricity paid a monthly bill of $47.54 in January.

The formality and festivities of the senior prom

Proudly displaying their festive attire at Tuesday night's prom are the three 'dudes':(l to r) Mark McManus, Jeff Hartwell, and Chris Conant.

Kerri Rhodes and Glen Froio rest briefly, but comfortably, between dances at their senior prom.

This group of revelers stopped only momentarily to oblige our wandering photographer. They included: Jen Chapman, Steve Myers, Lee Sullivan, Jeff Soltesz, Nancy Lincoln, Donald Mulligan, Kimberly Warner and Greg Wallingford.

Cohasset Little League report. . .

The last week of May was a rough one for the Yankess. They were hammered twice: 22-13 by the Mets on Tuesday, 26-5 by the Braves on Friday.

The Mets caught Joey Andrade on a night when he was "merely mortal" and sounded out 11 hits while stranding eight other baserunners. The Yankees responded with nine hits off Chris Rolandelli who also had trouble finding the strike zone, but Chris settled down in the latter half of the game. Game results suggest the bats (particularly the young ones) are catching up with the pitching.

Actually, the key to the game for the Mets might have been the courage of Michael Burns, injured earlier in the day. Mike insisted on playing but further damaged some ligaments in a leg while running "Buckner-like" on a first inning hit. Hope we see you soon, Michael!

At any rate his valor supercharged the bats of David Leahy (three doubles, five ribbies), Brendan and Johnny Kinchla (two hits apiece) and David Zadel (also with two). The offensive explosion keyed two defensive plays to close the Yankees out in the 6th. Doug Schultz threw Joey Andrade out from right field as Joey was trying to stretch a single and to end the game, Chris Rolandelli, who picked up the win, threw out Ben Sparks attempting to steal home.

The Yankees' woes for the week continued on Friday, as the Braves feasted on the deliveries of Chris Goodman. Balls were flying all over the field, but Chris is a silky smooth lefty, and will improve immensely on this effort. Doug Ellinger and John Maynard combined pitching efforts for the Braves with the win going to Ellinger.

Everybody in the Braves line-up reached base at least once. Chris Kondrat led the way with four hits and caught the superb game. Starring afield and at the bat for the Yankees was Charlie Endris with three sharp hits.

Continuing this offensive theme, in the only other action of the week, the Red Sox soundly defeated the Braves 15-1 (see accompanying box). The Sox used a solid outing from Andy Kahn, timely defense, and ringing bats from their top five hitters to register the kayo.

Action continues this week as the race for the top heats up. And we owe a special thanks to Dave Buckley (father of Mets' third-sacker, Brian) who has constructed new benches in the dugouts and is in the process of painting same.

Cohasset Little League report. . .

In action this week the Braves swept two from the Mets to run their record to 5 and 2. The Red Sox kept pace with two wins of their own over the Yankees to improve to 4 and 1. These teams collide head-on Thursday night. The game should be exciting.

Tuesday night, John Maynard got the W in a 13-7 win over the Mets. In besting Chris Rolandelli of the Mets, John gave up eight hits, but recorded 11 K's. The game was dominated by offense, and Greg Pyle and Chris Kondrat of the Braves had all-star nights. Both players had singles, two doubles and four RBI's. Countering for the Mets were Michael Burns, Danny Baird and David "Elvis" Zadel. David and Danny each had doubles while Michael was a perfect 3-3 including a triple and two RBI's, but the Mets came up short.

Closer were the Mets on Friday but they still came up on the short end of this one by a 5-4 count. This one was all Mets in the early going. Scotty Theriault, who went the distance for the Mets scattering seven hits, had a double, triple and two RBI's. David Leahy and Brian Buckley had run-producing doubles. But the Braves hung tough, clawed their way back a run at a time and won in their final at-bat.

Along the way they cut down two Mets on the bases. A sensational Harrington to Kondrat to Conroy relay caught Ben Redfield at the plate. Later Danny Curtin made a strong throw from right to nail Scott Theriault trying to stretch a double.

Steve Harrington did the most damage at the plate for the Braves. He was two for two with a walk and two RBI's including the game-winner. Also contributing were John Maynard with two singles and Kondrat, Tim Conroy and Brian 'Elvis' Pattison with doubles. Doug Ellinger was the beneficiary of these heroics and pitched well enough to manage his third win.

Monday the Red Sox beat the Yankees 11-2 (see box score). Andy Kuhn pitched a very steady ball game and his mates led by Mike Equi provided solid defense. On the offensive side of the ledger, Peter Fahey, Eric Drysdale, and Nathan Fiore had solid nights. Peter scored three runs and showed great base-running skills.

In a game played Monday night of this week (the 25th), the Red Sox again bested the Yankees 8-3. This one was close for four innings as Mikey Reynolds of the Yanks and Pete Fahey of the Sox matched no-hitters.

The Yankees picked up a run in the home-half of the fourth on a wild pitch and a close play at the plate. Subsequently Pete was "sent to the showers" by Head-Umpire Peter Sandblom for protesting too vehemently. At this point the Sox bats seemed to come to life, and they answered with four runs in the fifth and matched that in the sixth. Eric Drysdale, Nathan Fiore and Greg Lowenhagen had key singles to fuel the rallies.

Lowenhagen came on to relieve the fallen Fahey and pitched very cooly to pick up the win. Also to be congratulated is Brendan Leung who retreated into short right field to catch a pop off the bat of Joey Andrade. That play stifled the Yankees whose bats had also come to life in the form of singles by the Reynold's brothers Pat and Mike. Good job Messrs. Lowenhagen and Leung.

Minor League

We also have these reports and box-scores in from our minor league affiliates. The Yankees were involved in two squirmers and managed to win one from the Braves 8-7. The Giants had a solid offensive display versus the Red Sox on Saturday and pounded them 10 to zip. Brian Duffy was the only Red Soxer to break into the hit column. Across the field Jim Magner, Chip Moore, Brad Poitillichio, and Tom Greco had multiple hit performances. Jim was a perfect 3 for 3 with a double and triple, walk, 3 runs, and 3 RBI's. His brother Joe picked up the win. These kids sound ready for the bigs. Watch for some major league scouts drifting among the parents at future games.

Yankees 8 — Braves 7

The Yankees edged the Braves in the final inning of a "cliffhanger."

The Yankees were led by the pitching of Ben Manning and Nate Caldwell, along with the fielding of John Paul Lacks, Dave Marr, and Ted Reardon and a key last-inning hit by Jason Murphy. The Braves had notable performances by pitcher Kenny Leahy and catcher Neven Bunstein, and the hitting of Jeff Littlehale, Andy Fitzsimmons, and Craig Stevens.

Final score: Yankee 8 — Braves 7.

Two historical events planned for summer

The Cohasset Historical Society swings into summer gear as it presents two June events. Saturday, June 13 will see the 1987 version of the Society's Flea Market held at the historic Caleb Lothrop House, 14 Summer Street. The hours will be 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., and good quality items will be featured.

A special treat will be the baked goods food table, assembled by the special Flea Market Committee of volunteers. Proceeds from the Historical Society's Flea Market go to maintaining the Society's three historical buildings in Cohasset, and in furthering the Society's community-directed activities and programs.

Saturday, June 20, the Historical Society begins its 1987 summer museum schedule. The Capt. John Wilson Historical House and the Maritime Museum at Elm Street, Cohasset Center will open on that afternoon and remain open to the public each afternoon except Mondays through September 30. The Capt. Wilson House features early furnishings, furniture, kitchenware, china and stoneware, childrens' toys and artworks from the old homes of the town. A feature is a large mid-19th century dollhouse complete with tiny furnishings, even to "grandmother and grandfather" and the family cat. The exhibits are in a setting reminiscent of an early 19th century Cohasset home; the Wilson House is an unmodernized Sea Captain's dwelling.

Immediately next door, the Maritime Museum features extensive exhibits related to the town's long seafaring history including more than a dozen ship models ranging in age from the early 19th to early 20th centuries, shipwreck and lifesaving relics and memorabilia, and the story of Minot's Ledge Lighthouse. The Maritime Museum also contains a large collection of general artifacts and memorabilia from early Cohasset.

This year a special exhibit of material related to the nation's Constitutional Bicentennial can be seen in the second floor gallery. Plan to visit these two uniquely historical museums this summer. Admission by donation is 75 cents for adults.

Store hours to be limited. . .

of the bylaw proposal, although he was familiar with the Burlington bylaw which was created to prevent a 24-hour Star Market. O'Donnell noted that the residents who worked to develop the Cohasset bylaw sought specifically to prohibit the Stop and Shop hours, and never intended to infringe on the current commercial operations in town.

Debbie Cook of King Street was also pleased with the attorney general's findings. "We really hated to see all the traffic that would be created by the 24-hour store," she said, noting that the entrance into the new supermarket will be connected into the southern end of King Street at Rte. 3A.

The Cooks were fearful, she said, of the increased traffic along their residential street, caused by the only 24-hour food facility in the area. "That wasn't something we wanted at all," she said. "The people and the noise at all hours of the day and night - especially in the early morning, would have been too much."

Cook said several residents from throughout the town discussed a revised bylaw proposal with selectmen earlier this year. "They were the ones who put the article into the warrant. There was such overwhelming support for the previous bylaw, I think selectmen believed it needed a second chance.

"I'm really pleased the bylaw was approved," she continued. "I'm absolutely pleased because this is clearly what the town wanted - to stop a 24-hour commercial operation."

Prior to the April town meeting, Stop and Shop spokesman John McWeeney said even if the proposed bylaw was approved, the store would continue its plans to relocate along Rte. 3A. Although it was designed to be a 24-hour operation, McWeeney said last March, "we'll have to live with it," if the restrictions were approved.

Stop and Shop, he said, has 70 stores open 24 hours and 33 Super Stop and Shops, similar to the one to be constructed in Cohasset. According to McWeeney, the organization has never received a complaint about the 24-hour operation and has never been forced to limit the hours because of neighborhood complaints.

Only one super store, located in Dedham, has limited operational hours, he explained. But that was because of a bylaw which was in effect prior to the establishment of the Dedham store.

PSI symposium program

"The Fire Walk Ritual and Healing TAO Mediation", with John C. Loupos, will be presented Sunday, June 14, at 7:30 p.m. in First Parish Hall, Norwell.

Loupos, owner and operator of the Wah Lum Kung Fu Academy in Cohasset, will give a talk on the Firewalk, possibly the oldest ritual practiced by humankind, and currently practiced in over 30 cultures around the world.

Included in the presentation will be video tape of an actual firewalk. After the break, Loupos, who is also a certified Healing Tao instructor, will discuss the Healing Tao Chi Kung and meditation practices which he teaches at his facility in Cohasset. Participants will have an opportunity to learn a simple mediation practice.

The program is open to the public. Suggested donation $3. (Members: $2.).

Town official to investigate Kimball's permits

By John Magadieu
Mariner Staff

Kimball's by the Sea Motor Inn has violated several town bylaws, according to Building Inspector Donald Robbins.

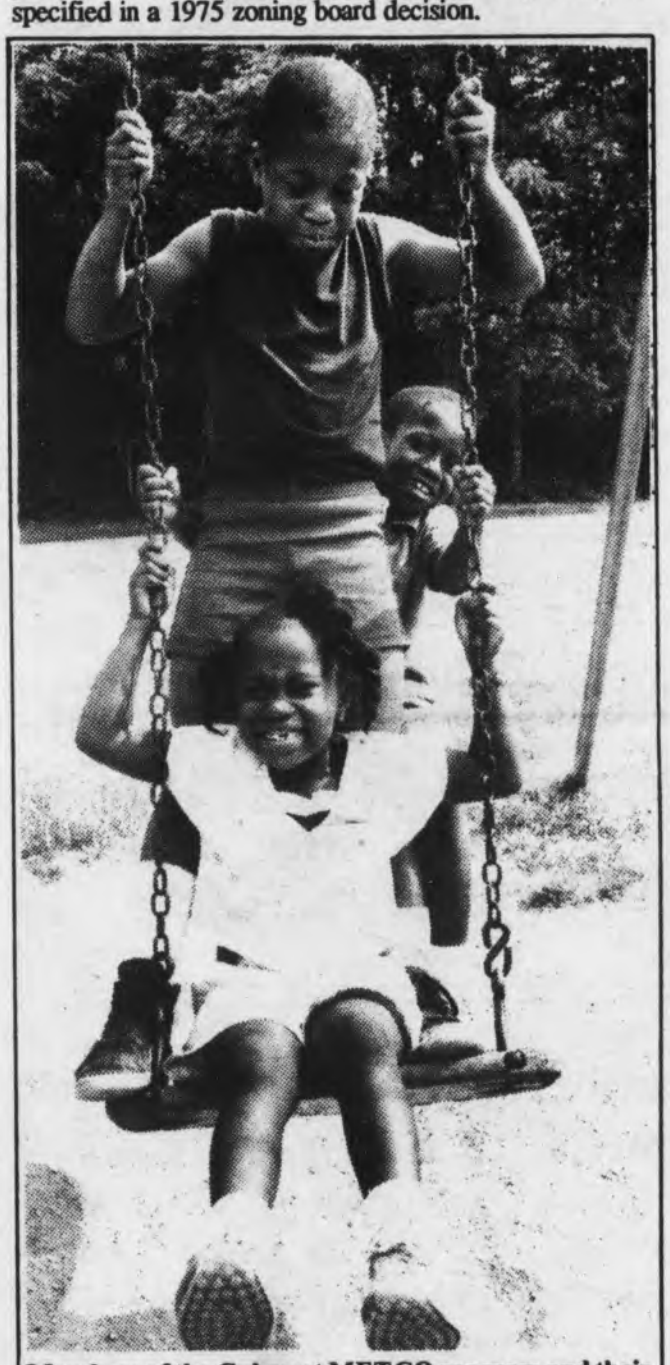
In responding to complaints by Edward Atkinson of 100 Elm St., Robbins agreed the motel at 124 Elm St. has illegally expanded its use of the premises to outside patios, and has failed to provide valet parking as specified in a 1975 zoning board decision.

Daniel Leahy, manager of Kimball's by the Sea said, "The allegations are entirely incorrect and have been resolved in court and by town boards."

After reviewing the file on the harbor motel, however, the building inspector said Tuesday, he will be going to Kimball's looking for answers.

Leahy declined to comment further. "I'm not going to fight this in the newspapers," he said. "I will go to the appropriate boards to resolve this matter."

Atkinson wrote the inspector May 18, following selectmen's approval of an "extension of premises" for the sale of all alcoholic beverages to be consumed at the establishment.



"This extension, which involves the serving of food and drink on the front and rear patios of the motel raises a number of new issues relating to adequate off-street parking," Atkinson said, "and infavorable impact upon the surrounding neighborhood which have long been in dispute between the owners of the motel and the town of Cohasset."

Atkinson noted, "A Nov. 9, 1979 application for permit for building or alterations submitted by the Roy Corporation (owners of Kimball's by the Sea) requested permission to allow the use 'of the existing restaurant lounge within the motel by the general public.'

"It should be noted," he told Robbins, "that parking was already at issue at that time, but even more to the point that the request specified the existing restaurant lounge within the motel and made no mention of the patios.

"In fact," he explained, "it was because Kimball's innkeepers license did not cover the patios that an extension of premises was requested."

Everything was perfect on Sunday

The sun was shining, families were smiling, graduates were beaming, and the Celtics won. All was right with the world last Sunday afternoon.

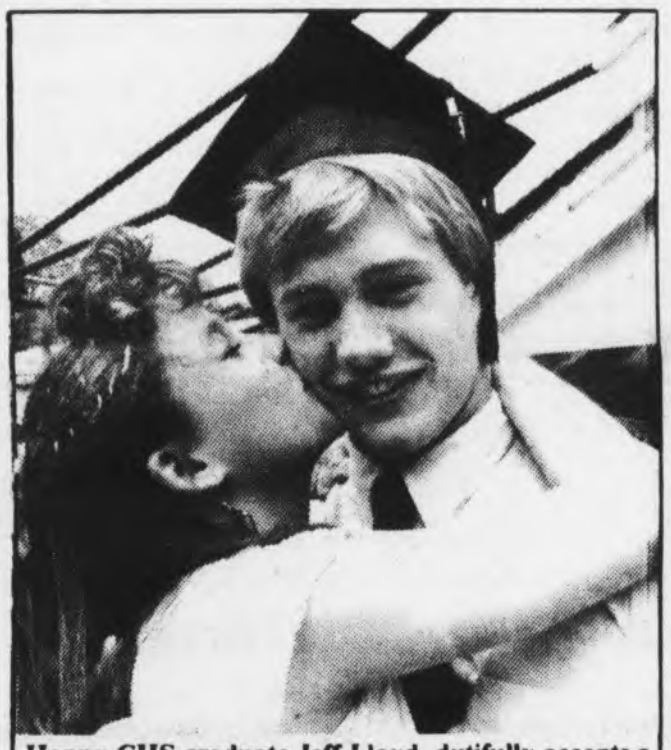
Under the gracefully billowed tent of the Music Circus, 101 members of the class of 1987 received their diplomas. And with a slight twist of the motar board tassles to the right side, the ceremony was complete. Their high school days were now over. The future looms ahead.

Rev. Clifford Cutler of St. Stephen's Church gave the invocation in which he told the graduates to use their gifts in service to others. He wished them "the wisdom to do whatever's right, and the courage to persevere."

Class president Eric Maki was salutatorian. In his speech, Maki attempted to predict the future for the 1987 graduates. Humorously, he said he first thought that the entire class may be head "for desparation and failure - but still daring to be ourselves."

The success of this class, he noted, was that they have ignored stereotyping and asserted themselves as individuals. Although it was a diverse class, Maki said they were all close friends. Senior events bonded them closer, he noted. The senior show was a highlight of the year which too quickly came to a close with the final senior activities and the last week of school.

"It was painful to say goodbye," he said. "But we live for a future in the 21st century with new problems that will demand new ideas." Maki couldn't predict the future for all his classmates, but himself, he figured he'd be running for president in 2008.



Valedictorian Lisa Shumaker described the chronological order of her high school days in Cohasset. Beginning as a frightened seventh grader in a new school, Shumaker talked about her sense of relief that she survived that year.

By the following year, she was among the class of Movers and Shakers who realized another aspect of their education - socializiation. "We were hopelessly entangled in the web of adolescence," she stated.

By ninth grade, they realized grades would be important to their future plans, and they began to think about SAT's and the higher grades. And although she was warned that tenth grade was the hardest of her high school career, that was proven wrong. "We all survived," Shumaker quipped.

But in this year, the sophomores suddenly discovered that teachers were treating them as adults. "They forced us all to think for ourselves," she noted. This was also the first year that the boys basketball team became state

Coleman recalls 20th anniversary of 'miracle team'

By Jane Lane
Mariner Staff

For the briefest of moments, everything seemed right. The war in Vietnam seemed to stop; the hippies and the establishment embraced; flowers grew out of riot clubs; and in our cities, blacks and whites raised a toast together to this miracle. Some might say the moment never happened; yet we know it probably did. It was a moment that turned a whole year into part of an eternal present, one we shall always carry with us; the memory of the Impossible Dream.

Ken Coleman and Dan Valenti
The Impossible Dream Remembered

His voice is more familiar to sports fans than his writings. But together with a new partner, writer Dan Valenti, Cohasset's Ken Coleman has proved once again there is more to life than a broadcasting booth.

The Impossible Dream Remembered is a book about a team of ninth place players, a city that became electrified by their performance, and a franchise that evolved into a financial success because of the season of '67.

That was, Coleman said, "the biggest year of my career." That's quite an epitaph for a career that has spanned 32 years, two sports and many cities. It is a career that remains strong today - proof that he is indeed the official "voice of the Red Sox."

This is the 20th anniversary of that memorable year - a season where the impossible happened. As Coleman described it, "the year before, the Red Sox finished ninth of a ten-team division. They were a half-game out of the cellar. In 1966 the average attendance at a ballgame was 7,000. In 1967, nobody expected them to win more games than they lost, never mind capture the pennant. But they proved everyone wrong.

"That year turned the franchise around. Before, fans were apathetic towards the Sox. After '67," he recalled, "a new generation of fans was born."

There have been two American League championships for the Red Sox and Coleman since that time, but none could equal the excitement and electricity of the 1967 team. "They came from out of nowhere to become champions. It was," he said, "a very special team."

The Impossible Dream Remembered is a hard cover, coffeetable-type book. It includes a daily diary of the famous season and World Series. Included are exclsuive photos of the players, and a variety of vignettes told by the players to Coleman. Interesting sidelights of the 1967 were told to the veteran broadcaster by the individual team players of 1967.

"I talked to just about every player on that team," he explained. "And then former coach Bobby Doerr lent me his personal diary of the season. Dan and I both did a lot of research and I told him various things I remembered about the year."

Among the more memorable moments of that inspiring year, Coleman noted, were the superlative achievements of MVP Carl Yastrzemski. Captain Carl

Cohasset's week . . .

Delayed School opening

In respect to Edward Sheehan, Social Studies teacher at Cohasset Jr./Sr. High School for the past twenty-eight years, school opening will be delayed until 10:25 a.m. Friday, June 12 so that staff and students may attend funeral services.

A mass for Mr. Sheehan will be celebrated at Immaculate Conception Church in East Weymouth at 9 a.m.

A school bus will be at the High School at 8:20 a.m. to transport students who wish to attend the Church service. The bus will return to school by 10:25 a.m.

There will be a regular bus pick up for all students at the Jr./Sr. High beginning about three hours later than the usual time. The schedule for Friday will be announced and posted in all homerooms today (Thursday).

Osborne harbormaster

By a four to one vote, selectmen appointed Steven Osborne, 23, the new harbormaster, replacing retiring harbormaster Harry Ritter. Osborne has accepted the job at the starting salary of $412 per week.

Selectman James Gallagher nominated Osborne, who is a former Norwell resident now living in Oregon. Gallagher said he was impressed by the strong interest Osborne displayed, having cruised the harbor where Osborne noticed several violations of the harbor's rules and regulations. He was also impressed with Osborne's military and personal background.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle said he favored the appointment of someone more familiar with Cohasset harbor, noting that "just because he's (Osborne) a good kid, doesn't make him a good harbormaster. This job belongs to someone with experience."

Selectman Cliff Mitman answered, "It's more important to have someone even-handed and organized. It's not so much that the candidate has knowledge of the harbor. One of the things that gave me pause was with someone so young, but his other qualifications overcome it."

Selectmen then voted to appoint Osborne to the position.

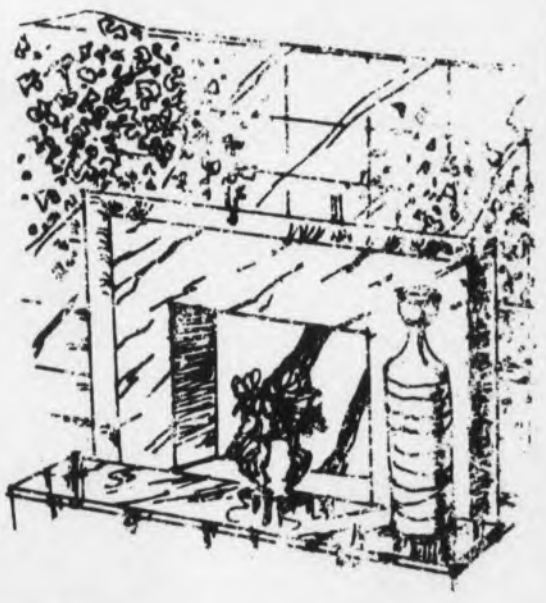
Oliver is patrolman

Selectmen voted unanimously to appoint William Oliver of Elm Court to the Cohasset Police Department.



Police Chief Joseph Kealey told selectmen the two final qualifed candidates were Oliver and Robert Kierce of South Main Street. Based on background checks of the two finalists and test scores, the chief recommended that Oliver be appointed. The only difference between the two candidates, he said, was that Oliver attained a higher test score. Chief Kealey hoped that Kierce remains on the Civil Service list so he can be appointed if a second position becomes available.

Health director wants AIDS ed. input

By John Magadieu
Mariner Staff

If you are concerned about the threat of AIDS to the children of Cohasset, Michael Gill wants your help.

As health coordinator for the Cohasset school system, Gill is working to design a new curriculum to teach kids about the danger of acquired immune deficiency syndrome, and what they can do to protect themselves against it.

As part of his design effort, Gill is trying to recruit concerned citizens to form an advisory committee.

"Right now, I can't say what I'll be teaching," he commented, "because I'm waiting for the state to send out its curriculum guide. I feel like I'm being held up on this thing.

"I have read a great deal on the subject and have gone to conferences," he explained, "but I'd like to get those guidelines. I hope to get the program organized in June and July and have it ready for September."

Gill said he expects to incorporate the new AIDS curriculum into the overall health education program, in which students currently learn: to build self-esteem; to develop decision-making skills; to protect themselves against child abuse and rape; heart health; emotional and mental health; the dangers of drug and alcohol abuse; human sexuality; handicap awareness; and nutrition, growth and development and prevention of disease.

Because all students do not participate in the health education program, Gill said he will investigate the possibility of incorporating some AIDS education in science and social studies programs.

The community advisory committee, which advises and works with Gill in developing health programs, will help him determine the needs and desires of the community as he attempts to formulate the AIDS curriculum.

Gill said he feels the time is right to introduce this subject to C.H.S. students because "education is now the only way we have to combat the disease.

"I feel the community is ready," he said. "What grade level to begin at, and what will be taught at the various grade levels - I'm not sure yet. That will be left up to the community."

Many parents already have shown an interest in working on this program, Gill said. "I sent home notes with the elementary school kids and there was a huge response from their parents. They are interested in working on the committee, and particularly interested in working on the AIDS curriculum program.

"The administration wants me to investigate, research and develop a program along with the community," he explained. "The most important thing is community input; community input is the most important part of our program."

Gill noted, "The consensus among educators is to emphasize abstinence. Our job is to emphasize that - It's the best method of preventing contraction of the disease.

"I don't like to fragment health education," Gill said. "The AIDS curriculum belongs in a comprehensive health education program that deals with the whole person.

"This same sort of thing happened years ago, when we decided to teach them about drugs and alcohol," he recalled. "We tried to teach it separately and it was not successful.

"Often, these things go back to self-esteem and self-image. If we build the kids' self-esteem and self-image early," Gill said, "They will feel better about themselves later on, when they have to make some of those tough choices. It's a total education."

Gill said he realizes AIDS is a sensitive subject, but as this scary disease spreads, it also is clear that high school students today face a greater risk than any other group before them.

"It's going to get worse before it gets better," Gill predicted. So, the time to educate these kids about AIDS is now.

Historical Comm. vacancy

There is a vacancy on the Cohasset Historical Commission following the resignation of member Betty Enders.

Selectmen accepted the June 1 resignation, noting that Enders has been a valuable member for the past ten years. "She put in a lot of hours," they commented.

Anyone who would like to apply for the position should contact the selectmen's office at town hall.

Deer Hill soccer site quite a soggy problem

By John Magadieu
Mariner Staff

The Cohasset soccer boosters are struggling to find a dry spot behind Deer Hill School to put a soccer field.

At town meeting April 6, John Kinchla of 249 Beechwood St. sought a parcel of land in the sand pits off North Main St. for a facility, but the voters said 'No,' and offered the Deer Hill site.

"We're trying to find a way to position the field on the lot," Kinchla said Tuesday, "but it's not as easy as we thought it would be."

The boosters' representative was preparing to go before members of the school's "athletic utilization" committee June 10, to update them on the status of the project.

Kinchla said he has surveyed the site with help from Charles DeSantis and a representative of the Massachusetts National Guard engineering battalion.

"Judging from the topographical maps, I thought we might fit the field in the woods," he said. "I thought we had done our homework on this piece of property. It was not our first choice, but you take what you can get.

"There are 60 acres up there," he noted, "and I thought we could find the right spot. But the right spot is hard to find."

The most likely spot for the boosters' new soccer field is a patch of land which runs from the blacktop to the backstop, Kinchla noted, and it will run as far into the woods as possible. "It's going to be tight.

"It looks like there is a lot of land up there," he explained, "but much of it is below the 70-foot elevation, except for a slice of land in the area where the present field is."

Kinchla said the boosters may have to do some blasting, grading and filling to build their soccer field behind Deer Hill School.

The best area at that location, he noted, is riddled with ledge and depressions that fill easily with water. There also is a steep rise in the southerly direction toward Old Pasture Road.

Kinchla said he fears the landscaping the boosters must perform to get their soccer field could complicate drainage flows off Old Pasture Road.

"We don't want a wet spot, or a lake at one end of the field," Kinchla commented.

He said he plans to meet with the town's drainage committee and conservation commission, and with the state Dept. of Environmental Quality Engineering to address the potential problems.

The Army Corps of Engineers also wants a letter from each of those three agencies, releasing it from any liability for any damage that could be done at the site.

Despite the problems with the Deer Hill site, Kinchla maintained, "I think we are all committed to going forward with the development of some space at this site... at least a practice field.

"It's a massive job surveying an area this size," he said. "We're going as fast as we can go.

"It's very pretty up there," Kinchla observed. The boosters will be soliciting funds to expand the facility. "I think people are interested in this project and they're behind us."

School Supt. Stephen Hart concurred.

"It seems like a worthwhile project," he said Tuesday. "It sounds like it would be a good situation for both the boosters and for the school."

While the boosters forge ahead with their plans for the Deer Hill site, they watch with interest developments at Milliken Field and at the sand pits off North Main Street.

"Our program is dependent on being able to accommodate the other teams in the league," Kinchla has said.

"Hopefully, the Milliken Field group will get money to make repairs," Kinchla commented, "so more space could be utilized there."

While the sand pits may be the best patch of open space in town, the soccer boosters realize they will have to wait until the highway dept. relocates before they could put a field in there.

According to Kinchla, the boosters' soccer program is worth the wait.

"The town's teams have done very well this year," he said. "We have two 10-and-under boys teams vying for a league championship, and we have a 16-and-under boys team in contention. We'll be having a summer camp and we also have a very strong fall program."

Bloodmobile set for June 16

The next Cohasset Community Triannual Red Cross Bloodmobile will be held Tuesday, June 16, from 2:30 to 7:30 p.m. at the Unitarian First Parish House, 23 No. Main St. Corinne Cahill, R.N. will again be the coordinator on the day of the Bloodmobile.

Groups that will participate as in the past, and their Donor Promoter, are Seavey Engineering (Lisa Seavey); Norfolk Conveyor (Peg Faletra and Bill Handrahan); Rotary (Wayne Robbins); Legion (Lawrence Sousa); Masons (Don Harrold); Unitarian First Parish (Lisa Koed); Second Congregational (Vi Tuthill); St. Stephens (Pamela Earle); St. Anthonys (Carol Riley); School Teachers (Carol Riley); Independents (Mary Brennock), and Firefighters. New groups participating are high school students, Baptists and Glastonbury Abbey. Additional groups are welcome and should contact the Chairman or Coordinator.

One hundred and ten donors participated in the last bloodmobile held January 27, and donated 90 pints of blood. It is hoped that with the continuous need for blood that a greater number of people will participate in this bloodmobile. Red Cross staffing is being requested for a more efficient processing of donors. Baby-sitting will be provided at the center; and transportation will be available on request.

All persons in good health age 17 and older, and weighing more than 100 pounds are urged to donate the gift of life. Anyone under 18 years old will need parental permission. Walk-ins will be welcome after 4 p.m.

Inspector to investigate charges. . .

Atkinson complained that the effect of the selectmen's action was a doubling of the area which may be used for serving guests.

"There are a large number of chairs on these patios which now, it seems to me, should be counted in calculating the number of off-street parking spaces required under section 7.1E of our zoning bylaws," he said.

Atkinson argued that if the patios are to be used as an outdoor restaurant lounge, then the Roy Corp. should submit a permit application for building or alterations, because "the previous permit only applied to spaces within the motel."

"I think this brings up a valid point," Robbins responded Tuesday. "I would agree that this is an expansion of the use."

With regard to valet parking, the Elm St. resident cited a Jan. 25, 1975 decision by the zoning board of appeals requiring Kimball's to provide such service.

"To the best of my knowledge, this requirement has rarely if ever been met," Atkinson said. "Further, it should be noted that often during peak hours for parking during the summer, when these patios will be in maximum use, a major portion of Kimball's parking area is taken up by one or more buses used by performers at the South Shore Music Circus. This further aggravates the parking situation."

"I think you are correct when you state that Kimball's rarely if ever, uses valet parking, which was a requirement on the January 16, 1975 decision," Robbins responded. "As for the buses, I think that is a judgment call. Which is worse - a bus with six to 10 people or six to 10 cars?"

Atkinson assailed the selectmen's May 4 decision to expand the use, despite objections from such officials as planning board member John "O'Toole," who wrote in his board's letter granting permission for awnings over the patios, "...the permission granted in no way implies an expansion of the use or of existing floor space."

He noted, there is a brick patio which extends beyond that shown on the site plan, and asked why there was no building permit on file "for this major increase in the size."

Building the extra patio, he noted, would not require a building permit, but it would require a permit for use as an extension.

"The courts have ruled," he noted, that patios, driveways and sidewalks are not structure and do not require a building people bandaged in modern day living.

Finally, Atkinson told the inspector, "The use of the patios as an outdoor restaurant lounge impact unfavorably upon the surrounding neighborhood, which toward the west side, is predominantly residential.

"Specifically," he noted, "live entertainment was used on the west patio last summer, which was very disturbing to me as a nearby resident.

The building inspector agreed, "There are several violations by Kimball's under section four of the town bylaws."

As with the others, Robbins will go to Kimball's by the Sea to find answers and perhaps offer solutions to quell neighborhood tensions.

New wiring permit fees

Selectmen approved a new schedule for wiring permit fees. The fee schedule was recommended by Wiring Inspector Stephen Wigmore.

Executive Secretary Donald Andrew noted that nine years ago, Wigmore asked for a fee increase and was turned down. It has been many years since the fees have been raised, he explained, and Cohasset will continue to be lower than many surrounding communities.

Sunday was the perfect day for '87 grads. . .

champs and after that, "no Cohasset High School team would ever roll over and die," the speaker stated.

By the latter part of their high school career, juniors and seniors were not envious of the less-pressured seventh graders entering the school. And in 1985, they suffered the loss of a beloved teacher, Charles Davis, and later said goodbye to former assistant principal Gino DiGirolamo.

Senior years were a blur for Shumaker, with parties, plays and proms. The valedictorian urged her classmates to cherish those memories from which they can learn in the future.

As Supt. Stephen Hart presented the class for their diplomas, he echoed the words of assistant principal John DeLorenzo who described the graduates as a "class with class.

"What has impressed me most, is the comaraderie of this class. You didn't find the clique-ishness usually found in most classes. They appreciated each other and tolerated themselves," he said, noting this will be the attitude they continue to hold within the community. Supt. Hart urged the graduates to remember President John Kennedy's admonishment to a nation when he said not to wait for others to serve you, but to volunteer your service to the country.

School committee chairman Joseph Nedrow congratulated the graduates and their families who all played an important role in the education of the class of 1987. He wished the graduates good luck "in whatever endeavor you choose."

Cheers and applause greeted the graduates as they were called individually to the center stage to receive their diploma. The girls were adorned in white academic robes and carried a single red rose. The boys were clad in the traditional blue gown, with a yellow tassle dangling from atop their mortar boards.

Some students were presented diplomas from a parent. Patricia Walsh, a former school committee member presented her son, James P. Walsh, with his diploma. Mrs. DiGirolamo, wife of the former assistant principal, presented her son, Philip Mahoney, with his diploma, and English teacher Ron Emmons gave his daughter, Jenna, her CHS diploma.

Science Center Kids Festival scheduled

What does summer mean on the South Shore? Sun, beaches, picnics and Kids Festival!

The South Shore Science Center's Kids Festival will be held Saturday, June 20 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the center on Jacobs Lane in Norwell.

Sandra Palmer, Kids Festival Co-ordinator, said that this summer festival is one of two annual fundraising events organized by the education staff of SSNSC. Proceeds from the festival directly support the center's educational programs, projects and trail maintanence.

"The festival is a combination of natural history and entertainment," said Palmer. "The Natural Science Center began 25 years ago by offering children a combination of natural history and recreation through its Nature Day Camp. The Festival complements that philosphy — it is a celebration for children and an opportunity to learn more of the natural world."

The theme for this year's festival is "Oceans of Fun." Ms. Palmer notes that the theme was chosen partially out of personal interest in that her graduate degree was in Marine Biology. "The ocean theme also provides an opportunity to understand the ecological importance of marine and freshwater environments. The theme complements existing SSNSC educational programs, especially the Wetlands Project and summer Marine Adventure Week," said Palmer.

The highlight of this year's Kids Festival will be a close to life size 75 foot walk-in Fin Back Whale. Inside the whale, one will be greeted by whale songs, baleen and whale vertebrae and a naturalist who will answer your questions.

Performances will happen throughout the day: At the Ocean's Edge slide show (10, 10:15, 11:45 a.m.) Lobstering (10:30 a.m.); Live Animal Show (10:30, 12:30 p.m., 2:30 p.m.); Comedy Attack (11:15 a.m., 1:45 p.m.); Ocean's Treasurers slide show (11:45 am., 2:15 pm.); Sea Tales (noon, 2:30 p.m.); Lobster Drawing Contest judging (3:30 p.m.); Comets and meteors slide show (3 p.m.)

Throughout the day enjoy the walk-in whale, Happy the Clown, face painting, animal prints, living tide pool, games, moonwalk, dunk tank, tractor "whale ride", King Neptune and sea creatures, food, games, sun-viewing and raffle.

Admission will be adults, $1.50; children three to 14 years, 75 cents; and children under three, free.

MBTA examines Cohasset site for new train station

By Jane Lane
Mariner Staff

The MBTA is considering a 750-car parking lot and station site on the Rte. 3A property where Bayliner Boats is now located. The station stop would be part of the proposed Greenbush to Boston commuter rail line.

In a presentation to selectmen Monday night, Old Colony Railroad Rehabilitation Project manager Stephen Polechronis explained that talks with Bayliner Boats owner Richard Garvey have begun in an effort to purchase the land for the proposed North Cohasset station site.

Polechronis noted that commuter rail is one option the Old Colony citizens' advisory committee is reviewing. The citizens' advisory committee is currently preparing an environmental impact report which will be ready for a fall review by the secretary of environmental affairs.

"It is conceivable," Polechronis said in answer to a question Monday night, "that there's too much (population) growth near the tracks now to do this project. We will take a look at all other options as well."

During the presentation to selectmen, the project manager explained that current estimates for the Greenbush rail line will include one station stop in North Cohasset. There will be two stations in Scituate - at Greenbush and North Scituate center, and two in Hingham - near Hingham Lumber on Summer Street and in West Hingham near the golf course. There will be five grade crossings in Cohasset.

Despite the number of grade crossings in the Greenbush line communities, including fourteen in Hingham, Polechronis stuck with the previously-estimated travel time of 57 minutes from Scituate to Boston. The train would be traveling according to Department of Public Utilities regulations, but Polechronis estimated a 15 m.p.h. rate at the crossings, 30 to 40 m.p.h. in more heavily-populated areas, and 60 m.p.h. from Braintree into Boston.

An average of 5,000 commuters would use the commuter rail, according to MBTA studies. Eighty percent of that number would ride the train during the peak commuting hours of 6:30 to 8:30a.m. and from 5 to 6:30 p.m. During the peak hours, Polechronis said, the MBTA would run four or five trains, one every half-hour. The schedule would then be lessened to every hour and-a-half to two hours. The trains would run until 11 p.m.

The project manager also noted that the commuter train will consist of five to nine cars, so travel through a grade crossing would be about 45 seconds.

In answer to a question from David Ralff of Lantern Lane, the project manager said there will be gates at each of the grade crossings, but in a small community such as Cohasset, there is no need to sound bells or whistles.

The parking lot at the former Winter Garden location, which is proposed by the MBTA, will accomodate 300 or 400 cars at the beginning. The site is directly off Rte. 3A, with access provided only from that highway. Selectmen Chairman Rocco Laugelle suggested that a second entrance could be provided from North Main Street.

The Rte. 3A station stop and parking lot could accomodate people from Norwell, Scituate and a few from Hull, although Polechronis said Hull residents would likely use the Hingham-Summer Street lot. The station will include an 800-foot platform with an overhead windshield to protect commuters during their wait. The project manager said parking at the lot will be free, with in-town bus service provided by the MBTA to the station.

He noted that the MBTA has begun discussions with the owner of the Rte. 3A property. "We are not eager to acquire an on-going business," he said, "but there is a real problem finding accessible space."

Throughout his discussions with selectmen, Polechronis maintained that revival of the Greenbush line is not assured. "There are some very tough (environmental) issues that have to be dealt with and there will be plenty of time for public comment," he said.

After the environmental impact report is published in November, residents will have an opportunity to express their opinions. Notification of the study's completion will be sent to town officials, the media, and anyone who has attended a public meeting regarding the railroad. Comments will be received for thirty days.

Polechronis explained that based on advise from the administrator of the federal transportation authority, the Old Colony system will be presented in phases. Because there are more serious environmental questions along the Greenbush to South Station line, that portion of the plan will be included in the final stage. Design of the Middleboro to Braintree and Plymouth to Braintree will begin this January, he said, while the study proceeds with the Greenbush plan.

"We are not abandoning the Greenbush line and we are leaving the lines at Braintree only as an interim service," he commented. He estimated that by the end of 1991, construction of the Greenbush line could begin, provided all permits are acquired.

If unconstrained funding is received from the federal government, Polechronis said there should be full service into South Station by the end of 1993.

The project manager said other alternatives, such as commuter boat, express buses and monorail have been reviewed. But in answer to a question from Paul Kierce of South Main Street, he explained the technology for a monorail system down Rte. 3 into Boston "is not there." Kierce had suggested that a monorail on the highway would be closer to the commuting population, and would take into consideration the future growth of the South Shore and the Cape.

Editorial

An act of thievery

A Boston cabbie once said that if inmates of the Charles Street Jail and members of the state legislature switched places, nobody would know the difference. He wasn't too far off.

Unfortunately Massachusetts government has sunk to another new low. Our esteemed legislators have recently given themselves a 36 percent pay increase. Their base salary is now $40,900, second only to New York's $42,000.

However, when extras are included, our legislators are "easily the highest paid in the country," according to Charles Manning, press secretary for the Massachusetts Republican Party, which is working to overturn the raises.

Manning points out that legislators get $7,500 more for chairing a committee or subcommittee, which every Democrat in the state Senate now does. They also get a tax break for commuting and other extras.

The raise represents a 100 percent increase since 1983.

In contrast, legislators in Vermont, New Hampshire and Rhode Island get no salary, only expense money. Connecticut legislators are paid $15,200 annually, while Maine lawmakers recently received a $3,000 pay cut to $6,000.

Massachusetts legislators defend the pay raise by pointing out that they are in session all year long.

That is an understatement. The legislature has been in perpetual session for the past seven years, according to Manning.

And what are they doing during the endless legislative sessions?

Why, working at outside jobs!

The Patriot Ledger reported last week that nearly 45 percent of the legislators have outside jobs. Some of these public-spirited chaps, like Senate President William Bulger, reported earning more than $100,000. Bulger gets $35,000 as president of the senate, and naturally he helped shove the pay raise through.

With all this work, we were worried our legislators never get any rest, but Manning reassured us by explaining the legislature is "generally in informal session for the summer, after passing the budget. Basically they take two months off."

We are delighted to report that Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray once again denied herself and her colleagues a bigger slice of the pay pie. Rep. Murray, a woman of her word, has always fought proposals to increase the legislative pork barrel. She voted against a pay increase in 1983, and she'll do it again and again if necessary.

"I find it distasteful for legislators to vote on their own pay raises," she said. And she was doubly outraged that the raise is to go into effect during the same legislative session.

As for Senator William Golden, his vote in favor of the raise was a big disappointment. "It was a close decision. I didn't feel pressured at all," he said this week. He said he favored a raise tied to the cost of living increase, said he favored a raise which would mean around three or four percent this year.

Golden did have the guts to vote no on the emergency preamble and will not accept the raise either. He said he would take enough to pay the federal income taxes on it or give the entire pay raise to charity. He also said the raise should not have gone into effect until the next legislative session.

All hope is not lost, however. The Coalition for Pay Raise Repeal is about to begin gathering signatures to put the pay raise on the ballot.

The petition drive has not started, but when it does, we'll let you know where to sign it.We hope all those who value honest government will get involved.

QUALITY AUDITING CAC MARK OF INTEGRITY

NEWS ITEM — Cohasset: Angry citizens ready for battle vs. landfill. Concerned citizens collect 400 signatures opposing expansion of private landfill atop Crocker Lane. 'Doubling landfill, when capped, will rise 115 feet of garbage,' says one. Cohasset Heights is 1¼ miles up from Lily Pond, a town water source

"...Great news...Warner Bros. came through with an OK for the gala showing... Maybe they could do a sequel, Eastwick II — a Horror Story...on location at the Heights landfill..."

Organization needed to beat BFI

Letters

To the Editor:

Very often during the last few months, people have considered the possibility of hiring a lawyer to get the Heights Landfill shut down. In conversation with people, I have advised against this. Generally the litigation under consideration entails suing the DEQE and/or the Board of Health to act and enforce their rules. There are a lot of reasons why this is not a great idea. First this is what Att. Moehrke wants. Second you will lose a lot of people that support you, "Oh its out of our hands now, the courts will take care of it." Third IF (big if) you win the suit then court says that the DEQE and/or the BOH are supposed to do their job which is what they are supposed to do in the first place.

The citizens of Cohasset had better realize that the only way to beat BFI is through sheer numbers and organizing. People should stop waiting for the news story about it and get going to get rid of this menace to our community.

An impossible feat

won the Triple Crown in 1967, the last major leaguer to complete the feat. But it took some work, Coleman recalled. After Yaz had a dismal day at bat, he came to the ballpark two hours before the May 13th game. He hit the ball for one straight hour, lightening up on his grip of the bat and swinging high. That day, he hit two homers, and went on to capture 44 round-trippers that season.

"I think this book is the first inside look at that '67 team," Coleman stated. "In this book, I recalled the moment I realized this team was something big. We had just completed a ten-game winning streak and had flown back from Cleveland. When we arrived at Logan, the airport was jammed with thousands of fans. The plane was diverted to a small corner of the airport, but the fans found us. As we were taken away on the team bus, the fans mobbed the bus and started shaking it. It was scary, but it was an important day. We knew the fans were with us, that they believed in the 'miracle' team."

Coleman, who was hired in 1965 as the television anchor for the Red Sox, said most seasons are wrapped up by mid-July. "You get a sense by then of where the team is headed," he said. "And if there isn't any race, it can get a bit boring at times."

Nothing could have been further from the truth 20 years ago. The outcome of the entire six-month season was not decided until hours after the Sox played their final game. For two hours after the season's final win over Minnesota, the anxious players awaited the fateful outcome of the Tigers-Angels doubleheader. It was later that night, October 1, 1967, when the Sox were officially named American League champs.

Dick Williams (manager) hopped up and down and yelled, "It's over! It's over! It's unbelievable!"

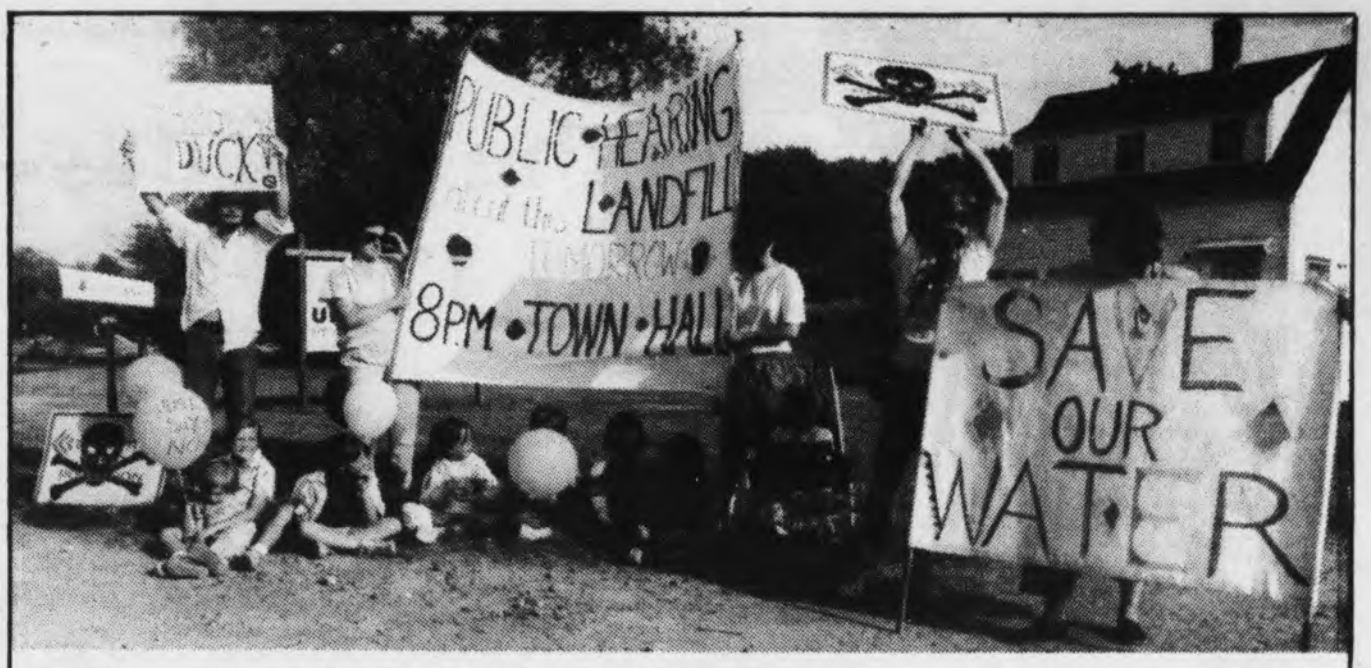
"It was," Coleman echoed, "a wonderful race." The feelings of the miracle team, retold by this eyewitness, are apparent in every page of the handsome book. This publication relates Coleman's feelings about that year. It is a book filled with memories that will stir anyone who witnessed that tumultuous year, or any new fan who has come to appreciate that team.

The foreward of the book was written by Coleman close friend and Scituate resident, Jim Lonborg. The Norwell dentist was a mainstay of the 1967 team, winning the prestigious Cy Young award - the last Red Sox pitcher until Roger Clemens to receive the honor.

In his brief sketch of that season, Lonborg states, "Total strangers who were fans in '67 will see me today, and it's as if we have instant communication. We've shared a wonderful baseball experience and it breaks down what normally would be a lot of initial contact tension.

"I don't think any of us on that team fully realized what effect 1967 would have on our lives and on the lives of millions of baseball fans. This book recaptures the excitement and the life of 1967 in a way that makes it happen all over again."

For Coleman, 1967 was the most exciting year of his career. But each game and each season brings its own unique excitement and interests. While on a recent homestretch, Coleman was busy filming commercials as the spokesman for Rockland Trust Bank.



"I enjoy my work all the time. Every time I go out to the park, I never know what will happen. Even if we have a terrible team one year, one night a pitcher may throw a no hitter. That's the nature of the game - you never know what's going to happen," he said.

The longtime Cohasset resident has future books in mind, but entertains no thoughts of retirement.

"It seems when I'm home during the season, I'm busier than ever," he laughed. "Then when we go back on the road, I have more time to take it easy." Often, during road trips to the West Coast, Coleman is accompanied by his wife, Ellen.

"I just plan to keep going," he added. "I've been very lucky to have a job I enjoy so much, and to have the Jimmy Fund, which I care so much about. That doesn't mean I'm not human. Sometimes, when I'm in Kansas City or some other city, I'll be thinking about how much I'd rather be on Sandy Beach. I'm not sure how long I'll continue with the baseball broadcasts, but I can go along with Ken's Corner (on WPLM) and the sports fantasy tapes."

And of course, there'll be more books.

Protesters stood outside the entrance to the Cohasset Heights landfill to warn residents about the June 10 hearing before the board of health. (John Magadieu)

JIMMY FUND SOFTBALL - 1987

Again this summer, the Town of Cohasset has accepted the challenge to play softball to raise money for the Jimmy Fund.

Most likely, there will be six towns involved this year, each town playing one another, at least one, and possibly two times.

Any Cohasset business or resident who would like to be a $30 sponsor of a town official is urged to call Jack Worley at the Recreation Office, 383-6791. Sponsors will have their name printed on the back of the Cohasset team shirts, which should receive much exposure during the summer months.

Any town official or employee who desires to play for the Cohasset team should also contact the Recreation Office, or Jack Worley as soon as possible. Games will be played on Sundays, at 1 p.m. on the Scituate field, behind the Police Station on Route 3A.

Ron Goodwin, of Goodwin Graphics will be printing the team shirts once again this season. Sponsorships and monies collected at the games will be given to the Jimmy Fund.

Gerry Dwight, Scituate selectman, is the founder and organizer of the softball games and should be thanked for his continued time, efforts and dedication to this project. Last year softball games generated $2,405.11 for the Jimmy Fund!

GOLF LESSONS

The Cohasset Recreation Department is currently accepting telephone registrations for golf lessons to be taught by Patrick McNamara, assistant pro at Cohasset Golf Club. Classes are scheduled to begin the week of July 6.

Should interest demand, a class for advanced, (tournament play), golfers will be started during early July.

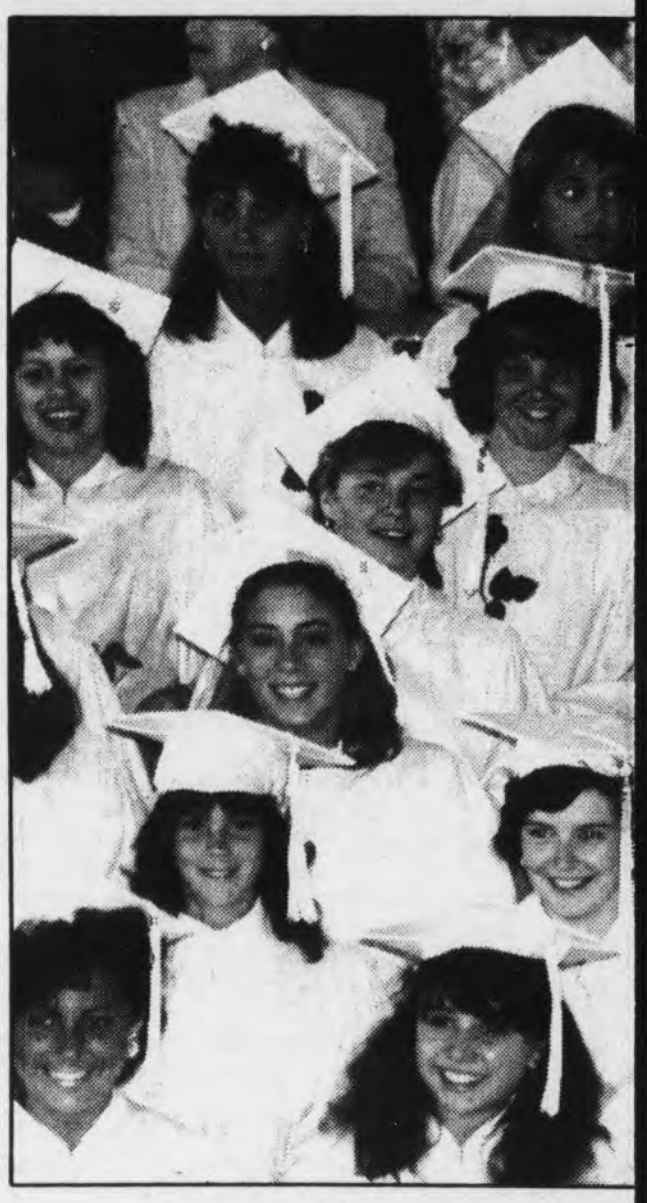
Sixty tickets remain for 'Witches'

There are about 60 tickets left to the June 15 benefit showing of The Witches of Eastwick.

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring the benefit showing of the film that was filmed throughout the South Shore last summer. Tickets for the film and a four-course dinner at Hugo's Lighthouse Restaurant are $50 per person.

Organizer Donald Staszko said the tickets will be sold until Friday, June 12 at the following locations: Kimball's By The Sea at Cohasset Harbor, King's Jewelers in Cushing Plaza on Rte. 3A, and at Cards 'n Shards in Cohasset Village.

The pre-movie surf and turf dinner will begin at 6:15 p.m. at Hugo's. Ticket holders will then be taken by motor coach to the Hanover General Cinema for a 9:30 p.m. showing of the film. Transportation will be provided back to the Cohasset restaurant.



Proceeds from the event will benefit the Milliken Athletic Field Renovation project in Cohasset. All donations to this event are tax deductible.

Cohasset Little League report. . .

The Red Sox had two games with the Mets this week and won both. Monday's game was a 25-3 blowout while Thursday's was a 7-6 squeaker.

In Monday's "barnburner" the Sox pounded out sixteen hits headed by Nathan Fiore's 5 for 5 with five runs scored and another four batted in. Eric Drysdale had a productive night at the plate as well recording four runs knocked in and two runs scored off a 3 for 4 performance. Other multiple hit games were registered by Andy Kuhn and Greg Lowenhagen who scored four runs.

Andy Kuhn picked up the win in this one as he recorded 14 of a possible 15 K's. Chris Rolandelli with two ringing doubles and David Leahy got the only hits off the Sox "flamethrower ." David was erased on the bases 2-5 (Fiore, the cather to Stevens at third.)

On Thursday the Sox again broke quickly at the plate to take a five-run lead at the end of two. Greg Lowenhagen took the mound for the Sox and pitched superb no-hit ball for three innings before leaving to attend an award ceremony for his sister.

Greg turned the pitching chores over to Pete Fahey and the five runns looked like "money in the bank" But. . .some clutch hitting by Brian Buckley and some untimely miscues by Sox fielders enabled the Mets to tie the game at six in the top of the sixth. The Mets, in fact, had the go-ahead run thrown out at the plate to end the wild, but torturous (from the reporter's standpoint) inning.

The Sox rallied in the home-half of the sixth to score and make a winner of Peter Fahey who I am certain would rather have recorded a save instead. Micky Welz opened with a single and advanced to third on a walk to Michael Riley and a ground-ball out by Mark Sechen. He then scored on a short fly to center which was misplayed by the Mets. Definitely exciting baseball!

In other action the Braves kept pace with the Sox as they defeated the Yankees twice. Braves' aces John Maynard and Doug Ellinger each picked up complete wins. I would pass along the scores to you, but my correspondent failed to include them in his box score.

League standings through June 5

Red Sox	7	1	.875
Braves	7	3	.700
Mets	2	7	.222
Yankees	2	7	.222

However, he did mention that Greg Pyle, otherwise called "the Gumby Leprechaun" proudly hit the team's first home run of the year and made Mr. Batts very proud! Other hitting feats to note were Chris (the Hulk) Kondrat's powering three triples while collecting a total of six hits in the two games, and Matthew (Bucket) Higgins' slugging three doubles in Friday's game.

Dates to Remember

The Deer Hill Concert for the Osgood School has been rescheduled for June 12 at the Deer Hill School. (Weather permitting)

At Joseph Osgood, June 22, move up all grades (K-3).

June 23, closing day, early dismissal, 12:55. Lunch will be served.

Appreciation tea

P.S.O. representatives Sue McNamara and Karen Devine hosted a tea recently at the home of Ann Vanderweil for the volunteer parents and teachers at the Joseph Osgood School.

Test results

The results of the S.R.A. and IOWA Tests administered Tuesday, May 19, Wednesday, May 20, and Thursday, May 21, will be mailed home to all students in grades seven through eleven (7-11) this summer. Students and parents are asked to review these results carefully in order to develop a clear picture of academic progress. Counselors will be available by appointment to answer questions and discuss these results with you in the fall.

High School examination policy

Semester examinations are administered in January and June. These evaluations are important enough to justify devoting eight school days for testing. Since the grades received for these examinations constitute one-third (one-fifth for grades seven and eight) of the total year's grade, we do not schedule students to take more than two (2) exams per test day.

The school year for students is one hundred and eighty (180) days. School personnel have no authority to excuse students from school attendance. Parents are obliged to insure that children under their care attend school each day.

Students who are absent on examination days will be required to make up the test upon return to school (or during the summer months if this be the case). No student will be allowed to take an examination prior to the scheduled date.

There may be extenuating circumstances, however, which a parent may wish to communicate to the principal. This request shall be in writing, in advance of the testing date(s), and addressed to the principal. The principal then shall rule on each case. A teacher may neither alter the exam schedule by his/her own decision, nor by request from a student or his/her parent.

Sixth (6th) grade move-up

An orientation program for incoming seventh graders will be held on Monday, June 22 and staffed by the Guidance Department. Its purpose is to give present 6th graders a brief introduction to Junior High School faculty, facilities, and programs.

Upon arrival at the high school, there will be a brief assembly for the 6th grade students. Courses, schedules, policies, activities, and other topics will be explained at this time. After lunch the students will be given tours through the building in small groups led by the High School's peer counselors. A question and answer period will be held in the auditorium prior to the student's return to the Deer Hill School at 2:15 p.m.

Volunteer State House tour guides

Secretary of State, Michael Connolly, has announced that the Volunteer Summer Tour Guide program will be offered again this year. This is a very successful program that began in 1972. To date, more than fifteen hundred students have participated.

Participating students conduct tours of the State House and handle other related duties on a part-time or full-time basis. Students learn about history, architecture, and the legislative process. It is an excellent opportunity for high school students interested in government, communications, public relations, and history.

Interested students should plan to attend an orientation session in Doric Hall Thursday, June 18 at 3 p.m.

For more information call 727-3676.

Cultural Homestay Institute

The institute is sponsoring a group of college-age Japanese students who will be coming to Cohasset from July 21 to August 20. If you are interested in hosting a student, please contact the following: Mrs. Jill Suddath, 925-3428; Ms. Janet Amiri, 383-2412.

Health Education Committee needs new volunteers

Are you interested in being an active member of an advisory committee dedicated to providing quality health education instruction to the students of the Cohasset Public Schools for the next school year?

The Cohasset Community Health Education Advisory Committee is seeking additional members to assist in the development of new programs and improvement of current programs.

The Cohasset Public Schools are in the process of developing an AIDS curriculum and it is absolutely essential that we have community input. Some of the other content areas of health education include: building self-esteem, developing decision-making skills, body safety (includes: preventing child abuse, rape, etc.), heart health, emotional and mental health, drug and alcohol education (serves as Cohasset's Adv. Cncl. to Gov.'s Alliance), human sexuality (includes: preventing teen pregnancy, preventing STD's), handicap awareness programs, nutrition, growth and development, and prevention of disease.

If interested in working with the Health Education Coordinator a few hours per month, please contact: Michael Gill, Health Education Coordinator, 383-6107, or leave your name and number at the main office at Cohasset High School, 383-6100.

All I needed to know in Kindergarten

By Robert Fulghum

Most of what I really need to know about how to live, and what to do, and how to be, I learned in kindergarten. Wisdom was not at the top of the graduate school mountain, but there in the sandbox at nursery school.

These are the things I learned: Share everything. Play fair. Don't hit people. Put things back where you found them. Clean up your own mess. Don't take things that aren't yours. Say you're sorry when you hurt somebody. Wash your hands before you eat. Flush. Warm cookies and cold milk are good for you. Live a balanced life. Learn some and think some and draw and paint and sing and dance and play and work every day some.

Take a nap every afternoon. When you go out into the world, watch for traffic, hold hands and stick together. Be aware of wonder. Remember the little seed in the plastic cup. The roots go down and the plant goes up and nobody really knows how or why, but we are all like that.

Goldfish and hamsters and white mice and even the little seed in the plastic cup—they all die. So do we.

And then remember the book about Dick and Jane and the first word you learned, the biggest word of all: LOOK. Everything you need to know is in there somewhere. The Golden Rule and love and basic sanitation. Ecology and politics and sane living.

Think of what a better world it would be if we all—the whole world—had cookies and milk about 3 o'clock every afternoon and then lay down with our blankets for a nap. Or if we had a basic policy in our nation and other nations to always put things back where we found them and cleaned up our own messes. And it is still true, no matter how old you are, when you go out into the world, it is best to hold hands and stick together.

Visiting hours will be held today (Thursday) from 2 to 4 p.m. and 7 to 7 p.m. at the McDonald Funeral Home, 3 Charles Street, East Weymouth. Burial will be in St. Francis Xavier Cemetery in Weymouth.

Mr. Sheehan died at the Massachusetts General Hospital following heart bypass surgery.

He was a teacher in the Cohasset school system for the past 28 years. Another teacher, John O'Leary, chairman of the guidance department at Cohasset High School, came to the school at the same as his close friend.

Recalling his good friend, Mr. O'Leary stated, "he was a dedicated professional who loved kids. He would go to any lengths to help them. Sometimes, I would ask him to help some young person here and he was always there. He was a man of strong ethical values with a strong commitment to his employers and this school system. He was a devoted father of five beautiful children."

O'Leary continued, "Ed was just an outstanding individual. If the kids ever needed a role model to emulate on how to live their lives, he was it. Kids were just attracted to him. He was an outstanding guy."

Mr. Sheehan received instruction in journalism in the Army and later wrote feature articles for the Weymouth News and covered school committee meetings for the Braintree Forum and the Hull-Nantasket Times. Mr. Sheehan was also a faithful contributor to the PSO school news for the Cohasset Mariner.

A native of Rockland, Mr. Sheehan graduated from Rockland High School in 1948 and joined the Army, winning a Bronze Star and a Korean Service medal with three bronze battle stars during the Korean conflict.

He was a Pre-Cana Conference volunteer through the Boston Roman Catholic archdiocese for 28 years, a lecturer and eucharistic minister at Immaculate Conception Church, he was also a member of the Right to Christian Initiation of Adults.

He leaves his wife, Mary V. (Lynch) Sheehan; two sons, Daniel C. Sheehan of East Weymouth and Edward F. Sheehan Jr. of Somerville; three daughters, Kathleen M. Sheehan of East Weymouth, Virginia M. Sheehan of Braintree, and Karen O'Brien of Hyde Park; and a brother, Timothy Sheehan of St. Petersburg, Fla.

Donations in Mr. Sheehan's memory may be made to the Immaculate Conception Church, 1199 Commercial St., East Weymouth, 02189.

Anne Wilder

A funeral Mass was celebrated this morning, June 11 in St. Anthony's Church for Annie W. Wilder, 89, who died Monday at Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home. Burial was in Union cemetery in Scituate.

Miss Wilder, a former deputy collector in the Scituate tax collector's office, was a past president of St. Mary's Ladies Sodality in Scituate. She worked for the town for 32 years, and retired 19 years ago. She was a former cost clerk for Suffolk Engraving Co.

Miss Wilder graduated from Scituate High School in 1917 and from Burdette Business College. She was born in Scituate and lived there until she moved to Cohasset eight years ago.

Miss Wilder leaves two nephews, Richard Wilder of Gardner and George Wilder of East Templeton; seven nieces, Florence Perry of Waquoit, Estella Savage of Dennis, Eleanor Meserve of Gardner, Norma Fournier of Baldwin, Doris Grabowski of Sandwich, Elizabeth Wilder of East Templeton, and Helen Denjour of Fitchburg, and a cousin, Marian E. Brown of Scituate.

Memorial donations may be made to a favorite charity.

St. Stephen's Parish

CAN YOU CANOE?

Our parish canoe trip, led by our North River Guide John Seavey, will take place Saturday, June 27. The trip is open to young and old, families and singles alike. We will meet at the church at 9 a.m. and return by 3:30 p.m. Bring a picnic lunch. There will be a sign up sheet in Walton Rodgers Hall so that we can arrange for canoes. A safe, fun trip will be had by all canoeing along the scenic North River, particularly beautiful at this time of year. Be sure to sign up.

THANKS FROM THE STEVENSON FAMILY

This week, when another check was handed to us for the Greater Boston Walk for Hunger, we were again reminded of the quiet level of support we have had out there. In past years we have stood up in church or put a notice in "The Carillon" inviting others to walk the 20 miles with us, or pledge to support us. This year we did neither, and yet many parishioners have sought us out asking, "Did you walk? I want to support you."

We are grateful for your support. In addition we feel blessed at being part of a community that displays this level of commitment. The Walk set a new record this year raising 2.5 million dollars, the money going to soup kitchens, food pantries, and other feeding programs in the greater Boston area.

We love doing the walk — as you know — and furthermore, we love all of you for supporting us.

RED CROSS BLOOD DRIVE

Tuesday, June 16, 2:30-7:30 p.m. at First Parish House, 23 No. Main St.

SERMONS AVAILABLE ON TAPE

Sam Pease has begun a tape ministry at the parish. He is taping and duplicating each Sunday sermon. If you or someone you know is unable to get to church and would like to receive a tape of Sunday's sermon, call the parish office or Sam Pease at 383-1406. If you would like to help Sam in this, that would be equally valuable. In this way we continue to reach out to all our parish family.

Historical museums open to public June 20

Cohasset's two unique historical museums located at the village center will open for another summer season Saturday, June 20. The Historical Society's Capt. John Wilson Historical House and the Maritime Museum are scheduled to remain open through September 30, and can be visited each afternoon except Mondays from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. Admission by donation is 75 cents per building for adults, 25 cents per building for children ages 6 to 12.

The Capt. John Wilson House is an early Cohasset Sea Captain's home, built by housewright David Nichols in 1810. The old Captain's house retains many of the features found in homes of that era, and today holds an extensive and significant collection of antique furniture, home furnishings, kitchenware, china and stoneware, artworks and toys dating from the early and mid-19th century. Unusual for early dwellings is the arrangement of living quarters in the Capt. Wilson House, as the kitchen or cooking fireplace is found on the second floor of the house, since the first floor originally was designed to be a small ship chandlery operated by Capt. Wilson. Also unusual are the street front windows, having ten panes of glass in the upper sashes and fifteen in the lower.

Featured in the living area of the house is a "corner clock", an antique grandfather's clock built in to one corner of the front bedroom. The clock originally was made by Samuel Bates, was located in his home just across the street, and was given to the Historical Society many years ago. The Capt. Wilson House, owned by the Society since 1936, was presented to the Society by William H. McGraw, a Cohasset businessman, and for many years served as the Society's headquarters. It was Cohasset's first historical museum building. Today it holds the Historical Society's major collections of early household artifacts, gathered from the other old homes of the town.

Immediately next door to the venerable Capt. Wilson House, the Society's Maritime Museum itself is one of the most significant historical buildings in Cohasset. Built in the mid or later 18th century by early Cohasset shipowner and seafarer Samuel Bates, the building originally was the ship chandlery or supply store and the counting house of the Bates family fishing and mercantile business. Samuel Bates' stone wharf at Cohasset Harbor first appeared on the tax roles of the town in the 1750's. The old wharf remains intact at Border Street, the family's counting house and chandlery was moved from there to its present location in the village during the 1950's when it was presented to the Historical Society by Mr. and Mrs. William Cox. Today this uniquely historical building contains the extensive collections of the Society relating to Cohasset's seafaring past. This was a fishing and mercantile town throughout the great "Age of Sail", and much of its history is related to the vigorous maritime ventures of its citizens. As early as the first decade of the 1700's saw vessels being constructed at "Ship Cove", today's Cohasset Harbor.

By the early 1800's Cohasset had become an active fishing port, shipbuilding center and home town for mercantile sailors voyaging to many parts of the world. The Cohasset mackerel schooner fleet surpassed half a hundred big two-masted vessels in number by the mid-19th century, owned by the seafaring families of the town. Larger merchant ships Cohasset-owned and crewed sailed from Boston to all corners of the globe. The Historical Society's Maritime Museum recalls that era of "wooden ships and iron men" in its collections of ship models, ship's carvings, fishing gear, relics of early shipwrecks, artwork, documents and charts relating to Cohasset as a maritime community. The story of both first and second Minot's Ledge Lighthouse off the Cohasset shore is there, as are relics of the volunteer lifesaving service which stood ready to aid mariners in distress for nearly 150 years.

The Maritime Museum also holds, on its second floor, a group of collections of general historical nature, ranging from stone tools of the early Indian tribes located here to early housewright's and cordwainer's tools, from an exhibit of early apothecary's supplies to 19th century baby carriages. The second floor of the Maritime Museum spans nearly three centuries of the town's history fortunately preserved for our generation to view.

Each of the Historical Society's two unique museum buildings at Cohasset Center presents a different, if complimentary, view of the history and development of our town. Today's busy suburban community was preceded by a community whose roots were in the land itself and whose eyes were on the oceans of the world. Agriculture and seafaring together built many a coastal New England village, and ours is no exception. As much as has been preserved of that heritage can be seen this summer at the Cohasset Historical Society's Capt. John Wilson Historical House and Maritime Museum.

Community to develop 'Fair Housing' plan

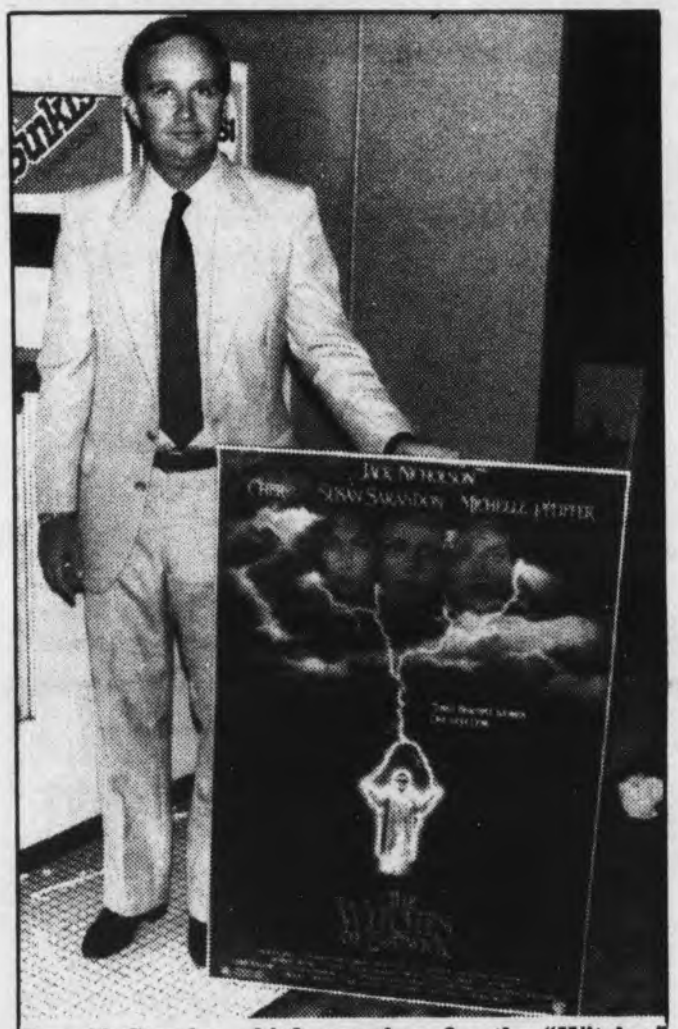
By Jane Lane
Mariner Staff

The Cohasset Fair Housing Committee, which is working to develop a low and moderate income housing plan, will be meeting with a representative of the Massachusetts Housing Partnership program next week.

Ana Perez, South Shore regional director of the Massachusetts Housing Partnership, will discuss available housing plans with the committee members. The meeting will be held at 8:30 p.m. Tuesday, June 23 at St. Stephen's Church.

The committee, which was formed last September by selectmen, has already formulated a comprehensive community profile. That data will be submitted to the state for comment and input regarding suitable housing plans for the town.

According to the committee's profile, Cohasset's population is not expected to change significantly through the year 2010. There are nearly double the percentage of single family homes in Cohasset than in the Boston Standard Metro Statistical Area, and their value is 40 percent greater.



As Chairman Rev. E. Clifford Cutler noted, "there is also a clear underrepresentation of minorities in this town."

The minority population in Cohasset has remained under one percent while Boston's percentage has increased to ten percent in 1980. Underrepresentation is particularly noticeable among the black population in Cohasset which decreased by a quarter during this period while that of other minorities (Asians, Koreans, etc.) increased by over 100 percent.

An interesting note, Rev. Cutler explained, was the increase in the elderly population of Cohasset. The number of elderly residents over 65 years, increased 26 percent from 1970 to 1980. The elderly population in Boston grew by only one percent during the same time.

Statistics were found in census reports and information provided by the school department.

Donald Staszko, chief organizer for the "Witches" benefit, stands aside a framed poster of the movie, given to the Chamber from the film bureau.

Familiar faces and places evoke laughter and memories of 'Witches'

Applause greeted familiar Cohasset scenes, laughter interrupted quiet concentration as faces in the crowd were recognized by friends.

And if the The Witches of Eastwick did not receive the highest platitudes, they were passed along to the Chamber of Commerce for the memorable evening they gave to the town.

Monday night, more than 300 persons together enjoyed dinner at Hugo's Lighthouse. Following a four-course meal and a comfortable motor coach ride to the Hanover General Cinema, they watched an exclusive showing of the movie made last summer in Cohasset.

Hearty applause and slight gasps filled the movie theatre as the opening scene began. An aerial shot through the puffy white clouds descended beneath to the rooftops of Cohasset Common and the village area. It was a breathtaking vision, as most people have never pictured their town.

Throughout the night, serious and comical scenes in the film were punctuated by outbursts of laughter from viewers. Familiar faces in the First Parish Church, in the school band scenes and along the streets were evident throughout the film.

If the theme of the movie was not to everyone's liking, no one could fault the beauty of the South Shore as it appeared behind the camera lens of cinematographer Vilmos Zsigmond.

Several town officials and people directly involved in bringing the movie to Cohasset were treated to a special sneak preview last Thursday evening. The Massachusetts Film Bureau hosted a special preview show at the USA Cinema in Boston. Selectmen from the local South Shore communities, and members of the

Bewitching warning for hearings

By John Magadieu

In preperation for hearings before the health and zoning boards June 17 and 18, opponents of Cohasset Heights Ltd. have stepped up their campaign against the private, commercial landfill.

Dressed as Jack Nicholson and "witches," the protesters made their presence felt Monday as they rowed past Hugo's Restaurant during a preview celebration of The Witches of Eastwick, holding a sign that read "Save our water." Performers in the aquatic protest included Brian Lipsett, dressed in a kimona, along with Susan Rodgerson and Mary Lou Clark and an unidentified witch.

During the evening commute Tuesday, protesters, mostly mothers and young children, lined up at the corner of Crocker Lane and Route 3A. They held signs bearing slogans such as "Public hearing about this landfill tomorrow" and "Danger! Toxic pollution."

Although a number of passers-by honked their approval of the demonstration, "the feedback to our protest has been negative from people around town," according to Doneen Pride, a vocal opponent of Cohasset Heights. "No one will listen to a bunch of 'hippies,' they say.

"When we wanted to put our petition in stores downtown," she noted, "the merchants told us it would be bad for their businesses.

"They keep telling us what a great guy Paul Barry is," Pride said. "Sure, he's a great guy. This is not a

Atkinson's advice: travel to Souppes

If there is one message the Atkinson girls have to take back from their recent trip to Souppes Sur Loing, it is: go!

Julia, 20, and Sarah, 18, recently spent a week in Cohasset's sister city and came back with deep affection for the people and places there. Excitedly, they talked about their excursion to Europe, and the new friendships and knowledge they brought back to their hometown.

But most importantly, they agreed, residents here must understand the overwhelming opportunity we have to share this community with the young Souppes teens who will soon be visiting. "It is really a true exchange between families," Julia explained. "You get very close to these families. You feel very comfortable and they really want you to stay with them. While we were there, we met several other families, and they asked us to stay with them the next time we come to Souppes."

Sarah agreed that the French families eagerly anticipate meeting more Cohasset residents. "And families here should participate in hosting a Souppes resident. Even if you don't know French, they are wonderful, warm people and it's great to know them."

"Within minutes," Julia added, "you'll be communicating with them. Language is not a barrier."

Julia is a 1984 graduate of Cohasset High School and is now attending the University of Maine. Sarah, a 1986 graduate of the high school, is a student at the University of Rhode Island. They decided to travel this spring to Europe, where they spent a week in London with another Cohasset friend, Suzannah Barrett. She is spending the year abroad in Bristol, England.

Bloodmobile success

The Red Cross parked its bloodmobile in front of the First parish house in Cohasset Tuesday, to collect donations of blood.

The community blood drive attracted a large number of donors, thanks to the effort of coordinator Corrine Cahill.

"We're usually very successful in Cohasset," said Carol Browne, the Red Cross unit supervisor.

Hoping to collect 90 pints of blood within five-and-a-half hours, the Red Cross seemed well on its way to achieving the goal at about 4 p.m., as donors lined the hallways of the First parish house.

According to Alfred Odermatt, Chairman of the community blood drive, Cohasset donors have lined up to give three times per year for more than 30 years now.

"The Red Cross collects 10,000 pints per week and distributes them to area hospitals. But with a shelf-life of only 42 days, we can't stockpile blood," Browne said, "so we are always looking for donors."

Anyone, aged 18 and up is eligible to give blood. Seventeen-year-olds may donate with parental permission.

Minot's Light renovation begins

The Coast Guard will temporarily extinguish Minot's Ledge Light about June 17.

The light will remain out while the 127-year-old structure is renovated. The renovation will be done by Gayle Electric of Whippany, NJ. The cost of the contract is $364,000. The work is expected to be completed in September, 1987.

Plans include removing and replacing the top section of crumbling granite with the same type and color granite. The bronze lantern house will be cleaned. The project will restore the light to its original appearance.

The Coast Guard planned the project to preserve the structural integrity of the lighthouse. Water and weather conditions offshore weaken granite. A previous light on the same site fell into the sea during a storm in 1851, killing two lighthouse keepers.

Because of the light's historic nature, the Massachusetts Historical Society was consulted in the planning process. The Society's representatives toured the light and discussed the work with Coast Guard engineers. As a result, the Society gave the Coast Guard a letter of no objection to the project.

Construction of the original lighthouse began in 1847 and was finished in 1850.

Notice to taxpayers

The demands on the unpaid Fiscal 1987 Real Estate Taxes were mailed on Friday, June 12.

The taxes along with the $5 demand fee and interest at 14 percent is due and payable at the office of the Collector of Taxes, 41 Highland Avenue, Cohasset on or before June 30, 1987.

If you have any questions please call the office of the treasurer-collector at 383-0611.

. . . Cohasset's week

Tax concerns

Selectman Martha Gjesteby expressed concern Monday that Cohasset is losing money by failing to levy taxes on the town's two hotels, Kimball's by the Sea Motor Inn and The Red Lion Inn.

The state has figured Cohasset's collections at $7,516 per percentage point of tax, with a possible local excise of up to four percent.

Cohasset does not exercise its local option to levy hotel/motel excise taxes, although the figure is deleted from Cohasset's returns on the state cherry sheet.

Chairman Rocco Laugelle defended the current policy.

"I hate the thought of taxing more and more," he said. "This is a good business; it's not a factory. It brings people in to shop at the stores in town. I hate the thought of any more taxes.

"That idea," he observed, "is how we got the nickname Taxachusetts."

"I agree," Gjesteby said, "but we are losing money from our cherry sheet."

Robbins seeks patience

Building Inspector Donald Robbins went before the board of selectmen Monday, to ask for patience.

"I have a lot to do at this time of year," he told the board. "A lot of zoning problems come out of the woodwork.

"My response time therefore, will not be what it has been," he explained. "I've been so busy, people are not getting their responses as usual - It's taking as long as two to three weeks what I could normally do in one or two days."

Robbins said reviewing plans, such as those for Kimball's by the Sea, which he looked over last week to determine whether the motor inn has violated town bylaws, consumes a lot of his time.

"There's an awful lot in that file," he noted.

While he estimated the plans for an average house take about an hour to review, it will take him about 10 to 12 hours to review the plans for big projects, such as the new Stop & Shop.

"For the community center," he noted, "I rejected plans three times, before I finally got a plan I could approve."

When Robbins is not reviewing plans, he is making inspections. "I took a drive on Route 3A the other day," he told the board, "and I saw 14 violations within about a mile and a half. Making those inspections takes an awful lot of time."

Robbins said he has an average of six inspections per day, each taking an average of 30 to 45 minutes of his time. "It seems like every time I take care of one, two more pop up," he said.

"I'm not here to ask for help," he told the board, "but to let you know I need time."

With regard to the special permit, which the board issued to Kimball's for expansion of use, he said, "You can't just say 'You've got to do this and this and this.'"

"I enforce the bylaws," Robbins explained. "I don't write them and I don't make them up."

COA receives grants

The Cohasset Council on Aging has been notified by the Executive Office of Elder Affairs that it has been awarded two grants totalling $20,700 under the state discretionary grant program.

The first grant will allow the council to hire a part-time community outreach worker to help identify older senior citizens who need services but have not avail themselves to any services offered by the Council on Aging.

A second grant, $13,300 will be shared by Scituate and Norwell to provide rides on a specially equipped van and trained driver to transport handicapped people of any age to doctor, hospital, and social events.

Both programs will start this summer said Kathy Bryanton, director of the Council on Aging.

This year, a total of $825,000 will benefit more than 175 Councils on Aging. The total of 141 grants ranging from $500 to $25,000, with larger awards going to two or more Councils providing services with mutual needs.

Anyone interested in obtaining help or information may call the Cohasset Council on Aging at 383-9112.

Atkinsons' advice: Everyone should go to Souppes

Another local friend, Tammy Karcher, met the Atkinsons and is still there on a six-week program sponsored by the University of Maine.

Prior to their stay in Souppes, the girls met another friend in Paris. Anne Koehrer, a former AFS student who lived in Cohasset for a year, showed them the sites in the French capital city, Dijon and in Lyon, where the trial of Klaus Barbie was underway. (Although they went by the court house on a weekend, where armed guards were the only hints that something formidable had taken place inside).

It was back to Paris where the girls took a comfortable train ride directly into Souppes. They stayed with the Ballot family during their entire six-day stay.

"Souppes is a tiny town," Sarah explained. "There's more of a centralized village and then these tiny streets run off from the village. The streets are just wide enough to accommodate two Rabbitt-sized cars side-by-side."

Her sister added, "We couldn't believe how fast they all drive there. They're not reckless, but they all drive very fast." Sarah agreed, noting that while she was in the Ballot vehicle, she clocked a speed of 120 kilometers, or 70 or 80 m.p.h. on the speedometer. "But that's not considered out of the ordinary," she stated. "And the biggest highways are about the size of Rte.3A"

Among their more vivid memories are the kindness of the people of Souppes. Despite the language barrier (neither girl speaks French), communication was little problem, they said. A smile here, a gesture there, and careful listening resulted in immediate camaraderie.

"I can't believe how nice the people are there," Sarah said. "And the fact we were from Cohasset made them even friendlier, I'm sure. When we were introduced to other people, they would say we were from Cohasset and immediately people smiled and talked to us."

Julia noted that the ultimate compliment was paid them toward the end of their visit to Souppes. The Ballots hosted a party for the Atkinsons, and friends and family were invited. "It was a wonderful night," Julia said, although few spoke fluent English. "And at the end, several families asked us to come back and stay with them. That was quite a compliment to us."

During one of their frequent sightseeing tours, the Atkinsons were taken to the Chambord Chateau. As they were leaving the valley, they noticed another family whose children looked familiar. Another glance, and they realized it was the John Lennon family from Cohasset. "We couldn't believe it," Julia said. "We started yelling. It was so unbelievable!"

The Ballot's daughter, Mary Pierre, will be coming to Cohasset this summer. And it was comforting for her parents to see another Cohasset family and meet them before their daughter begins her long journey.

Among the other sights the Atkinsons will long remember are the large centuries-old cathedrals, including the famed Cathedral Sainte Croix in Orleans. That was where Joan of Arc was victorious in one of her last battles. "We showed them a picture of the First Parish (where their father, Rev. Edward Atkinson is minister) and they said to us, 'oh, a modern church'. To them, a 200-year old church is modern. Their cathdrals date back to the 11th and 12th centuries. And they're magnificent buildings. When they're filled with hundreds of people singing and the organ played, it's so inspriring. It's not like anything I've ever heard," Julia said.

The food in Souppes, they agreed, is prepared in a fashion similar to the meals made in their own kitchen. Breakfast, however, is not considered an important meal of the day, and dinner is usually served between 8 and 11 p.m. Bedtime is directly after the supper.

A variety of cheeses is served with the meals, along with warm, fresh-baked French bread. In general, the people of Souppes are "very thin," according to the two girls who said there is no snacking between meals. "And you don't want to," Sarah noted. "I was always full from the last meal," although both girls noted a certain undeniable attraction to the freshly-baked double chocolate croissants they spied in a local bakery.

The residents of Souppes accepted them eagerly and with affection. Four kises on their cheeks was their customary greeting. A friendly embrace or smile was added once they realized they were from Cohasset.

"They told us we smiled a lot, and they liked to see that. They really don't have as many facial expressions as we do, but they didn't consider us silly. They said they loved to see us smile," Sarah added.

Life in the United States, even in Cohasset, is faster-paced than in the country village of Souppes. "They wanted to know what we did at night," Julia recalled. "Since we eat dinner so much earlier than they do in France, they wanted to know what we liked to do afterwards."

Despite the hectic schedule during their spring sojourn, and now after their return, the Atkinsons are sure of one thing. When asked if they would return to their sister city, without hesitation they replied, "absolutely!"

Sandy Beach licenses questioned

Cohasset Police Sgt. Richard Barrow argued with selectmen Monday, claiming the board's issuance of hawkers licenses for Sandy Beach violates town bylaws.

"The use of the Sandy Beach parking lot off Atlantic Avenue," he noted, is limited to vehicles having properly displayed facility permits or Sandy Beach Association parking permits.

Facility permits are issued to residents, summer residents and those who own real estate within the town. Sandy Beach Association parking permits are issued only to subscribers of that association.

"By issuing these hawkers licenses," Barrow said, "you are circumventing the town bylaw.

"With regard to the one license you have already issued, I see the poor fellow paid $30 for it; the permit says he can go and sell snacks at Sandy Beach, but according to the bylaw, he's not allowed to park there. So, he paid $30 for nothing."

According to a July 2, 1986 decision by Town Counsel Richard Henderson, however, nothing in the bylaw precludes the board from issuing peddler's licenses, even if the peddler will be selling foods and beverages in the Sandy Beach parking lot.

"The intent," Henderson explained in the decision, "was to give the recreation commission jurisdiction to issue facilities permits allowing passenger vehicles to park at Sandy Beach and was not intended to deprive the board of selectmen of rights which they have under other provisions of the bylaws."

Barrow insisted he has spoken with Henderson and that the attorney has changed his view.

"I'm here to ask you to ask town counsel for a new opinion on who can park at Sandy Beach," he said. The board agreed.

"The police dept. has more important things to do than to arrest people for parking down at Sandy Beach," Chairman Rocco Laugelle commented. "Until the town counsel advises us differently, we will continue to issue hawkers licenses for Sandy Beach."

According to Janet Chalke, the selectmen's secretary, Henderson's July 2, 1986 decision still stands in support of the board's position.

Barrow complained when selectmen gave Warner Bros. license to use the beach, it precluded use by the people of Cohasset.

"As long as we give permission and it's done properly," Laugelle said, "then it's okay."

Barrow told the board, the police dept. has encountered problems of vendors selling matrerials such as marijuana and fireworks, in addition to their standard ice cream cones and cheez doodles.

"We haven't heard anything about it," Laugelle said. He asked for specific information.

"Well, this has been over a period of years," Barrow said. "We don't have specific information available.

"If we can't solve this here," he suggested, "we will take it to district court."

"Okay," Laugelle said. "If that's the route we have to, that's the way we have to go."

Barrow noted a judge will make a decision, not an opinion. "It's a hard way to go," he said.

"Do you question the board's right to issue these permits?" queried board member Burtram Pratt.

"No," Barrow responded. "But vendors must have Sandy Beach permits. It's the bylaw."

"We'll find out whether we have the right to issue a permit without a beach sticker," Laugelle assured him.

"We know well and good," Pratt added, "that many vendors are from out of town, and are not here to enjoy recreational activities at the beach. They are there to sell their merchandise and we have the right to grant them permits - end of question."

The answer will be forthcoming from town counsel.

Deer Hill students host colonial lunch

The invitation read, "We the People of the fifth grade invite you to share a colonial lunch at the Deer Hill Tavern" and Friday, June 12, the students, faculty and many parents, did just that.

The menu included "cream of peanut soup, one of George Washington's favorites, cornbread from varied colonial kitchens of Cohasset, and apple cider," served by fifth graders dressed in colonial costumes. Their backdrop was a mural on which they had created a New England tavern.

Ken Ekberg, principal of the Deer Hill School, obviously got into the spirit of the day. He arrived in full costume, as did fifth grade teachers, Pat Murphy, who supervised the tavern, Frank Deakin and Ray Levine.

During lunch, all three classes were also treated to a concert by the "Fife and Drum Corp" of the fifth grade led by Beverly Riley. They played "Yankee Doodle Dandy" and "Chester." The stage bore some resemblance to the room in Independence Hall, in Philadelphia, where the Constitution had been drafted and signed. The seal of the state of Pennsylvania hung beneath a Betsy Ross flag, and a chair and desk stood nearby with an inkwell containing a quill pen and a candlestick.

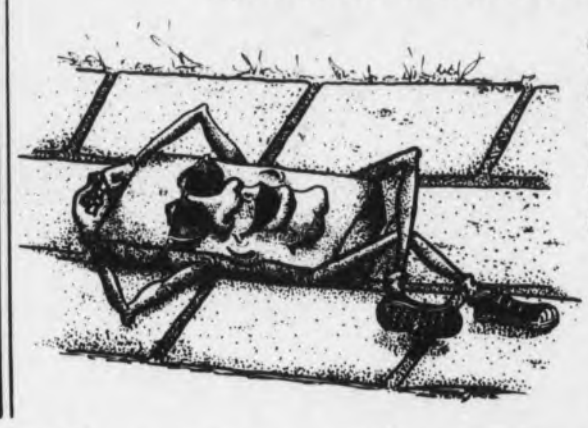
The fifth grade curriculum includes the study of the U.S. Constitution, and during this bicentennial year, many activities have been added.

The English classes "translated" the Bill of Rights, the reading classes have brought George Washington, Abigail Adams, Ben Franklin and Paul Revere, among others, back to life after reading their biographies, through interviews video-taped by librarian, Marjorie Murphy. Skits depicting the first ten amendments are still in rehearsal. These will be performed when Attorney Richard Henderson visits fifth grade.

Lynn Ferrara, a guest lecturer, fascinated the students with her analysis of the signatures of the constitutional delegates.

A field trip to downtown Cohasset was a marvelous source of information for all of these activities, as well as reports on colonial living the children have completed. A stop at the "Red Lion Inn" helped to created the "Deer Hill Tavern." The Maritime Museum and the Capt. Wilson House contain so many treasures from these times in our country's history. Finding them to complete the packets prepared for the trip was somewhat like a "scavenger hunt." A stop at the First Parish Meeting House was incluc ed, with a talk by Rev. Atkinson about its role during trying times. The children also stopped at the home of Barbara Conte, where her father's and her miniature reproductions of historical furnishings were discussed. A delightful visit to their famous dollhouse was also included.

Students in grade five celebrated Constitution Dress Up Day last week at Deer Hill School. Costumed in colonial garb, the students, along with Principal Ken Ekberg, entertained family and friends.



The fifth grade class also visited the U.S.S. Constitution and related museums and was fortunate to have as a guest speaker, Capt. Tyrone G. Martin, grandfather of student, John McDonald, and former commanding officer of "Old Ironsides."

The students used their expertise concerning the Constitution when they visited all the classes at Deer Hill to explain the meaning of the bicentennial celebration, what they have learned about the constitution, and to invite everyone to "sign-on" to a replica of the document. This project is sponsored by the National Council of Christians and Jews. Each signer received a card proclaiming that he or she had "signed-on."

The teachers of the fifth grade team wish to thank all those who helped to make this time so special to the students. The PSO gave both moral and financial support. Their representative, Kyle Lubitz deserves a special bow. We thank David Wadsworth, curator of the town museums, as well as the Historical Society, who lent caps for the cafeteria workers for the day; Frank Coffee, owner of the "Red Lion"; Pat Wunschel and her staff at the high school, who prepared the soup, our own cafeteria personnel, and everyone who helped in any way.

Locals shine in 'Witches'

Cohasset Chamber of Commerce and about 100 more persons viewed the film before its official Friday, June 12 public opening.

But Monday night was Cohasset's night to bask in the limelight created when Hollywood invaded last summer. As the patrons filed into Hugo's dining room for their meal, television reporters and camera crews walked from table to table, requesting interviews. Diners willingly obliged as they shared the excitement of being part of this special presentation.

The restaurant was filled with the anticipation of viewing the long-awaited film. Patrons were seated at long tables and soon began chatting excitedly with new acquaintances. They were young and old, in formal and informal garb.

Jamie McGonnigal of Norwell enjoyed dinner along with his family who eagerly anticipated Jamie's screen debut as an extra in the movie. Some residents had heard previously that the scenes in which they appeared had been cut from the edited version. Osgood teacher, Faith Bowker, had been told by friends who viewed the film that her "famous" scene in the Eastwick Deli alongside star Jack Nicholson, was back in Hollywood, on the cutting room floor.

"I had so much fun - but I can't believe they cut that scene," she said in disbelief. With a smile she quickly added that she was looking forward to seeing the movie - with or without her scene.

After a long meal, the crowd slowly mingled its way out into the parking lot where several luxury motor coaches waited to transport them to the Hanover Cinema. The journey took about 25 minutes, where patrons were asked to wait in the lobby until the 9:45 p.m. show began.

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce sponsored the event, and had rented the theatre and the movie for the one-time showing. Although the heat and humidity was stifling, everyone smiled and conversed while they waited for an earlier show to be let out of the theatre. Once inside, most patrons quickly found an available seat, and grabbed some popcorn before showtime.

Prior to the start of the film, Chamber President Richard Straley thanked member Donald Staszko for his "marvelous efforts" in organizing this special showing.

Then, Julie Wrinn of the Massachusetts Film Bureau spoke to the audience. She told them that whatever their opinion of the movie, "please give yourselves rave reviews. Because without you, this movie could not have generated almost $7 million for the state of Massachusetts." She presented the Chamber a framed poster of the Witches of Eastwick advertisement, depicting Nicholson levitating the three witches above him.

As the film opened with the aerial shot, "oohs and ahhs" filled the auditorium. A burst of applause sounded as the camera zoomed closer into the village. With every recognizable face or scene, laughter or applause sounded through the hall. If nothing else, everyone enjoyed picking familiar faces out from the several crowd shots in the movie.

Once the movie was completed, weary viewers filed out to the parking lot where the buses were awaiting their return to Cohasset. Chauffeur-driven limousines transported members of the Chamber's board of directors back home.

By the time the evening was completed, it was 12:30 a.m. and most residents were too exhausted to even discuss the movie. They left smiling, but tired.

Former Chamber president Wayne Sawchuk, who was directly involved in the behind-the-scenes work to bring Witches to Cohasset, thought the film was "nice. It really was a beautifully-done film. I think Nicholson was wonderful and I think everyone in Cohasset can appreciate how beautiful the town was portrayed in this movie. I think the cooperation of the town was well worth it. To see the Common and the people of Cohasset on screen was well worth our cooperation last summer."

After viewing the film Monday night, Chamber President Straley said until all the bills have been paid, there can be no estimate on how much money was raised by the event. The proceeds from Monday night's presentation will go towards the Milliken Field renovation project.

That sure is quite a feat, and everyone is certainly proud of you (and all of the other riders) for all of your efforts.

☐ Congratulations go to Dennis Walsh, this year's winner of the Golden Apple Award. The award is given to the teacher that the Senior Class chooses, and is given by the PSO. He certainly deserved it, he's grand!

Editorial

Thanks to chamber

Now that the summer of 1987 has arrived, we think the time has come to say goodbye to The Witches of Eastwick. It was fun while it lasted, but like everything, all good and great things must come to an end.

We can't imagine experiencing a more exciting summer than in 1986 when the cast and crew members of Witches arrived in town. We had no idea what to expect, but we believe most people were pleasantly surprised. Who would have thought they could actually clean up that mess after Jack Nicholson "did his thing" in the First Parish Church? And in time for a wedding rehearsal the next day? Remember those thousands of goose feathers flying down Elm Street toward the harbor? Although some people say they occasionally still find a lost feather beneath a shrub or behind a picket fence, the crew members did an amazing job locating most of the debris and retrieving it for disposal.

So now the movie has been released and we can all experience the opportunity of viewing neighbors, friends and family on the wide screen of a local cinema. We expect by the end of this month, nearly the entire population of Cohasset will have seen the film. Young children, accompanied by parents, of course, will watch themselves or their friends in various scenes through the movie. Hopefully, they won't comprehend much of the dialogue, because we admit that watching familiar faces and locales was more fun than paying attention to the storyline.

We hope everyone has the opportunity to see Cohasset look more luscious than it has ever appeared. It truly is a picture-postcard town and now we have it for prosperity. We are somewhat fearful that the more delicate members of our community may find this film vile in its language and action. We don't disagree, however that can perhaps be overcome by an intense appreciation for the amazingly beautiful photography.

While we remain on the fading subject of Witches, we must congratulate the Chamber of Commerce on a memorable, amazingly well-run event Monday night. How they ever pulled it off without a major incident is beyond our comprehension. With apparent ease these business men and women of Cohasset arranged exclusive permission to hold a benefit performance of the film. Then they scheduled a tremendous pre-show dinner for 350 and arranged comfortable transportation to the moviehouse from Hugo's. Moving a throng of 350 could not have been a simple task, yet the evening was unhurried and fun-filled for the patrons.

It may have been a logistical nightmare for the organizers of the event, but we who sat back and enjoyed their work can only offer our congratulations. The town of Cohasset should be extremely grateful it has such a confident, talented and hard-working group of professionals within this community.

Well, Witches has come and gone. But the memories are fresh and (thanks to video technology), they will never be forgotten.

Museums to open June 20

The Cohasset Historical Society's two museums will open for the summer season this Saturday, June 20. They will remain open to the public through September 30. Museum hours will be 1:30 to 4:30 P.M. each day except Mondays.

The Captain John Wilson House and Maritime Museum, on Elm Street at Cohasset Center, are the repositories for the Society's extensive collections of artifacts, artworks and documents relating to the town's history. Featured at the Maritime Museum this summer is a "revolving exhibit" related to the nation's Constitutional Bicentennial.

Sandy Beach needs residents' donations

Letters

To the Editor:

This past week almost 2,600 homes in Cohasset received the annual letter requesting support for Sandy Beach. This is a treasured resource of our town and has provided highly pleasurable recreational and relaxing hours for many people — older, younger and in between — in one of the most beautiful settings of New England. Though privately owned by the Sandy Beach Associaton, it is operated under its charter to be open to the townspeople.

The money support needed from Cohasset people is used for beach clean-up and maintenance — $4300 spent initiallyto clear rocks and debris and re-spread sand scattered by the many winter storms. Similar expense will be incurred if summer storms toss up seaweed and more rocks.

Considerable money is spent on beach supervision —more than $12,000 last year — for life-guards and daily beach clean-up. In order to attract young people in a scarce labor market, it was necessary to increase hourly rates this year. The Sandy Beach Association operates withasminimal expense level as possible but consistent with the safety and cleanliness standards of its beach-using public.

Some folks think that the car stickers purchased each year from the Town support Sandy Beach. These stickers only give parking privileges at the Beach and Government Island plus access to the Town disposal area. The considerable expense of cleaning, maintaining and supervising the Beach comes from money raised separately by the Sandy Beach Association from our citizens. About 18 percent of the households in Cohasset contributed to support of the Beach last year. In land-locked towns, to join a private pool club frequently costs several hundreds of dollars.

The Sandy Beach Association is expecting to have a clean and safe facility again this year and to provide wholesome and beautiful recreation for all of Cohasset's families. The Association hopes to attract support from substantially more homes in 1987 and to see a considerably higher level of giving to enable us to meet the expectations of the public.

David Chittim,
treasurer and
The Trustees of Sandy Beach Association

Where's the future of Cohasset?

Dear Tax Payer:

The story in the Quincy Patriot Ledger on the South Shore Art Center—Water Commissioner, Mr. Montuori's quote: "Somebody screwed-up"—The Sewer Commission had a Superintendent/Sewer Inspector, Mr. Manuel Salvador, but the Commissioners feel they are able to run the Sewer Department themselves, on a part time basis.

All new sewer connections require a state and town permit. Drawings are prepared then checked by the Sewer Inspector prior to actual work, and before anyone is able to 'screw-up.'

At present the Town of Cohaset has no Sewer Inspector, or for that matter, anyone taking care of the collection systems.

What will happen with OUR future connections? What is OUR future with a system operated like this? A mix-up of water and sewer lines is feasible!

Y,Y,C.Y., who is now in charge of the plant, only takes care of and responsibility for the plant itself. The plant is located on Elm Street, behind the Bates Building, for those who do not know. You are able to tell this by the automobiles that are being washed, serviced, etc., there.

It is most important that someone care about the safety of our water supply, by installing the sewer lines properly. The reason sewer lines are placed under water lines, is due to sewer line leakage which flows downward. In the event of a fire, sewage can be drawn into the drinking water supply. These are some of the reasons both the state and town have rules and regulations.

Are these the types of errors we can expect with no one overseeing the sewer system? Lot W. Bates, Jr.'s approach is common sense, coupled with honesty, sincerity and sensitivity!

Lot W. Bates

Deep divisions between states at convention

By David Wadsworth
For the Bicentennial Committee

This year our nation celebrates the 200th anniversary of the framing and signing of its Constitution. The American Constitution of 1787 was framed in Philadelphia's Independence Hall from late May to mid-September of that year, and signed by its framers on September 17, 1787.

Friday, May 29, just five days after the convening of the Convention, the first major item of business was brought before the assembled delegations. This was the "Virginia Plan" or plan supported by the several so-called "large states" for a radically new national government. Virginia's Gov. Edmund Randolph made the presentation. Among the features of the Virginia Plan was one designed to allocate the seats in a two-chambered national legislature to the states based solely upon their population. The Virginia Plan favored those states having large populations, and distressed the delegates from less populated states, who feared total domination in the national legislature by the larger states.

Following extended discussion and debate by the Committee of the Whole, that is, the Convention meeting in an informal setting chaired by Massachusetts' Nathaniel Gorham, it became apparent that deep divisions existed between the large and small states, and between those who wanted a highly centralized federal frame of government and those who wished to retain a high degree of "States' Rights" as defined in the existing Articles of Confederation. On June 14 a coalition of small state and anti-federalist delegates produced another plan, which they hoped would serve as an antidote to the Virginia Plan. This proposal was called the "New Jersey Plan" and in many ways it was almost the opposite of the Virginia Plan. Its chief proponents were New Jersey's William Paterson and David Brearly, Connecticut's Roger Sherman, New York's John Lansing, Jr., and Maryland's Luther Martin. In actuality, the New Jersey Plan was a last ditch effort to patch up through major revisions the Articles of Confederation, while protecting the interests of the small states in the future legislature.

One of the major differences among the several between the Virginia and Jew Jersey plans was the latter's recommendation for a single chambered national legislature in which each state would be equally represented. With the presenting of the New Jersey Plan, the Convention's Committee of the Whole found itself having to choose between two almost diametrically opposed proposed frames of government, one featuring a strong centralized federal system, the other retaining "states' rights" and a more decentralized national government. The matter of choosing which of the two plans to adopt caused three additional days of debate. During that time, New York's Alexander Hamilton rose to give a long speech presenting his unique view of the government that should be. Hamilton, extolling the British government as being "the best model the world ever produced," was politely listened to by the delegates, and his unusual idea was rather quickly dismissed by the Convention. Following a return to the subject at hand, the Convention voted on Tuesday the 19 to adopt a modified Virginia Plan as its working model for the proposed new frame of government. In the voting, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Pennsylvania, Virginia, and North and South Carolina signified approval of the Virginia Plan, New York, New Jersey and Delaware voted for the so-called New Jersey Plan. Once adopted, the Virginia Plan became the focal point for further discussion, as the delegates addressed themselves to one after another specific detail. On June 29 the Convention agreed that one branch of the bicameral legislature should be chosen on the basis of a state's population. On the following day, Pennsylvania's Benjamin Franklin introduced a motion to begin each day's session with a prayer for Divine Guidance. The motion failed by a wide margin.

Then the Convention Delegates attended an elaborate celebration of Independence Day on July 4th. The final vote to apportion seats in one legislative chamber according to a state's population was taken later as part of the "Connecticut Compromise" on July 16. The Convention narrowly adopted equality to each state in the second chamber.

Housing group to meet with state to begin plans. . .

Historical Society Curator David Wadsworth also wrote a brief history of the town which was added to the profile report.

The housing committee, which has met once a month since last September, includes chairman Cutler and members Dan Cotton, Barbara Froio, James Gallagher, Leo Happenny, and secretary Patrick Plante. In addition to their charge to develop a fair housing plan for the town, the committee has another important function, the chairman explained.

"If anyone in this town feels they have been discriminated against regarding housing, they can lodge their complaint with our committee," he stated. "We will then forward that complaint to the Civil Rights office of the Norfolk County District Attorney."

The chairman is pleased thus far with the steps taken by the new committee. And others have taken note.

Matthew Spear, coordinator of the Civil Rights Unit of the Norfolk County District Attorney's office acknowledged their efforts in a letter April 14. He stated that of the 32 communities he supervises, he is most pleased with the progress being made this year by Cohasset. "Prior to your efforts," he stated. "there was very little if anything that had been accomplished by the town. You and your committee should feel good that you're off to such a good start."

Rev. Cutler admitted that prior to the committee's formation, the town had not vigorously pursued a fair housing plan that would include accommodationsor low and moderate income families. "And I believe the state can't expect this committee to do in nine months what the town has not done in three years," he added.

As a result of the conclusions of the community profile, the committee will now be working to develop a comprehensive fair housing plan for the town. The clear underrepresentation of minorities within Cohasset indicates the need for a fair housing action plan. The committee must also develop steps to implement that plan.

"A fair housing plan," Rev. Cutler explained, "would include housing for low and moderate income families, living on an income of at least $28,000 - people who include school teachers, postal workers, female single head of households. When we're talking about fair housing, we are talking about people who are part of our town, but are underrepresented economically.

"People need to know," he continued, "that fair housing doesn't mean projects in the center of town. We mean making affordable housing for those with moderate incomes. Lots of people have told me they are having difficulty living here. Lots of peop. have told me there is less and and less low and moder. income housing available. And other people have tol. e their children could never afford to live here - the housing market is much too high."

Rev. Cutler said there are many options the committee will consider, including encouraging local developers to set aside a certain percentage of any development for low and moderate income housing. Some towns, he said, provide developers with certain inducements to incorporate that housing into the plans.

Among the statistics provided within the committee's community profile is the fact that in 1980, there were fewer than 448 families in Cohasset in the low or moderate income category. In 1970, 24 percent of the population was moderate income and in 1980, the number decreased to 23 percent. The same statistics for Boston suggest that 41 percent of the families residing in Boston in 1980 were moderate income.

And in 1980, the profile report states that housing in Cohasset was weighted more to the $100-$200,000 range, while the Boston homes were weighted in the opposite direction. The average price of a Cohasset home in 1986 was $277,692, a 65 percent increase over the average 1984 selling price of $168,084.

Chairman Cutler said the next responsibility of the committee will be to devise a housing plan. That should be prepared by the fall, and ready to go before selectmen long before the April town meeting.

"The important thing to remember," he stated, "is that a town loses something if it loses its variety. If you don't have that difference in cultures, colors, craftspeople and commuters, we will all lose something as a town."

The committee will investigate new housing programs available in the state, emphasizing its educational role in the community. "We must let the minorities know we want to have them live in our town. And it will also be our responsibility to inform everyone just what a fair housing plan is," he said.

Rev. Cutler acknowledged the possibility of creating controversy through such a plan. "But it won't be helpful for the committee to become antagonistic toward the town," he stated. " We intend to be constructive and to have people know this plan will enrich the community."

Protesters gear up for hearings

question of his credibility, but of the history of landfills situated close to water supplies."

She noted, "Carver is a prime example right here on the South Shore.

"The history of landfills polluting water is enough to warrant our concern," she added, "but what has happened in Carver is at the crux of our immediate action."

According to Pride, the Cohasset movement has been patterned after a grassroots movement organized by Claire DeLoid in Carver in 1975. Eventually, the landfill there was closed and the operators were proven to have acted in an illegal manner and were imprisoned.

Pride said this is not to imply that the Barry brothers have acted in a similar manner, "but the result of all this is that Carver's water supply was horrendously polluted and the full effects were not found until 10 years later.

"It appears that the high levels of toxicity took five to 10 years to show themselves outside the testing wells," she said. "Today, Cohasset Heights is emitting toxics that are within DEQE and EPA standards; they are within the 'acceptable risk level.'"

The protesters dispute the testimony on risk level, presented by CHL's experts.

"The dump is one-and-one quarter miles uphill from the town water supply at Lily Pond," Alix White commented. "And Paul Barry admitted he does not know about all the trash that goes in there. They do not inspect it."

With regard to inspection, CHL representatives unveiled a proposal for improved trash monitoring at a hearing before the zoning board of appeals, May 28.

They explained that in response to the health board's site plan review, which was expected to target volatile organic compounds in trucks entering the dump.

"We have lost all faith in the board of health," Pride commented. "Perhaps there is much reason for their actions, or inactions. But to date, they haven't made it known to the public they represent."

Following the health board hearing, the ZBA will continue its deliberations Thursday, as to whether Cohasset Heights will be allowed to modify its special permit to allow a change in the materials the lanfill is allowed to take in. The board also must decide whether or not to allow expansion of the landfill's area.

"We were encouraged by the direction of the ZBA at the last hearing," Pride said, "and we are hopeful it will determine and enforce the theory that this landfill is partially within the watershed of the town's water source, and is an inappropriate land use."

As the protesters continued to wave their signs and the drivers to toot their horns Tuesday, Pride noted, "At this point it's time for people to let their fears and feelings be known at the public hearings.

"There is little that we can do as a small concerned group," she said, "to save their water from irreversable damage."

Artist of the Month

A most successful field trip to the Museum of Fine Arts was attended by the 3rd grade classes on Friday, June 5th. It was very exciting for the children to see the actual paintings by many famous artists such as the abstract artists. Miro and Pollock, as well as many French Impressionists and Realists. A favorite was our own American artist, John Singleton Copley, who had painted many of the early traders of our country as well as the memorable "Watson and the Shark."

The children as well as parents are most thankful to Sue McNamara who organized this trip and was responsible for initiating the artist of the month program at Osgood this year. The chairmen for 1987-88, Retta Dwyer (6629) and Olga Nolte (1273) look forward to the same success and plan to host a meeting in the fall for anyone who may have an interest in getting involved in this rewarding experience with the children.

Move-up Day, June 22

We have tentatively established a schedule for MOVE-UP DAY and the transporting of students. From all indications, the following seems appropriate for this year:

1. All Deer Hill students will be transported via their assigned bus to their assigned schools first thing in the morning, except Grade 6. (Attendance taken at their assigned building).
2. All Grade 6 students will be picked up at their "late bus" stop at 11:30 and transported directly to the Jr. High School;
3. 3rd Grade students will be transported from Joseph Osgood School to Deer Hill at 8:45 a.m.;
4. 3rd Grade students will be returned to Osgood School after their lunch, approximately 12:00. Students in Grades 4 and 5 will return to their original home-rooms;
5. Grade 6 students will be dismissed from the High School at 2:05 and be transported home on their late bus.

Watch Channel 11 Cable

Cohasset High School's cable station (ET Cohasset Educational Television) Channel 11, will continue to cablecast each Thursday afternoon from three to seven. We will be playing tapes made at Osgood and Deer Hill about four o'clock.

This cablecast will be repeated (also on Channel 11) the following Tuesday each week from five to nine p.m. This means the same Osgood and Deer Hill material can be seen at about six o'clock. The final cablecast this season will be Tuesday, June 23.

Host families needed

The Japanese Exchange program returns to Cohasset for its seventh year this summer! The program will run from July 21 through August 20. Students will attend class weekday mornings and take short trips in the afternoon. Families interested in hosting Japanese students are invited to contact Janet Amiri at 383-2412 or Jill Suddath at 925-3428.

6th Grade Promotion

Promotion Exercises for 6th Grade students are scheduled to be held June 23, at 10:30 a.m. As in the past, and again this year, we are planning to dismiss 6th Grade students directly from these Exercises.

Thanks given

The Deer Hill staff and principal would like to formally recognize and thank the PSO and most specifically, Jeanne Lennon and Kyle Lubitz for their assistance in helping at Deer Hill. Their willingness to become involved and to provide input from a community perspective, is greatly appreciated and offers considerable help in formulating activities for the school year. — THANKS!!

Erin Steimle, 10

Kimberly Steimle, 12

Sisters are winners

Two Cohasset sisters placed first and third in their division in New England Baptist Hospital's annual Spring Run For Fun.

Kimberly Steimle, 12, finished the 3.1 mile race in first place in Division A (female, 12 and under) with a time of 24:49.

Her younger sister Erin, 10, finished third in the same division with a time of 27:48. Approximately 150 other runners participated in the race which was held on Saturday, May 30.

The race course was particularly challenging because it winds around the Mission Hill area in Boston. In fact, the latter half of the course was all up hill. It was even more grueling than usual this year as temperatures were in the 90s.

This was the third annual Spring Run for Fun at New England Baptist Hospital which sponsors the race every year to benefit a local charity. This year's beneficiary was Mission Possible, Inc. an organization which sponsors programs for the youth Mission Hill, was this year's recipient and received $1,000.

The sisters are daughters of Edmund and Mickey Steimle. Mr. Steimle is vice president of clinical services for New England Baptist Hospital.

So. Shore Art Center matching gift

The official opening of the new South Shore Art Center building at 119 Ripley Road, Cohasset is scheduled to take place Friday, June 26 at 6 p.m. The Ribbon Cutting Ceremony will coincide with a reception for the President's Choice exhibit and the presentation of Festival awards.

The Capital Campaign Committee, headed by Honorary Chairman Mrs. A. Werk Cook and Chairman Mrs. N. Frank Neer, Jr., is optimistic that the campaign goal of $950,000 will be reached by that time.

An anonymous friend has recently offered a gift of $25,000 to be matched — dollar for dollar — with every new gift or pledge that is received prior to June 25. "We are most appreciative of this generous gift and excited about the prospect of its momentum carrying us to our goal," said Neer. "We encourage all who support this very worthwhile project to forward their gifts as soon as possible in order to take advantage of the match."

Donations may be sent to the South Shore Art Center's Capital Campaign at 103 Ripley Road, Cohasset, MA 02025.

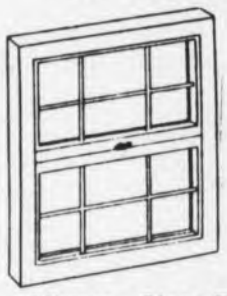
Rep. Murray hosts visiting monks



Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray was hostess recently to 36 Benedictine Monks from Monastaries across the United States.

Rep. Murray invited them to the Massachusetts State House where the monks received a tour of the State House and learned its history. Annually the Benedictine Monks have a meeting of the Formation Directors and Novice Masters. Each year a different monastery is selected. This year Glastonbury Abbey of Hingham was honored. The purpose is to study and discuss how to better the training of new members in the community of Benedictine Abbeys.

For six days at Glastonbury Abbey, these 36 monks from various abbeys across the nation held a workshop. Father Timothy Joyce was the Liaison Director and Host for the annual workshop meeting at Glastonbury Abbey in Hingham.

Fond memories of 'Witches'

"We had a wonderful night," he said. "And everything went very well. We are doubly pleased with the results, although we could have sold a lot more tickets."

His wife, Sue, added," It was fun to see the whole thing put together."

Organizer Donald Staszko admitted he had some reservations about the massive plans to feed and move 350 people to Hanover and back. But by Tuesday morning, he was more relaxed, and quite pleased with the results. "I'm very pleased that everyone had a nice time. The success of the evening speaks a lot for all the Chamber members who were able to pull this off. "

Once the bills are paid and accounts are settled, the Chamber will make a presentation to the recreation commission for the Milliken Field project.

LWV attends state convention

Madeline Olney, Debbie Cook and Pat Facey of the League of Women Voters of Cohasset attended the biennial Convention of the League of Women Voters of Massachusetts at Pine Manor College in Chestnut Hill, June 5, 6 and 7.

They were joined by delegates from approximately 100 other local Leagues throughout the state to discuss and vote on the League's program and budget.

The League of Women Voters of Massachusetts has adopted a two-tier program of action for the next two years focusing on natural resources and social policy. In the first year of the study, the League will take action on waste management — lobbying to achieve effective handling of solid waste and low-level radioactive waste plus the cleanup of hazardous waste. In the second year the League proposes to work on behalf of programs centering on the family, those affecting women and children, most particularly in the areas of health, education, day care and housing.

The keynote speaker Saturday night was Dr. Fran Burke of Suffolk University. In honor of the Bicentennial of the Constitution, Dr. Burke addresses the issues of Women and the Constitution.

Ed Minelli, of Cohasset High, is the program director and Togo Palazzi, former Boston Celtic and longtime athletic staff member at Holy Cross, will be a guest lecturer. The camp is open for boys in grades 5-9.

"Four years ago, we set out to be the best day basketball camp in the area with emphasis on fundamentals, skill building, competition, and socialization," commented LeVangie.

Each camper is evaluated during the week and is provided with an evaluation and a drill book to help the camper work on skills after the camp session is completed.

Foyer of Charity fair June 20

Welcome summer by coming to the Foyer of Charity family fair, 74 Hollett St., Scituate, on Saturday, June 20, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Attractions are planned for every member of the family, beginning with a white elephant sale loaded with furniture, sporting goods, appliances and household items.

Children will be delighted by clowns, games of skill and chance, cupcakes to decorate, and races.

In addition, fairgoers may fill out their perennial gardens or brighten their homes and yards with purchases from the plant table. The bake table will have homemade breads, cakes and cookies, special treates for Father's Day.

Early birds will find coffee and donuts and, later in the day, hamburgers, hot dogs, and other picnic items.

All profits of the day will be used to improve the Foyer's retreat facilities. For the past 10 years, Father Matthew Bradley, the Foyer's director, has been working to restore the property in order to comfortably accommodate participants in the many retreats and days of recollection that take place at the Foyer.

The family fair is organized by the friends of the Foyer, former retreatants and neighbors. For last minute donations to the white elephant table, call Bob and Peg Norris at 659-7279 or Terry and Mary Gorman at 545-4194, or drop your donation off at the Foyer at 545-1080.

Town granted reprieve by state to develop housing plan

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Although the state was set to slam down hard into Cohasset, the town has staved off the attack.

A lack of communication is being blamed for the state's recent stern warning to Cohasset to implement a low and moderate income housing plan. The Executive Office of Communities and Development (EOCD) issued what Selectman Burt Pratt called "a threat" to come up with a plan, or lose all state discretionary financing. Those monies are necessary for the town's planned sewer treatment project and the water department grant program.

A June 15 deadline was set by the state, which was extended by request from Senator William Golden. The Cohasset-born state senator gathered local and state officials into a meeting Tuesday morning at town hall to resolve the issue.

After a two-hour meeting, it was agreed that the town will formulate a new memorandum of agreement with the state, assuring the government it will proceed with a plan to develop low and moderate income family housing in the town. How that will be accomplished is now a matter of discussion between selectmen, planning board members and members of the newly-formulated fair housing committee.

As Selectman Martha Gjesteby noted Tuesday morning, the state may be unaware of the current "creative" methods individual homeowners and developers have devised to establish affordable housing units in Cohasset.

This is a serious warning to the town. As it stands now, there is a basis to label this town unreasonably restrictive unless there is substantial commitment by the town to move forward.

– EOCD official Clark Ziegler

But EOCD officials said they want to know exactly what steps Cohasset has taken to follow through on this executive order. Without presenting such a plan, EOCD will find the town "unreasonably restrictive" and will withhold any state discretionary funds to Cohasset.

Selectman Pratt, calling the state's threatened action, "blackmail," asked whether new projects must be constructed, or whether the town may renovate vacant town-owned buildings into one or two-bedroom rental units. Without specific mention, Pratt said plans may be developed for such a project.

Regatta to honor local 210 sailor

The Cohasset Yacht Club is sponsoring the fourth annual Sullivan 210 Regatta Saturday, June 27 and Sunday, June 28.

The regatta is named in honor of Cohasset's Dick Sullivan, a longtime advocate of the international 210 sailboat. The first race will begin at 11 a.m. Saturday and the second race is scheduled for a 2:30 p.m. start. There will be a third race at 11 a.m. Sunday, with an awards ceremony at the yacht club Sunday afternoon. There will also be a cocktail party at the yacht club Saturday evening.

About 60 boats and 75 sailors will be participating in the event. The 210 sailors will be arriving in Cohasset Harbor from Hingham Bay, Quincy Bay, South Boston Yacht Club, Hull, the Eastern Point Yacht Club on the North Shore, and from Marblehead Yacht Club.

Dick Sullivan, a King Street resident who will compete in this weekend's race, is regarded as the "father" of the 210 racing fleet.

Art Center opens new building for summer festival

Extension given so doors can open

By John Magadieu
Mariner Staff

Despite hell and high water, the South Shore Art Center will be allowed to open its new facility Friday, as scheduled.

The Cohasset water commissioners agreed to grant the center a 90-day temporary permit to use the building, on the condition its water and sewer pipes are wrapped in protective membranes and the architect re-works his piping plans.

The commission refused to accept plans which would leave a sewer line running above a water line from the building to the street.

According to Vcevold Strekalovsky, the art center's architect, a high ground water level was discovered at the site, during excavation for the new facility.

"Because of the high water level, the collection tank, which was designed at the request of the state Dept. of Environmental Quality Engineering to prevent the concentrated surge of solids into the sewer system, could not be set at a lower elevation," he said.

"The result of that," he told the commissioners, "is that the sewer line crosses the water line." The water commission is opposed to such arrangements.

"To lower the tank deeper into the water would create stress on the pipe," he said, "and on the connections as the tank tried to float and has been forbidden by the sewer commission."

Strekalovsky noted, "There is no practical way to relocate the tank or the water service without extreme financial hardship to the South Shore Art Center, which is a community non-profit institution."

Title five from the DEQE suggests that disposal facilities be installed "at least 10 feet from, and 18 inches below water supply lines."

The annual South Shore Art Center's Summer Festival begins this Friday. There will be exhibits, crafts and activities for all ages to enjoy.

New facility is festival's highlight

As the South Shore Art Center kicks off its 32nd annual summer arts festival, patrons will learn that this year's event is particularly special.

The center's new facility on Ripley Road will be opened to benefactors, patrons, sponsors and the public for the first time, June 26, 27 and 28.

"It's not every year we open up a major art complex on the South Shore," said Robin Suhrbier, an art center spokesman. "The influence of this facility will be felt from Brockton to Quincy."

While the South Shore Art Center has been a major influence here among artists for the past 20 years, she explained, this move is especially exciting for them, as it is for the directors, staff and volunteers.

"I think we are building the center's reputation and its influence on the visual arts," Suhrbier said. "In this new building, I think it will become more of a force in the arts and the galleries will begin to attract more widely recognized names."

During the festival, which will be held primarily under tents on Cohasset Common, the new facility will feature the "president's choice" exhibit with works by painter John Tracey and by sculptor Peter Lipsitt.

The formal ribbon cutting ceremony for the center's new home will come during the opening reception of this exhibit Friday, June 26 at 6 p.m.

The art center's new home is a building of contemporary style, said Marian Bush, a volunteer coordinator. The invitational gallery, where the

Minot's Light request

The Cohasset Historical Society has requested a donation of the granite blocks being excavated from the Minot's Ledge Lighthouse during the current renovation project. The organization has also requested the Coast Guard donate the rotating mechanism from the lighthouse to the society's Maritime Museum.

In a letter to the commander of the First Coast Guard District, the society's senior curator, David Wadsworth, detailed the reasons why the granite blocks and the rotating mechnism properly belong back in Cohasset. According to Wadsworth's letter, a number of the granite blocks in the upper portion of the lighthouse are being replaced and will be available to the towns of Cohasset and Scituate. He suggested that the Cohasset Historical Society be given half of the blocks, which will be incorporated into the existing historical park at Government Island.

This is the construction site of the second Minot's lighthouse, he noted. The historical park commemorates the building of Minot's Ledge Lighthouse, and is located at the site of the former U.S. Lighthouse Service Shore Station Reservation for the lighthouse at Cohasset Harbor. It is also possible, he added, that some of the granite blocks may be placed on exhibit at the Maritime Museum, where there is an extensive collection of artifacts relating to the history of the first and second Minot's lighthouses.

The Historical Society also requested the rotating mechanism to be granted or loaned for exhibit at the Maritime Museum. Wadsworth detailed the history of the lighthouse, noting that it was constructed on the property known as Government Island. The commemorative park was dedicated in 1968 and is maintained by the town, the historical society and historical commission. One feature at the park, he stated, is a fog-bell taken from Minot's Lighthouse several years ago and presented to Cohasset by the Coast Guard.

Both Cohasset and Scituate will receive the granite blocks from the lighthouse which is undergoing renovations. The Scituate Historical Society has also requested donation of the lighthouse rotating mechanism.

Parking opinion

The chairman of the recreation commission has requested in writing that selectmen seek a legal opinion on the eligibility of licensed vendors to park at Sandy Beach and Government Island.

Richard Barrow told selectmen last week that the town bylaw is specific as to who is allowed facility permits. According to the bylaw, only town residents, Cohasset summer residents and people who own real estate in the town may use the beach and pier facilities and park there. Barrow questioned whether licensed out of town vendors should have those parking privileges.

According to the recreation chairman, there are no special permits allowed under the bylaw. Should such a permit be issued to a vendor, a precedent would be established. Barrow also questioned whether the town should adopt a set of parking regulations for the vendors at Sandy Beach. "Because the town by issuing vendor parking (licenses) is condoning vendor parking, it may also be a legal responsibility of the town to make this as safe as possible. Perhaps the board of selectmen, utilizing the police department and safety officer could devise a plan that would reduce the risk of accident or injury," he stated in his letter to the board.

At last week's meeting, selectmen agreed town counsel should clarify the matter.

The wrong Lennons

In last week's Cohasset Mariner article regarding the Atkinson's recent excursion to Souppes Sur Loing, it was mentioned they had met the John Lennon family during a visit to the Chambord Chateau. The two Atkinson girls who were staying with the Ballot family actually met the James Lennon family of Tad Lane during their sightseeing tour.

The Lennons had been touring France last month with their daughter, Therese, who was staying in England for a semester with Cohasset friend Elizabeth Pearce. Therese and Liz had visited 11 foreign countries. The Pearces will be hosting Mary Pierre Ballot of Souppes Sur Loing in their home this July. "It was nice for the Ballot family to meet one of the members of the family their daughter will be staying with in Cohasset," Mrs. Lennon explained. Liz had been in England since January. She and Therese spent their second semester in England as part of their college studies.

Town Hall life span

Selectmen were notified this week that once the addition and renovations are completed to the town hall, the expected life of the building is estimated at 30 more years.

Brett Donham, architect for the town hall addition project, notified selectmen that the expected life of the town hall is 30 years. "The building is structurally sound, has a slate roof and has seen a number of other major improvements, including a new heating system in the last four years."

No oil leak

The fire chief advised selectmen last week that the three abandoned fuel oil storage tanks along Rte. 3A have been removed. There was no sign of leakage from any of the tanks, he noted.

The town had ordered the removal of the abandoned tanks located at 185 and 215 Chief justice Cushing Highway. The property is owned by the Williams' family trust, and is scheduled to be sold. During an inspection of the site, located near Cohasset Heights Ltd., the landfill's engineer detected oil leaking from one of the tanks. The fire chief was notified and ordered the abandoned tanks to be removed.

According to Chief Daniel Brock, the tanks were in excellent shape with no holes and the ground and groundwater showed no signs of leakage from the tanks. Selectmen previously ordered the chief to impose a deadline for the removal of the tanks. If the tanks were not removed by the owners, the town would have had the tanks removed, with a lien for the cost attached to the property.

Unusual mishap

A Cohasset police cruiser was involved in an unusual accident June 17.

According to Sgt. Brian Noonan, Patrolman David Cogill went to investigate a vehicle accident on Atlantic Ave. at about 10 p.m.

As he arrived, another car driven by Heather Sill, 17, of Scituate arrived at the scene and stopped. Cogill asked her if she was involved in the accident. She said no.

So, Cogill told her to back up and she did, sideswiping into the police cruiser.

Sill left an $847 dent from the cruiser's front tire well to the rear bumper.

After the mishap, Cogill spotted beer cans in the young lady's vehicle and arrested her for being a minor transporting liquor.

Meeting postponed

The special town meeting scheduled for mid-July has been postponed until the end of September.

Because SEMASS, the trash-to-energy waste disposal facility has extended the deadline for Cohasset's application, the special town meeting in July has been postponed. Executive Secretary Donald explained that the meeting was previously scheduled in July so the town could vote whether to sign an agreement to participate in the SEMASS plan. The original deadline was set for July 18.

But SEMASS officials talked with Andrew last week, and informed him the deadline was extended until September 30. Because the SEMASS issue was the main reason for scheduling a special town meeting, it was decided the meeting could be rescheduled for early this fall.

There were about a dozen articles to be included in the July meeting, Andrew said, none of which will be affected by the postponement. Included in the proposed special town meeting warrant was a repeat proposal for room occupancy taxes in local rooming houses and motels, and a request by the water department to borrow $62,000 for the repair of the roof at the office building.

The department was given permission to repair the leaking roof, with money to be raised through water fees. According to Andrew, the water department discovered the fee hike would be too great, and decided to request permission to borrow the necessary money.

The executive secretary said the special town meeting will likely be rescheduled to the third week in September.

Art week date change

A change in date has been made for the South Shore Art Center's Children's Art Week. The new dates are June 29 through July 3 from 10:30 a.m. to noon at the Center, 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset.

The dates have been adjusted to accommodate the closing of schools on the South Shore. The Children's Art Week meets daily to work on activities which emphasize individual expression and explore various art concepts.

The course is taught by Center instructor Serena Brundige. Advanced registration is required for this workshop. For further details call the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548.

Liability insurance last question in landfill review

By John Magadieu
Mariner Staff

Liability insurance is the last remaining question in the health board's lengthy site assignment review of a local private landfill.

During debate and deliberations June 17, the health board and representatives of Cohasset Heights Ltd. reached agreements - at least in principle, with regard to treatment of discharge and the issue of who would spot the incoming rubbish at the commercial dump on Crocker Lane.

They planned to hammer out a protocol for the implementation of spotting by a town representative. Residents had objected to monitoring of the landfill by owner and operator Paul Barry.

"We have been examining a number of ideas," Anton Moehrke, the landfill's attorney told the board, "and we concluded that the most reliable and effective means of monitoring would be to have Dr. (Joseph) Godzik make sudden, periodic inspections."

Moehrke suggested that the town's health agent could inspect the facility and incoming vehicles "at the total discretion of the board of health.

"We would be willing to compensate the town for part of Dr. Godzik's salary," he added.

The attorney said he wanted to work with the board to determine a set of acceptable standards. "What would the board find acceptable?" he queried. "A paint can that is truly empty or one that holds a thin film of paint?

"What would be Dr. Godzik's reaction upon finding an unacceptable can?" he asked. "What would he do? We suggest that in such a case, we store it and haul it off to a proper facility."

"At your hearing before the board of appeals, you said using a meter to read volatile organics may be considered appropriate," Michael Leon, the board's attorney recalled. "Use of equipment like that might be appropriate."

Moehrke disagreed. "The reason we are reluctant to include that," he said, "is because we question its reliability. It could lead to false alarms - or no alarms.

"Because no other landfill uses the meter," he added, "there is no comparison to objectify standards."

Ralph Prebble, the town's engineer agreed with Moehrke. "You definitely can have problems with it," he said. "The meter has problems with rain and dampness.

"It's a good device," he explained; "you just have to know its limitations."

The questions of meter use and protocol for spotting will be worked out between Moehrke and Leon and will be presented to the public - and to the board for a vote at its next meeting, July 8.

As the hearing June 17 got underway, board members praised the Barry brothers, operators of CHL, for their efforts to improve conditions at the landfill.

"From an aesthetic point of view," Chairman John Burns commented, "there has been a definite improvement. The odor has been markedly reduced, litter seems to be under control and I did not notice any breakouts when I was last there."

He added, "The slopes have been regraded and reseeded. I hope the grass grows quickly to prevent erosion. In my opinion, they have tried to address the issues."

With regard to the treatment of discharge, Moehrke explained that CHL is beginning the practice of airstripping to deal with the volatile organics content of surface water off the landfill.

Cohasset Heights will install 1,000 gallon tanks for the purpose of aeration, he said. "We feel the tanks will greatly abate volatile organics in the surface water."

The board expressed concern that 1,000 gallon tanks might be too small to handle the job.

"We are putting these tanks between the property line and the access road," engineer Dan Ostrye told the board. "We don't want to back up groundwater; we don't want to raise groundwater levels, even locally.

"Surface water in the past has contained a significant amount of leachate," Leon suggested. "What do you expect to see at your monitoring wells as a result of this?"

"We expect a 95 percent reduction of seepage," Ostrye commented. Aeration will bring about a high amount of reduction, although I don't consider the amount of leachate 'significant.'"

Ralph Prebble of CDM, the board's engineer noted, "This is an appropriate way to go in this case."

The board will deal with the private landfill's liability insurance coverage at its next meeting, July 8.

Pain is important to your well-being. It is nature's early warning signal. A message relayed through your nervous system that tells you when something is wrong. As such, pain is merely a symptom and not the cause of most health problems. Therefore, the sensible approach to health is not to merely turn off the pain (or treat the symptom). But rather fo find the causes and correct them.

New Art Center facility . . .

"president's choice" exhibit will be shown, is two stories high and flooded with natural light from skylights during the day.

The facility also features a one-story members' gallery, several "spacious" classrooms, a darkroom and offices, she said. "There will also be secure storage space and handicapped access, two things we didn't have before, because we were in a very old building. This is very up-to-date.

"Another nice feature," Bush noted, "is that you walk in through glass doors and you can see the gallery from the street. I think that's very nice for the artwork."

Suhrbier agreed, "The atmosphere will be more conducive to coming in and looking.

She predicts the facility will be "a good outlet for craftspeople" and will serve both beginning and knowledgeable art collectors.

"We offer a good cross-section of art," she explained.

The festival will feature not only the "president's choice" exhibit, but "a whole slew of activities" for children, Suhrbier said.

Just Around the Corner Company, a Cambridge-based theater troupe will put on a show at the Cohasset Town Hall June 27 at 11 a.m. Jim Vetter, a mime also will perform.

Later that day, at 1 p.m., the Wickford Express will wander about the common singing sea chanteys, ballads and many other types of tunes. At 3 p.m., Texas Instruments, a bluegrass quartet will give a concert on the common.

Suhrbier noted that children's art workshops and artists' demonstrations always have been popular with youngsters.

Under striped tents, the juried exhibits in painting,watercolor, graphics, pastels, mixed media, sculpture and photography will be on display.

The Summer Dance Theater of Cape Cod will entertain the crowds Sunday at 1 p.m. Twenty dancers will perform a repertoire of modern jazz, ballet, and dramatic works.

At 2 p.m., in the town hall, Dan Butterworth and his marionettes will delight the children of Cohasset. Butterworth and his puppets will be a big hit with the kids, Suhrbier predicted.

Finally, the Back Bay Brass Quintet will perform Sunday at 4 p.m. The 32nd annual South Shore arts festival promises to be fun for children of all ages.

COOP-6 picnic

COOP-6, an organization of Democrats in Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Scituate and Weymouth, will hold a beach party and picnic Sunday, July 26 from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. at Cedar Hill Conference Center, 364 Standish St., Duxbury.

For $10 (no charge for children 3 and under) one can enjoy the day with friends and family at this private, secluded 12-acre site with 500 feet of private beach overlooking Kingston, Plymouth and Duxbury bays.

COOP 6 will provide a catered picnic at 1 p.m. including hamburgers, hot dogs, potato salad, baked beans, fruit, coffee, volleyball and badminton. Guests are asked to bring a chair or blanket, sun protection, beverage of your choice (no glass, please). No pets please — the area fauna includes some very friendly rabbits who don't know enough to run away from dogs.

Fate of Heights landfill to be decided July 2

By John Magadieu
Mariner staff

The zoning board of appeals will decide the fate of Cohasset Heights Ltd. July 2.

After nearly eight hours of testimony from experts and concerned citizens, the board must decide whether anything other than demolition debris is allowed into the private commercial dump on Crocker Lane.

The board also must decide whether CHL can expand its operations into a three-acre parcel adjacent to the land which is currently used for dumping household, commercial and industrial rubbish.

The appeals board has maintained throughout the proceedings, that CHL is accepting such waste illegally per a recent land court decision specifying that only demolition debris is allowed at the dump.

David Gordon, a consulting engineer specializing in air pollution and control opened testimony from CHL's witnesses Thursday, describing what he considers the causes of an odor problem which plagued the landfill's vicinity last winter.

"There is an odor problem from any landfill," Gordon commented. "The four potential sources of odor at Cohasset Heights are: the leachate collection tanks; leachate breakouts; permeation from ground heaves and open, active filth. All of these potential sources have been addressed."

Gordon explained, the leachate tanks have been fitted with a "state of the art" activated charcoal system.

"The difference between conditions at the landfill now from what they were two months ago is amazing," Gordon commented. Through grading, they have reduced the chance that leachate will break out through the sides of the landfill. Leachate now percolates down into the collection tanks."

Gordon assured the board one would not be able to smell the trash in areas 4A and 4B from the trustees of reservations property line.

Repeating the testimony he put before the health board April 15, Gordon claimed the obnoxious odors wafting along Rte 3A this past winter emanated not from CHL, but from an oil spill on an adjacent property and from an open sewer behind the KoKo Island restaurant.

Board member Edward Lubitz queried whether the landfill generated toxic gases one could not smell.

"It is a fact," Gordon commented, "that just because something smells bad does not mean it is toxic, and that there is some stuff you can't smell that is toxic.

"At the landfill," he noted, "those gases are not at a level that could be dangerous to humans, even over an extended period of time."

Gordon predicted there will be no problem with regard to toxic gases at CHL, unless the leachate tank blows up or the side of the landfill mound breaks off, a major catastrophe.

William Norman, a geologist with the engineering firm hired by CHL described for the board his assessment of ground and surface water patterns and quality.

Groundwater flows from the northeast to the southwest, he noted. Ground water from a portion of the landfill flows southward, turning to surface water as it drains into a wetland there.

The water to the south of the landfill flows westerly into the lower wetland, he explained, and then it flows toward the north.

The town's water supply at Lily Pond is about one-and-a-half miles south of CHL.

"If you had a choice in putting a landfill where groundwater remains groundwater and receives the cleansing of the earth or putting a landfill where groundwater quickly becomes surface water, which is better?" asked Myrna Putziger, the zoning board chairman.

"From a contamination-cleansing point of view," Norman replied, "landfills next to wetlands tend to have cleaner constituents; the water is cleansed as it goes from groundwater to surface water, because the volatile organics volatilize when they hit the atmosphere.

"The wetlands will absorb the metals in groundwater and will act as a natural cleansing mechanism for compounds generated by the landfill," he explained.

The chief engineer hired by the landfill, Dan Ostrye told the board such activity has no adverse effect upon the land that is used.

Norman however, when asked how certain he is that CHL will not affect the town's water supply, told the board his confidence level "is between 50 and 100 percent."

"Your confidence level that our water supply won't be affected is as low as 50 percent?" Lubitz asked in amazement.

"I said between 50 and 100 percent," Norman responded. "You are not going to nail me down to a figure."

"Someone is trying to nail us down to a permit," Putziger shot back. "One requirement for us to grant a special permit is that there be no danger to the public. We are relying on your testimony.

"If you cannot close the gap between a 50 and 100 percent degree of certainty," she said, "then we will have to assume the degree of certainty is as low as 50 percent."

Ronald Goodwin of the Cohasset water commission commented, "It is undisputed that contaminants are leaving the landfill site. They say that the levels are nothing to be concerned about...

"But when the samples were split between GHR Engineering and Camp, Dresser and McKee," he noted, "GHR did not find vinyl chloride; CDM did find vinyl chloride.

"Of 32 cancers, 29 could be caused by vinyl chloride," Goodwin said. "New regulations call for a maximum of one part per billion vinyl chloride. CDM found about 11 parts per billion at Cohasset Heights.

"Their proposal to the DEQE spoke of no synthetic leachate liner for 4A and 4B," he told the board. "Such a set up would be about 65 percent effective. If it were redesigned, it might be 85 percent effective. But leachate will still leave the site of the landfill.

"They're right," Goodwin commented. "Nothing is 100 percent certain.

"If a plane came through the roof right now," he said, "which they say is as likely as us losing our water supply, the town would be covered by insurance.

"CHL and Lily Pond," he noted, "are not covered."

The board is expected to render decisions on CHL's requests to modify its special permit and to allow expansion of the dump, July 2.

☐ A great weekend was had by three Cohasset gals recently. Madeline Olney, Pat Facey and Debbie Cook of the League of Women Voters of Cohasset attended the biennial Convention of the League of Women Voters of Massachusetts at the Pine Manor College in Chestnut Hill. Plans were made for the next two years focusing on natural resources and social policy, with waste management being in the first year of the study and the second year being devoted to working on programs for the family (affecting women and children.) Sure is something to look forward to, we need lots more information on both subjects to be studied!

☐ Hugh Morgan is planning a reunion of the classes of 1963 and 1964. If you have any input, or would like to help in any way, I'm sure that he would appreciate it. Running those reunions are a lot of work, and the more hands that are involved, the better it turns out!

☐ Jim and Kay McNeill were in town last weekend, and they sure are looking swell. Their family is all grown up now, but they never seem to get any older . . . must be doing something right!! Cohasset still misses the dynamic duo, wish they would entertain the thought of moving back.

☐ A salute to each of you, Jean Bagley and Mary Ann Chase that is. They were honored recently at an awards reception for volunteer services to Boston's Dana-Farber Cancer Institute.

First Parish news

FROM THE MINISTER'S STUDY: The long wait is over! Warner Bros. rendition of "The Witches of Eastwick" has been released for viewing by all who choose to see it. Chances are the numbers will be in the millions for many of the early reviews have been enthusiastic, and Jack Nicholson commands a large following.

Through a special invitation from the Massachusetts Film Bureau, I was able to have an early peek at the film last Thursday evening. An official from the Bureau thanked the First Parish in Cohasset and its Minister by name for cooperating with the production of the film noting that the result was the addition of approximately six and one-half million dollars to the Massachusetts economy. Not bad, but some might ask at what cost? Did we sell our soul for a few million bucks?

I worried quite a bit about that question over the past year as "The Witches of Eastwick" was certainly no "On Golden Pond." The book on which the film was based contained some pretty racy stuff which blown large on the wide screen had the potential to be something of an embarrassment to our town and church. As it turns out, I believe the film's director, George Miller, has created a clever spoof of much that we often find regrettable in the entertainment industry's pandering after a public infatuation with sex, violence and sensationalism in films. The film employs all the usual tricks of a Hollywood thriller, the chase, the beautiful women, the sinister, seductive, mystery man with magical powers. But these themes are orchestrated into a zany comedy which forms a kind of hybrid of "Rosemary's Baby" with "Mary Poppins."

I was pleased to note that the film contains no explicit sex or violence, though much is implied, and some of the language would make a sailor blush. Still in the popular mind, I don't suppose we should expect the people in a story about evil and Satan to talk like Sunday School teachers, and it is interesting to further observe that the witches are in fact portrayed as people of conscience who indeed end up doing battle with Satan. And, much to my delight, the concluding thirty seconds of the film conveys a message which if heeded by more American parents could transform our society.

This is not a movie for children. Some scenes could be scary for a child, so if you choose to take your children to see it, be sure to leave time for talk about Hollywood "make believe." I believe most people will find the film very funny and entertaining, and a few may even share my view that it contains a moral message. Contrary to the usual wisdom, in this case the movie is better than the book.

Editorial

A moral obligation

The state has issued a threat to our town. Either start planning some low and moderate income housing, or necessary state grant money will be held back.

Selectman Burt Pratt didn't like that tactic. The Cohasset native, not appreciative of the state's "blackmail" attempt, raised his back in defiance. Whatever happened to homerule? he asked, noting that on Beacon Hill, Cohasset has the undeserved and incorrect reputation of being affluent and snobbish.

For anyone to suggest that Cohasset purposely prohibits low and moderate income families from our community is unfair. The fact is, the housing market is the wall that has prevented their arrival into this town.

Another fact is, most people living in Cohasset today could not turn around and purchase their homes at today's market value. Many of our residents were given their homes by families members who have died or moved away. We are shopkeepers, school teachers and tradesmen. We are also stockbrokers, pilots, and investment counselors.

To suggest that we want to keep minorities from our doors is untrue. There is surely some truth to our abhorrence to Columbia Point-type projects within our town. But given the opportunity to have dwellings that coincide with the surrounding community, we believe everyone would embrace the concept of low and middle income homes within Cohasset.

Our school system has long been a participant in the Boston METCO plan, and many families throughout the town have served as host families. This has been an enriching experience for those who have participated. We believe our children have benefitted from knowing these inner city children, and we as families have been well served by the program.

There is another question that hasn't really been explored. Would minorities and low income families enjoy living here? Perhaps they would. But perhaps they would be uncomfortable in a community where the vast majority of residents are white and middle to high income. The transportation system in our bedroom community is not a fast and easy commute into Boston, nor anywhere else on the South Shore. Public transportation here is bad. And our stores cater to trendy shoppers with extra time and money to spend.

All these negatives aside, we hope Cohasset can devise a creative housing plan to welcome everyone into our community. Contrary to inaccurate impressions, we are not snobbish. We welcome diversity and good neighbors within this town.

The hard pill to swallow is not that we won't welcome new neighbors into our town, but that we are forced by the state to do so. Since this is being pushed down our throats, let's cooperate to create the best plan for our community. The town boards must cooperate and devise a housing plan that, first, will please the residents who live here now, and second, receive approval from the state.

Housing those in need of shelter is our moral obligation. Let's not confuse that higher aspiration with this threat issued by the government.

Clarification on sewer plant operation

To the editor:

In the June 18th issue of the Mariner, Mr. Lot W. Bates made some statements regarding Sewer Department operations which require clarification.

The Sewer Commissioners do not inspect sewer connections to our collection system. This is done by our plant's Chief Operator as specified in our contract services agreement with YMC, Inc. In the case of the Art Center's connection to our collection system, the plans were reviewed by our former Chief Operator and submitted to the DEQE for their review and approval. After some revision, the DEQE then approved the Art Center's installation. Upon completion of the Art Center's sewerage connection and prior to backfilling, our Chief Operator inspected the installation to ensure conformance to the approved plan.

Our system contractor, YWC, Inc., is responsible for all our facilities including our sanitary sewers as specified in our agreement with them. In fact our agreement requires that our contractor fulfill all the tasks performed by the former town operators.

Regarding future connections in our proposed areas of sewer extension, our design Engineer and the DEQE will review and approve all connections. Site inspection of the actual work will be provided by the design engineer.

By State code, sewer and water pipes are separated by specified vertical and horizontal distances. When such distances can not be met reasonably, the code provides that specific safeguards, such as pressure testing of pipes, elimination of joints, etc., be employed.

Letters

The Art Center architect and construction superintendent have furnished such codified measures to ensure the safety of our water supply. Had they not, the plans would not have received DEQE approval. In our present collection system there are numerous instances where sewer lines cross on top of water lines, and there are long stretches of the distribution system where the sewer and water lines share the same trench. This arrangement was approved by a former sewer commission and the State.

Mr. Bates asks about our future. If the past five months are indicative, we are in extremely good hands. During the period of YWC operation, our treatment plant has met its BOD nd SS permit requirements for four months, only barely missing its BOD requirement in April. This performance is a marked improvement over the former town operation which was able to meet both its BOD and SS requirements in only eight months over the preceding five years.

According to Mr. Bates his approach consists of "common sense, coupled with honesty, sincerity and sensitivity." Indeed, admirable qualities for all of us, not just Sewer Commissioners. Now if Mr. Bates can couple these commendable virtues with sufficient homework, he may be able to provide us with some accurate information.

Crafters demonstration at Art Festival

The Cohasset Common will become the setting for an old-fashioned New England craft festival during the 32 annual South Shore Arts Festival.

Handcrafted wares by 32 artisans will be exhibited on the Common, June 26 and 27. The festival, sponsored by the South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road, in Cohasset, is a three-day celebration of the visual and performing arts and includes juried exhibits, artist demonstrations, musical and theatrical performances, carillon concerts, young artist workshops and other events for the whole family.

The finely handcrafted items range from baskets to jewelry to wood sculptures to hand sewn items. All items are original and hand crafted by the artisans. The range and quality of work exhibited in the craft show give festival goers an idea of the work being created by New England craftspeople.

The artisans selected for this juried exhibit include Paulette and Hugh Penney, basketry; Gail Beauschesne, pottery; Mary Lou Mital, quilting; Rus and Mary Feuerbach, boomerangs; April Laing, calligraphy; Russell Bolton, cordura bags; Chris Bonak, stained glass, Trisha Brooks, wood names; Judy Hamilton, stuffed animals; Vince Gygax, bonsai plants, Roberta Hudson, folk art; and Rodman Cart, porcelain jewelry.

Also selected are Sara Babbitt, needlework; Kee Yang, puzzles; Yeu Yang, needlework; Cynthia Parker, jewelry; Becky Webster, dried flowers; Debra Tracy, wind chimes, Emanuel Genovese, stained glass; John Margerum, pottery; William McNamara, sculpture; William Oleson, musical instruments; Sheridan Bishop, jewelry; and Kathleen Fergus, knitwear.

Additional artisans participating include Nancy Crawford, dried flowers; Lupe Gaytan, wood; Mary Silvia, floral arrangements; Lloyd and Beverly Linscott, stained glass ships; Laurence Graham, doll furniture; Donna Show, fiber; New England Fruit and Nut Co., gift baskets and snacks; and the New England Company, miniature wooden sailing ships.

Festival goers are welcome to stroll through the craft exhibit and meet the artisans Saturday, June 27, 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. and on Sunday, June 28, from noon to 5:30 p.m. A complete schedule of activities may be obtained by calling the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548. This summer's festival coincides with the Center's new beginning—a new home, a new logo, a new look. The Center has long been regarded as a leader in the development of the arts on the South Shore and a facility of encouragement for aspiring artists.

The festival craft exhibit of 32 artisans is just one more example of the recognition by artists of the South Shore Art Center's role in the growth of the arts on the South Shore and in New England. Summer is synonymous with craft exhibits on New England commons.

Maritime Museum celebrates Constitution signing

This year marks the bicentennial of our nation's Constitution, and Cohasset, as one of the over 1,000 officially designated National Bicentennial Communities, is participating in the nationwide observance of the Constitution's 200th year.

The Cohasset Historical Society's Maritime Museum at the Center Village, now open for the Society's summer museum program, is participating in the Constitutional Bicentennial with an exhibit of Constitution-related materials assembled especially for the occasion. Pictures, documents, and replicas related to the Philadelphia Constitutional Convention of 1787 are on view, as are illustrations of some of the events which led to the need for a change in the nation's frame of government.

The Independence of the United States dates from 1776 with the signing of the Declaration which unilaterally separted England's American colonies from the British Empire. Scarcely a decade later the new nation found itself mired in economic depression under an unworkable frame of government. Worsening conditions among large segments of the population finally exploded in western Massachsuetts as Daniel Shays led a farmers' revolt against the government and its courts. The "Rebellion" was short-lived, but its impact rocked the American states and its implications alarmed all responsible citizens.

Shays' act of armed insurrection is depicted in the Maritime Museum Constitution exhibit by pictures of two episodes; the serving of a writ of siezure to a Massachusetts blacksmith in his shop and the forced closing of a courthouse by Shays' armed rebels. Another illustration depicts the issuance in February 1787 by the Confederation Congress of the call for a convention of all states to correct obvious "deficiencies" in the nation's government. The Constitution Convention of 1787 also is represented in the Maritime Museum exhibit, notably a print in full color showing that momentous day in September 1787 when the delegates from each state affixed their signatures to the newly drafted Constitutional document.

The national Constitution itself is shown, as originally written and also in printed form more easily readable. The delegates from 12 states (the 13th, Rhode Island, failed to send delegates to Philadelphia) were men of distinction but of differing philosophies and walks of life.

The special exhibit shows prints and cameo portrait copies of a number of those men, starting with two of the giants of the Convention, Virginia's George Washington and James Madison, both of whom were to become Presidents of the United States. Of the slightly lesser delegates, men such as Pennsylvania's Gouverneur Morris, New York's Alexander Hamilton and the respected octogenarian Dr. Benjamin Franklin appear in the exhibit, along with three men of Massachuestts, Rufus King, Elbridge Gerry and Nathaniel Gorham. Other delegates from the various states also are pictured.

An original Proclamation for the statewide day of Fasting, Humiliation and Prayer issued by Massachusetts Governor John Hancock and a pewter plate from the home of Hingham's delegate to the state's ratifying convention of 1788 also are part of the display. So too is a copy made from Cohasset's earliest book of records noting that, in December of 1787, the "Constitution or frame of government" was read at Town Meeting for the first time.

As for this, the Constitution's Bicentennial year, a sample of official documents establishing Cohasset as a designated Bicentennial Community are present, as is the National Bicentennial Logo as it appeared on the cover of the town's Annual Town Report. These and other interesting items relating to the 200th year of our nation's founding document will be on view from now through September during museum open hours, 1:30 to 4:30 each afternoon except Mondays, on the second floor of the Historical Society's unique Maritime Museum. Plan to see this unusual display while taking a leisurely tour of the museum's regular permanent exhibits relating to Cohasset's own history.

Two Boston artists come together at Art Center

Two Boston artists—painter John Tracey and sculptor Peter Lipsitt—come together for an invitational exhibit in the South Shore Art Center's new home in Cohasset.

The contrast from the low hanging ceilings and sloping floors of the Center's former gallery in the little red flat iron building on Ripley Rod to its now more spacious, contemporary gallery at 119 Ripley Road will become quite apparent as visitors view this first exhibit. Exhibited in the gallery will be the painted steel sculptures of Peter Lipsitt and the oil and wax on wood paintings of John Tracey. These two artists were selected by the Center's president Claffy Williams for the President's Choice Exhibit. A formal reception on Friday, June 26 from 6 to 8 p.m. will include the ribbon cutting ceremonies for the new Center and the awards for the 32nd South Shore Arts Festival juried exhibit winners.

Lipsitt's sculptures stem from "years of my own experience added to the dialogue within 20th Century modernism," he explained. He works almost intuitively and spontaneously, seeing to fathom relationships among space, light, line and color.

Currently Lipsitt's sculpture is included in the Brockton Triennial at the Brockton Art Museum. His work has appeared in several solo and group exhibits dating back to 1968. His solo exhibits include ones at Babson College, in the Watson Gallery at Wheaton College and at the Brockton Art Museum. He has had work in group shows at the Marion Art Center, Starr Gallery in Newton, Newton Campus Gallery at Boston College and in a travelling art exhibit in New England.

Lipsitt was awarded a Massachusetts Arts Lottery grant by the Brookline Council on the Arts and Humanities for creating a sculpture in a public school and also a grant from the Metropolitan District Commission for a public art commission in the Bajko Rink in Hyde Park. He was a nominee from the northeastern United States to the Awards in the Visual Arts in Winston-Salem, North Carolina. His work is inlcuded in several museum, corporate and private collections.

Currently he conducts student workshops and after-school programs for the Brookline Public Schools. He has taught at the Concord Academy, Wheaton College, University of Wisconsin Extension and Madison Art Center and the DeCordova Museum School and at Brandeis University as a visiting assistant professor of art. For two years as a member of the U.S. Peace Corps, he taught at the Haile Selassie Univeristy Lab School.

Lipsitt was educated at Yale University where he earned both his B.F.A. and his M.F.A. from the School of Art and Architecture. He also holds a B.A. from Brandeis University and an award in sculpture from the Skowhegan School of Painting and Sculpture.

In the paintings of John Tracy, the artist is interested in finding a certain sense of life—"a sense of place that is in the process of emerging and a sense of moment which is not frozen in time but that of a moment passing," Tracey described of his work. He strives for a completeness that has strong presence and order yet has the qualities of life becoming, that is, possibility.

Tracey's one person exhibits have been at the Wessel Library at Tufts University and at the Madeleine Carter Fine Arts Gallery in Brookline. His work has been included in such group exhibits as the Billiard Room Gallery in Cambridge, the Madeleine Carter Gallery, Gallery NAGA, the Rose Art Museum at Brandeis and others.

He was educated at Tufts University and the School of the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston. Tracey's work is in the permanent collections of the Rose Art Museum and Paine Webber.

The work of these two artists will hang in the Center's new invitiational gallery through the month of July. For further information please contact the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548. The Center is supported in part by a grant from the Mass. Council on the Arts and Humanities, a state agency.

DeSantis charges 'harrassment'

According to the state code, "When it is impossible to obtain horizontal and/or vertical separation (of water and sewer pipes), both the water main and sewer shall be constructed of mechanical-joint cement lined ductile iron pipe, or other equivalent based on watertightness and structural soundness. Both pipes shall be pressure tested by an approved method to assure watertightness or both pipes shall be encased in concrete."

The architect proposed encasing the sewer line in an envelope of concrete, passing it over the water line. The water commission rejected his plan.

"It's a simple procedure to anchor the septic tank," said Commissioner William Montuori.

"That's a costly procedure," Strekalovsky commented.

"It wouldn't have been so costly if you did it right the first time," Montuori said.

Sewer Commissioner Charles DeSantis, speaking in favor of the art center's proposal noted, "Cohasset has several hundred feet of trench where water and sewer lines exist side by side and in fact, touch, on Margin St. and on Stockbridge St. Those installations were approved by both town and state officials."

"Just because there are 100 violations doesn't mean we can continue to make violations," Water Commissioner Lot Bates said.

"The code says you can do something like this when it is impossible to do something else; this is a simple project. It is not expensive.

"There are 101 things you can do," he said.

One of the things they will not be allowed to do, according to Commissioner Ronald Goodwin, is apply half of one regulation and half of another.

"You're going to pressure test one pipe and concrete the other?" he queried. "The regulation says both pipes shall be pressure tested for watertightness or both pipes shall be encased in concrete."

"I'm amazed you are paying so much attention to this problem," DeSantis commented. "The problems on Margin Street and Stockbridge Street are much worse.

"I think it's excessive," he said. "I think it's harrassment."

Tom Hamilton of the art center's board of directors told the commissioners their inspector, Ben Curley had viewed and approved the installation and the tests, at which point it was backfilled.

"The concern was raised at a later date," he said.

The water commissioners disagreed. "At first," Montuori said, "Ben saw the water line. The sewer line was not yet in. He then went back two days later, saw the box and saw men working on a sewer line.

"As soon as he saw it constructed in its entirety," Montuori said, "he came to the water commission."

The commissioners deny that Curley signed off on the project, and they said they are sure he spoke with someone at the construction site, warning them not to backfill.

"We understand your desire to see installation meet the ideal, when possible," Strekalovsky said. "But the code does provide this alternative. To provide the ideal would constitute an unreasonable hardship." He estimated the cost between $5,000 and $10,000.

The art center will next go to the DEQE to ask that it be allowed to replace the septic tank with a drop manhole close to the building. This arrangement would allow the sewer line to pass beneath the water line.

"According to Sewer Commissioner DeSantis, there is, due to the improved quality in the sewer contribution to the town," Strekalovsky said, "the possibility that the DEQE would reconsider the need for the tank."

So, the art center has its temporary occupancy permit and will open on schedule. Only time will tell if its well will run dry in September.

Town to work on housing plan to please state

EOCD official Clark Ziegler answered that a renovation project would be financed by the state, at approximately the same $90,000 per unit figure given to new construction projects. The state, he noted, would prefer to see two or three bedroom units, suitable for families, rather than single-bedroom apartments. Although elderly and special needs housing are also necessary components of the state-mandated plan, family housing under Chapter 705 is the most urgent need statewide, Ziegler explained.

Senator Golden began Tuesday morning's meeting by noting that the issue has reached "a critical point, where clearly the position of the state is to take some pretty unforgiving action." He noted the confrontation "needn't go further. It depends on our response today."

Ziegler outlined the history of the relationship between the town and EOCD, noting that since selectmen agreed in 1986 to devise a housing plan, nothing has been communicated back to the state. "the ball is very clearly in the town's court," he stated, "and no town officials have responded to us after that meeting (May, 1986). This is a serious warning to the town. As it stands now, there is basis to label this town unreasonably restrictive unless there is substantial commitment by the town to move forward."

But town officials explained Tuesday that since last year's meeting with the state, selectmen have appointed a fair housing committee, with the duty to create a housing policy for the town.

Ziegler outlined the five elements which must be included in a housing strategy for the town. The town must, he said, develop a local housing plan incorporating affordable units into that plan. There must be an inventory of all available land sites, whether town or privately-owned. There must also be an agreement by the town to apply for Chapter 705 family housing financing. And the town must work with private developers for the construction of low and moderate income housing units. The last element of a policy must state that local zoning and subdivision regulations provide incentives for developing low and moderate income housing.

Rev. Clifford Cutler, chairman of the town's fair housing committee, explained that the group has already developed a community profile and is working on an action plan. An inventory of available sites is on-going, along with discussions with local developers. A housing plan is proposed for completion by the fall, he noted.

Ziegler said the town had not informed EOCD about this new committee, and admitted it was a step in the right direction for the town. The most critical portion of any plan submitted to the state is the inclusion of Chapter 705 family housing plans, he explained, and the timetable established to create the units.

"It's up to the town to define what housing needs must be met. We can only make a decision based on the information you have submitted to us," he added. Ziegler noted that "now is the time for discussions between town boards to figure what available sites there will be."

The EOCD official stated that in the Cohasset Housing Authority's application for a 705 grant in 1984, "any local contribution toward the program was missing. The grant was labeled incomplete by the state and was rejected for funding.

Housing Authority executive director Barbara Clain noted that the 705 grant was rejected by the state because it was "not site specific. We had no funds for preliminary planning and there was never any land donated to us.

Ziegler explained that a minimum of 12 familly housing units is needed in the plan, although it is more important for the town to submit an application quickly, while working with town boards on specific sites.

Selectman Pratt argued that the term "unreasonably restrictive" was untrue in Cohasset. He noted the zoning laws until recently allowed the smallest lot sizes in the South Shore. "Why is the state coming down so hard on this community without the funds? It is coercion and blackmail and I don't give a damn whose policy it is. It is not a fair policy," he stated. "We used to have home rule and now the state mandates programs but they do not send the money to implement them. I'm sick of it."

Sen. Golden suggested the town look to other communities to see what housing programs they have implemented. "I see no reason why the town isn't in good shape to meet your concerns," he told EOCD's Clark.

The state officials responded, "we are looking for the town's commitment to follow through - our assurance that a plan will be complied with."

Executive director Clain noted her frustration in not being able to communicate with the proper people at EOCD. "It's discouraging to apply for these funds, because there is no correspondence on the state's part," she said.

Ziegler said the state has "no hidden agenda" except for the town to come to an agreement which, he said, "protects the town as much as the state. Any community that has these things underway, is off on its own and we will say, fine. We do not expect that at the end of this agreement, there will be another agreement to sign."

Planning board member Daniel Cotton asked Ziegler how the state expected the towns to take action on these housing plans, "so we have orderly progress within these towns and the character of these towns is not twisted out of shape?"

Ziegler stated that one reason for developing housing plans is to allow young people the opportunity to remain in the community where they were raised. "A lot of things can be done creatively with or without state resources," he said, citing an example in the town of Lincoln where housing units where constructed within farmhouse-type dwellings.

Local developer Wayne Sawchuk noted that his plans last year to build affordable housing for the elderly, was financially difficult and received unfavorable reaction from the community.

Ziegler answered, "we're looking for the town to assess its own needs and goals. It is really the town's position to decide how best to meet its housing needs. There is no magical number (of housing units required by the state)." He suggested the town work with local developers to establish creative housing units within the community, not necessarily in one project but in scattered sites throughout the community. Ziegler said the very next step is for the town to create a housing plan, in compliance with the 705 family housing program.

"We need to hear from you that these steps are taking place and there is a timeframe," he added.

Balance marks Phase III of Little League season

June 8-13

Parity arrived this week in Phase Three of Cohasset Little League action. Phase One was dominated by the pitchers and featured low-scoring games. Phase Two was the awakening of the league's young bats resulting in increased offensive output. Phase Three was the blending of pitching, hitting, and fielding which produces balanced play and we have the results to prove the theory.

Monday night last the Braves walloped the Mets 11-4. On Thursday night past the Mets reversed the decision with a 12-2 shellacking of those same Braves. If you'll peruse the concomitant box score, you will get a very concise account of a "masterful" Met game. Congratulations! For the sake of my parity argument, I wish I could include the box score from Monday's game, but once again my Brave correspondent has failed to provide me with an account of the game. My apologies to the victorious Braves.

To continue the parity theme, the Yankees and Sox split a pair of games. . .well, almost. The Yanks bettered the Sox 11-4 Tuesday and had Andy Kuhn and the first-place Red Sox on the ropes Friday before the game went to extra innings. In the extra frame, the Sox scored seven runs before the game was suspended. Seven runs should be tough to overcome so the game results look like a split. . . well, almost.

The Yankees played super baseball Monday. They got a two-triple, three-hit, three-run, two-RBI performance by Charlie Endris, a six-run fifth inning, and strong pitching from Mike Reynolds (win) and Joe Andrade (save) to key a solid victory. The Sox countered with five extra base hits off the bats of Fiore (double, triple), Lowenhagen, Drysdale and Welz but could only produce four runs.

Friday night Andy "K" Kuhn registered fifteen of a possible eighteen K's, but the Yanks roughed him up for six hits and five runs. A sixth runner was thrown out in a close play at the plate in the bottom of the sixth inning. The play went 3-6-5-2 (first to second [the shortstop covering] to third to home) and sent the game to overtime.

As I mentioned earlier in the article the Sox scored readily in the seventh to take a commanding 12-5 lead. The Sox offense centered around the bat of Chris Stevens who was a perfect three for three with two runs driven in. Eric Drysdale, Greg Lowenhagen, and Nathan Fiore all had two hits. Mike Equi also pitched in with a key two-run single on the seventh.

Charlie Endris with two hits and the pesky Mike Reynolds who contributed three hits did most of the damage for the Yanks. They'll take another crack at the Sox Tuesday night. It should be a good one.

In further action on Saturday a combined team of American League All-Stars (Yankees and Red Sox) defeated the Nationals (Mets and Braves) 5-4. The game was the focal point of the Second Annual Cohasset Little League Picnic. The gala was attended by over three hundred people.

Picnickers and fans witnessed a very exciting, near-flawless defensive contest. The Nationals cut down two would-be scorers at the plate. The Americans countered with an unusual base-running double play. A runner was thrown out at home and a second runner ran into a run-down between home and third and was rubbed out.

The plays came at times in the game when it could have been blown wide open. But that's the reason these players are All-Stars: they can make all the plays! League President (and my chief correspondent) John Rolandelli congratulates you all!

Reduce risks of heat-related illnesses

Although summer is traditionally a time for outdoor recreation, the National Institute on Aging warns that hot, humid weather may pose severe health problems for a great many people. Older people, particularly, should take necessary steps to lessen the risks of heat-related illnesses.

Heat stress, or hyperthermia, can take several different forms from the potentially fatal heat stroke to a less serious heat fatigue. The two most common forms of heat stress are heat stroke and heat exhaustion. Of the two, heat stroke is especially dangerous and requires immediate attention.

Medical factors which may make a person prone to heat-related illness include heart, lung, and kidney disease, as well as any condition which causes weakness or fever. Diseases such as diabetes, which require special diet, may also place a person at higher risk. The effects of heat on an existing health condition should be discussed with a doctor.

People taking diuretics, sedatives and tranquilizers, anticholinergic drugs, and some heart and blood medication which alter the ability to sweat should be aware of the increased risk of hyperthermia. It is important, however, that people taking these medications continue to do so and discuss possible problems with a doctor.

Other factors which may make a person more susceptible to heat-related illnesses are changes in the skin, slowed circulation, and inefficient sweat glands caused by the normal aging process, obesity or alcoholism.

It is easy to avoid heat-related illnesses by simply following some basic, common sense procedures: (1) Drink plenty of water. (2) Bathe or shower frequently using cool water. (3) Wear lightweight, loose fitting clothing. (4) Avoid vigorous activity. (5) Wear a hat or use an umbrella when the sun is out. (6) Use fans or air conditioners liberally. (7) Keep shades or curtains down during daytime hours. (8) Avoid heavy meals. Limit the use of ovens. (9) Stay in an air-conditioned place on especially hot and humid days, particularly when there is an air pollution alert in effect.

IMPORTANT NEWS ABOUT MEDICARE

Medicare has what is known as "participating doctors and suppliers" who "accept assignment" on all Medicare claims. This means that suppliers and doctors accept Medicare's approved change as full payment on all claim forms. As in the past, when your doctor or supplier accepts assignment, you cannot be billed for more than 20 percent of Medicare's approved change, regardless of the amount of the actual bill. (Your supplemental insurance i.e. Medex, AARP, etc. may cover these 20 percent charges.) Medicare pays the other 80 percent after you meet the yearly deductible.

To find out if your doctor or supplier participates in the Medicare program, ask him/her; look for a Medicare participating sign in his/her office; or look in a "Medicare Participating Physician — Supplier Directory."

If your doctor or supplier doesn't participate, you still have Medicare coverage; you still can use any doctor or supplier you wish; Medicare still pays 80 percent of the approved charge after you meet the yearly deductible. But you can be billed for more than 20 percent of Medicare's approved charges (unless your doctor or supplier agrees to accept assignment on your claim). For more information contact your local rep. at Social Security Office in Quincy (479-0633) or call the Cohasset Council on Aging. (383-9112).

TRANSPORTATION

Once again it's summer in New England, the Cohasset Council on Aging has planned new trips for Cohasset Seniors on the Shuttle Bus. Any Senior Citizens in need of transportation in-town or to the shopping malls should contact the Council on Aging at 383-9112 to make a transportation reservation. All of the rides to the shopping malls should be made one week before the trips. The Hull Band Concerts will start on July 8 in the afternoon. Please note that if you attend the concert via the senior shuttle van, you will be expected to remain there for the entire program.

Wednesday, July 1, Hanover Mall.

Wednesday, July 8, Caldor's in Norwell-Discount Day.

Thursday, July 9, Hingham-Marshall's-Purity Supreme.

Monday, July 13, Shopping at Braintree Plaza.

Wednesday, July 15, Hanover Mall.

All trips leave Cohasset at 9:30 a.m.

WALKING INTO SUMMER

Walking is an ideal exercise for people of all ages. Walking is safe, simple, and natural. Walking requires no formal instruction, facilities, special clothing or equipment. Walking can be done in a group or in solitude. Walking can be great fun! A walk with one or more companions provide a time for sharing and socializing. Group walks can establish a regular routine and motivation.

Each week Tuesday-Friday, from 9 to 10 a.m., the Council on Aging sponsors a Walking Club called "The Strutters." Members meet at the Senior Center and under a trained leader they walk about 1 1/2 - 2 miles around town. Although the distance of walks is pre-planned, members are encouraged to walk at their own pace and only the distance that they are able.

Friday, July 3, 9 a.m., those contemplating joining the WalkingClub and current members are invited to the Senior Center for coffee and muffins and a walk. Afterwards, those who wish to formally join the Walking Club will have the opportunity to do so. Remember, exercise is the key to fitness. It influences your health, your functional capacity and the quality of life. Join us July 3 and walk into summer.

Mass Alert meeting

Mass Alert, the organization launching a statewide referendum to ban the generation of nuclear power wastes by July 4, 1989, will hold an organizational meeting Monday, June 29 at 7:30 p.m. at the Wompatuck State Park Visitor's Center, Union St., Hingham.

Coalition calls meeting to discuss Harbor cleanup

By John O'Donnell
Mariner Staff

The South Shore Coalition wants to make sure the Boston Harbor cleanup doesn't turn into a South Shore mess-up.

The coalition, made up of officials from 10 South Shore towns, has called for the board of directors of the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority, the agency charged with the cleanup, to meet the public and explain the selection process of the Deer Island treatment plant's outfall site, where 550 million gallons a day of treated sewerage effluent will be discharged into the ocean.

"We want the board of directors, the people who will be making the decision, not just their engineers and public relations people," said coalition member John Silva, a Hull selectman.

Silva, on behalf of Hull and the coalition, has sent a letter dated June 17 to the MWRA directors inviting them to a "regional town meeting" tentatively scheduled for July 23 at 8 p.m. at the Scituate High School auditorium.

"It is not enough that the MWRA continue to send staff representatives to public meetings, forums and hearings," wrote Silva. "While these individuals are certainly valued contributors to the process, they will not be making the final outfall siting decision.

"They should be there to make the presentation — you should be there to listen and evaluate the comments and concerns expressed by the public," he wrote to the board of directors.

The MWRA has a federal court-imposed Sept. 1 deadline for selecting an outfall site for the Deer Island plant, which will be redesigned and refurbished to accomodate sewerage from the 43 communities in Greater Boston it serves.

The MWRA is considering seven potential locations for the outfall site, ranging from 2.2 to 9 miles away from Deer Island. A 25-foot diameter pipe buried 250 feet into the sea bed, with an estimated cost of $20 million per mile, will run from Deer Island, off Winthrop, to the selected outfall site, where the pipe will emerge and diffuse the treated effluent into the ocean.

One outfall site the MWRA directors are considering is 2.5 miles northeast of Hull, six miles from Deer Island. Silva said of the seven potential sites, the Hull site is the MWRA's front-runner right now.

He urged the coalition to endorse the site farthest from Deer Island, approximately nine miles out into the ocean, beyond the Nahant-Hull "jaws" of the outer harbor.

"I don't think it's a solution of the inner or outer harbor," Silva said. "The one alternative farthest out (the MWRA) is saying is too expensive," said Silva. "We're saying they should not try to balance cost with quality of life."

Coalition members supported the idea of a public meeting with the MWRA board of directors.

"Don't let anyone kid you," said Chairman Janet O'Brien, a Hanover selectman. "Secondary effluent isn't a thing anyone wants spilling on their beaches.

"I think the meeting would be helpful. It appears that there has been a lack of response from a public agency supposedly committed to an open process," she said.

"I'll be happy to write a letter supporting the meeting," said Marshfield Selectman James Robinson. "I think it's critical.

"Even if (Silva) is off target (about the Hull site being the preferred alternative), I think we should follow through on what (state secretary of environmental affairs and MWRA board chairman) James Hoyte said about it being a public process," said Robinson.

The coalition formed a steering committee to plan for the July 23 MWRA public meeting, and is awaiting a response from the MWRA board of directors.

OTHER BUSINESS

A transportation task force of the South Shore Coalition will hold its first meeting June 24 at 7:30 p.m. at Marshfield town hall.

The coalition asked selectmen in each of its 10 member towns — Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Norwell, Rockland, Scituate and Weymouth — to appoint citizens with backgrounds in transportation issues to the task force.

The group will look at all aspects of transportation on the South Shore, including traffic, roads and mass transit.

Also, Jean Christensen, coalition director, asked members to write their state legislators in support of a $150,000 line item in the fiscal year 1988 state budget that would provide the coalition with $50,000.

The line item, submitted by Sen. William Golden, D-Weymouth, has been added to the senate budget, but is not in the house budget. A joint house-senate conference committee will consider the line item in the coming weeks.

The $150,000 would be split evenly between the coalition, the Minuteman Area Group for Interlocal Cooperation and MetroWest.

Destinations set for AFS students

A total of 11 Cohasset High School students will be leaving home this month for AFS summer exchanges in 11 countries spanning three continents. A twelfth will spend a year overseas beginning in August.

By far the largest group to go abroad with the AFS Chapter, their preparation for departure began last fall and caps a very active year.

The last to leave for the longest visit, 1987 CHS graduate Kim Hunt will spend a year in Turkey. Having received a deferred placement for the fall of 1988 at the University of Vermont, Kim will take a post-graduate year at a Turkish high school in addition to her cultural experiences.

All 12 students went through three screenings before receiving word from AFS New York that they would be placed with families around the globe. Detailed applications were completed by each student, their family, the AFS adult chapter, and a team of regional interviewers. The waiting for country and family placement took several months and culminates each week as the students take their leave of the USA.

Eleventh graders and their respective countries are: Kim Dwyer, the Mariana islands; Melissa Nothnagle, Indonesia; Felecia Bartow, Germany; Cindy Dormer, Portugal; and Jennifer Martin and Andrew Rossi, Greece.

Also, twelfth graders: Mary Beth McNamara, Belgium; Scott Caristo, Switzerland; Laurel Collins, Malaysia; Margo Nedrow, Brazil; and Heather St. Onge, Finland.

Their prospective experiences will vary greatly. Several of them will go to school, including Margo Nedrow, who will wear her school's uniform, and Felecia Bartow, who will travel to Berlin with her host class. Kim Dwyer will travel farthest to the island of Saipan. Melissa Nothnagle has left two brothers at home and gains five sisters. Andrew Rossi will spend most of his summer in a hotel on the Ionian seacoast.

Laurel Collins will live in a home with no telephone, and when she returns to Cohasset, she will have a new sister, as her family will host Diah Granita from Djakarta, Indonesia for the coming school year.

"These kids were chosen to go abroad because of their openness and flexibility," says AFS Chapter past President Jane Goedecke. "They're going with inquisitive minds, ready to understand other countries and customs, and we look forward to hearing all about their experiences when they return."

Richard Fessler

Richard H. Fessler, 56, of Coral Springs, Fla., passed away at his home June 6.

He was a resident of Cohasset from 1976-1985 where he was a member of Second Congregational Church, the American Legion, and Konohasset Masonic Lodge. He was also a member of Hejaz Shrine Temple of Greenville, South Carolina and was employed by the 3M Company for over 30 years.

Mr. Fessler leaves his wife, Marilyn; daughters Kathleen (Christopher) Anthony of Gloucester, Mass. and Julie Fessler of Florida, son Robert of New Jersey; grandson Justin of Gloucester; and brother Robert of California.

A memorial service will be held Saturday, June 27 at 2 p.m. at Second Congregational Church in Cohasset.

The family requests contributions be given to the Jimmy Fund or the Shriners Childrens Hospitals.

David C. Sweeney

A funeral Mass was celebrated Saturday at St. Joseph's Church in Medford for David C. Sweeney Jr., 54, of Quincy. Mr. Sweeney died Wednesday, June 17. Burial was private.

Mr. Sweeney lived in Cohasset for 12 years before moving recently to Quincy.

A former member of the Scituate Harbor Yacht Club, he was a real estate developer and attorney. A graduate of Malden Catholic High School in 1952, he graduated from Boston College in 1958 and the New England School of Law in 1966.

Mr. Sweeney leaves his son, David C. Sweeney III of Cohasset; a daughter, Amanda Sweeney of Cohasset; and four sisters, Barbara Carey of Melrose, Helen Shaw of Chelmsford, Irene Antonucci of Lexington and Kathleen Smith of Winchester.

VoTech hockey returns to ice

By Kelly Williams
Mariner correspondent

The regional school committee agreed last week to allow South Shore Vocational Technical High School to have its own hockey team next year.

The committee voted to allow teachers Ed Bursaw and Jim Peters, the coaches of the team, to use the school name in order to be accepted into the Massachusettes Interscholastic Athletic Association, (MIAA) and to use the school's buses to attend away games.

Bursaw said the MIAA membership would allow the hockey team to play against Division III teams in the South Shore League, and to compete in tournaments and in the finals.

"I just want the use of the school name," Bursaw told the committee. "MIAA will acknowledge us with the name."

Bursaw said that 40 students have already signed up for the team in the hope of being able to play hockey next year. The school dropped its hockey team in 1984 because of funding problems caused by Proposition 2 1/2.

Several students and parents attended the meeting to show support for starting up the hockey team.

"I think it's very important for these boys to skate for their own school," said Nancy Teague, whose son plays hockey. "It's very important for these boys to have their own school name."

But some committee members said they were concerned that if the team was unable to continue funding in the future, the financial responsibility would fall onto the school.

"I'm against it for the hidden costs," committee Chairman Robert Molla said. "It looks like a free program for one year, but next year it could cost us additional money. Personally I just can't see it."

Lloyd Patriquin, Whitman representative, said he was also opposed to the idea.

"Hockey is the most violent sport we can offer," he said. "I just foresee trouble down the road."

Responding to the concerns, Bursaw said he would not tolerate violence on his team and that the team would remain financially self-sufficient. He said costs were expected to be $3,000 for eight home games. Bursaw and Peters will not be paid for coaching the team and the students, they said, already have their own equipment.

Players will be charged a fee to pay liability costs and other expenses, but Bursaw said he expects additional financial help to come from the Booster Club.

School Superintendent Clifford Easton supported the idea of a hockey team and said he felt it would draw more students to the school.

"The more important issue is these parents, students, and staff members are willing to be pioneers," Easton said.

Other committee members said they also felt the hockey team would be beneficial to the school.

"It seems like we do little enough for our students in athletics, and that's always bothered me," Cohasset representative David Chittim said. "I would like to give it a shot. If we do something athletic for the kids it's worth it."

Dramatic Club productions

The Cohasset Dramatic Club has chosen two of its three productions for the next season of Town Hall community theater. Founded in 1921, the Club is one of the South Shore's oldest amateur theater groups and will be active for its 67th season starting later this summer.

For its fall production the Club has chosen the well known William Inge play "Picnic". The Director, a new comer to the Cohasset theater scene, will be the experienced Joe Graham, whose directing has earned him wide recognition among theater audiences.

The Dramatic Club's winter show for the 1987-88 season will be Neil Simon's "Come Blow Your Horn", directed by the Dramatic Club's Denise Ripley. She recently directed the Club's production of "Morning's At Seven", has directed, acted in or worked in backstage production for numerous Town Hall presentations.

The Club's spring show for the coming season will be announced later. William Inge's "Picnic", which starred the actress Kim Novak in it movie version, was performed by the Cohasset Dramatic Club in the spring of 1959, with Phyllis W. Mahon directing. Next winter's production of "Come Blow Your Horn" will be the Town Hall premiere for this popular show.

At its recent Annual Meeting the Dramatic Club elected Don Massa, President; Helen Ketcham, Vice President; Paul Cifrino, Treasurer; and Pat Antos, Secretary. Tryout dates for the Club's fall production of "Picnic" will be announced in the near future.

Cohasset woman pleads with town for a home

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Mary Klein was raised in Cohasset. She has returned middle-aged, with children and without a home.

Armed with a strong voice and a drawerful of academic degrees, Klein is fighting to find a home in Cohasset.

"I never expected to be homeless," Klein said this week.

As of July 15, the home where she and her 12 year-old daughter are now house-sitting will be occupied by the owners. They will have to vacate. Klein has no idea where she and her daughter will stay. They are looking for a campsite.

Right now, Klein works as a saleswoman at Talbot's in Hingham where she earns $7,200 a year. Her daughter's medical condition prevents her from seeking a higher-salaried job outside the South Shore. "I want to be in the area," she explained. "I need to be near in case of an emergency."

Relatives in the area have not helped her out, she admitted.

The highest rent Klein could afford is $200 a month. "That's enough to leave some money for food and clothes," she stated. The average rental income in Cohasset, where her daughter will be starting the eighth grade, is $600 a month.

"We could take an apartment for $600 a month. But that would leave nothing for food. So that's out of the question," she explained.

Backed into an uncomfortable corner, Klein is prepared for a fight. She doesn't want to see more committees formed, or the state to come in and mandate a project or plan for her hometown.

"What I want is for this town to take advantage of the real estate they currently own and to do whatever is necessary to make them into affordable housing units for

Regatta honors longtime Cohasset sailor

The Sullivan Regatta has become a welcomed traditional in Cohaset Harbor. Each summer, 210 racers from across eastern Massachusetts arrive at Cohasset Yacht Club for the two-day event

The regatta which has brought fame and notoriety to tiny Cohasset Harbor, is named after longtime resident Richard "Dick" Sullivan.

The 74-year old sailor is considered by many to be a founding father of the popular racing fleet. He is past national champion, and an avid supporter of the sail boat. Sullivan was on hand this weekend as a participant, not merely as an interested observer.

Sullivan, an attorney in Hingham and chairman of the board of several New England companies, has lived on King Street since he first saw the home in April, 1948.

His interest in sailing began as a youth in Quincy. He became a member of the Squantum Yacht Club in 1938, where he moored a 16-foot Winabout and later owned an Indian racer. Sullivan said throughout the years, he had his sights set on Cohasset Harbor, a popular racing locale in Massachusetts.

Sullivan later moved to the Detroit area, where he sailed eight-meter boats. When he moved back east, and eventually to Cohasset, he bought a one-year old 210 from John Adams of Scituate. That was in 1947 - the first of "about six 210's" he has since owned.

The 210, he explained, is a 30-foot racer that became very popular in Cohasset and in Marblehead after World War II. In fact, when it came time for Sullivan to purchase a home here, it was simply a choice between Cohasset and Marblehead.

After the war, the 110 racer was a popular fixture in the Massachusetts waters. Ray Hunt of Cohasset, the designer of that boat, eventually designed a larger boat which he named the 210.

"My first 210," Sullivan recalled, "was purchased for $1,300 in 1947. That's a far cry from the price they get now - about $15,000."

Cohasset Harbor, he said, is "where the action is," regarding 210 racing. Although he has owned many other boats and sailed across the oceans in other vessels,, the 210 is still a favorite of this local sailor.

His three children were avid sailors at one time, Sullivan said, but they have gone onto other hobbies and interests, including horses, tennis and golf. His wife is still an active sailor, preferring to captain her own 36-foot troller rather than crewing for her husband.

The highlight of Sullivan's racing career came in 1958 when he won the 210 National Championship at the American Yacht Club in Rye, N.Y. Since that time, "it's always been runner-up," he laughed.

Aside from his busy professional schedule, Sullivan continues to sail every weekend during the summer. "Why should I stop? I'm only going to get old."

Festivities mark Art Center opening

With a ceremonious splice of the ribbon, the doors to the long-awaited South Shore Art Center were opened last Friday evening.

About 100 persons attended the first night festivities at the center, where art center officials paid tribute to those who helped create the new headquarters, and to the artwork that would be contained within its walls.

As part of the celebration of the 32nd annual summer Festival, the art center opened its new offices at 119 Ripley Road. As president Claffy Williams noted, work crews toiled overtime in order to complete the building in time for the Friday public opening.

"I remember November 2 and our ground breaking," she said, preparing to cut the ribbon to the entrance of the corner building. "We had bag pipers, drizzling rain and cold. Now here we are, eight months later." Williams, president of the art center, and Margaret Dillon, former president, cut the striped ribbon and allowed the spectators to file through the spacious structure.

Beyond the front foyer with its offices to the side, there is a large main exhibit area. A high ceiling contains several domed skylights, allowing a roomful of light below. The walls are covered with a textured, neutral-colored paper and the floors are lightly-stained wood paneled.

The rooms in this building are not square, but symmetrical. Small, bright lights hang from a track system by thin, unnoticeable wires. There are several tracks set across the rooms, illuminating the exhibition areas without interrupting the art below them.

Next to the main exhibition area is a smaller, symmetrically-shaped room, specifically for work done by members. This week it will feature the watercolors by members of Virginia Avery's class during their trip

Landfill Closed July 4

The Cohasset Board of Health advises residents and all licensed trash haulers that the Cedar Street Landfill will be closed Saturday, July 4, because of the holiday.

In addition, the Board of Health unanimousiy voted at its last board meeting held June 15, 1987 not to accept any unchipped brush from landscapers for deposition at the Cedar Street Landfill, effective July 1, 1987.

Only homeowners/residents of the Town of Cohasset will be allowed to dispose of brush at the municipal landfill from that date forward. For further clarification, please call the Board of Health offices at 383-1664.

Wompatuck agenda

The Wompatuck Advisory Council will be busy August 20.

The meeting scheduled for June 18 went by the boards, for lack of a quorum, so the agenda will be full in August.

According to Jack Lash of the state Dept. of Environmental Management, Lee Pare Associates of Pawtucket, Rhode Island has been selected to perform a traffic impact study of Wompatuck and its environs. Pare's preliminary data will be presented to the committee at its next meeting.

The committee also will hear a status report regarding an inspection of hazardous waste at the park by the state Dept. of Environmental Quality Engineering.

"The DEQE paid a site visit May 19," Lash said, "and although the results have not yet been provided to the DEM, it was apparent there is nothing to be alarmed about.

"We will have to get their recommendations for the demolition of buildings on the new 604-acre parcel," he explained. "Asbestos will be a problem."

The committee will discuss the status of its park management plan August 20, and will also hear an inventory of the new 604-acre parcel by John Richardson of Hingham.

Private Well Problems

Cohasset Health Agent, Joseph R. Godzik, V.M.D. recently stated, "Private well owners in our community who have had contamination episodes or other problems with wells are encouraged to contact the Board of Health so that their problems can be included in the Commission's study."

The Cohasset Board of Health is located at 43 Elm Street; the number to call is 383-1664. Information will be kept confidential on request.

The Special Legislative Commission on Water Supply has initiated a study on the contamination of private wells in Massachusetts. The commission co-chaired by Senator Carol Amick (D-Bedford) and Representative Jonathan Healy (R-Charlemont), has undertaken this project in response to the growing concern about water quality in the Commonwealth.

Approximately seven percent of Massachusetts residents are supplied water from private, on-site wells, yet there is no comprehensive data base documenting the quality of water consumed by these citizens.

In 1986, the Commission completed a similar study of contamination in municipal water supplies. "This project is the logical next step in our ongoing efforts to assess the adequacy of the water supplies in the Commonwealth," explained Representative Healy. "Although private water supplies in the Commonwealth are under the jurisdiction of local Boards of Health, the state has the responsibility to support local capabilities to ensure sound management and safe, potable water supplies," he added. "By exploring the extent and nature of private well contamination, we can evaluate state policies and determine their relevance to the problem," remarked Senator Amick. "We also will be analyzing the relationships between public and private water supplies which share aquifers in order to ascertain whether they are equally vulnerable to the same types of contamination," Amick said.

Town hall hours

The town hall hours will be changed because of the July 4 holiday.

Thursday, July 2, town hall will be open as usual from 8:30 a.m. to 8 p.m. Friday, July 3, the offices will be opened from 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Town Hall will be closed all day Monday, July 6, in observance of the national holiday.

Andrew elected

Executive Secretary Donald Andrew was recently elected president of the Massachusetts Municipal Auditors and Accountants Association. Andrew is a certified public accountant and was formerly town accountant and executive secretary in Cohasset.

The organization is comprised of city and town auditors from throughout the state. The 36 year-old town official was voted president of the 400-member association at its last meeting, June 17. "It will mean a lot of hard work," Andrew said, "but it is a great honor."

At their meeting Monday night, selectmen offered their congratulations to the executive secretary.

Salvador grievances

Former sewer treatment plant operator Manuel Salvador has filed two grievances with the personnel committee.

According to Salvador, who is represented by Atty. Frank McGee, he is currently on sick leave until July 17. He informed the committee he has several weeks of vacation time due, and would like that added on so there will be no interruption in his weekly pay.

The second grievance, he said, "pertains to the Board of Sewer Commissioner's attorney, Mr. Garrett." Salvador said the attorney refuses to meet with he and his attorney, although Atty. McGee has requested a meeting. "Mr. McGee, my attorney, wishes to meet and talk with the board or the board's attorney regarding a just and fair settlement, and possibly a hearing," Salvador stated in the letter.

If Salvador is not satisfied with the result of his meeting with the personnel board, he can request that selectmen schedule a grievance hearing.

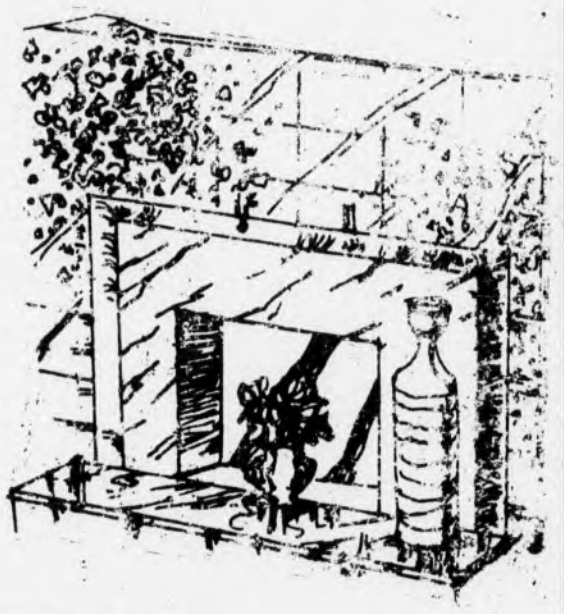
Residents protest

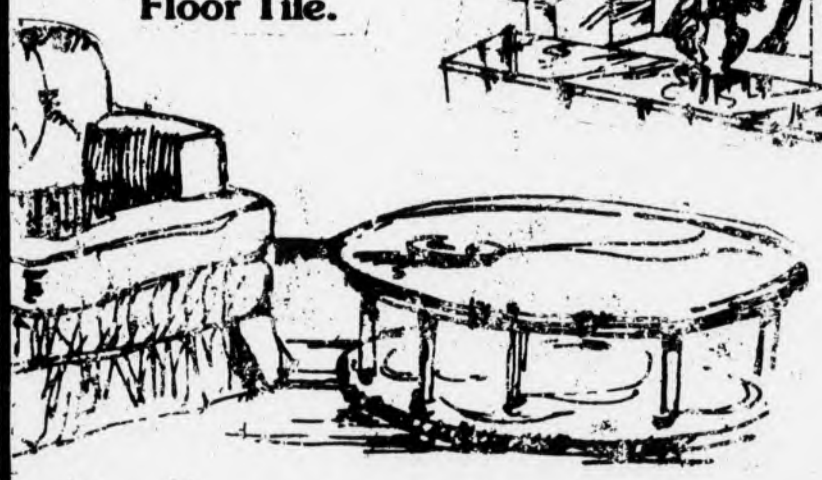
A North Main Street couple recently argued that the town incorrectly assumes it can maintain the privately-owned Mealy's Pond for public recreation use.

Thomas and Nancy Coyne argued in a letter to the conservation commission that several years ago, the town installed spotlights on their property and publicized the area for public night skating. "After our offer to lease the pond to the town on a no-cost basis, contingent upon the town's assumption of the insurance liability was rejected on advice of town counsel, the spotlights were removed," they stated.

Encroachment onto the property by the town during the past several years has been an on-going problem, the Coynes noted.

Currently, the Coynes are proposing to build a house, septic system and driveway on the 2.7 acre Beechwood Street lot. They are proposing to fill 1,600 square feet of a former ice pond behind Mealy's Pond, with a guarantee to excavate a larger amount from the other side of the pond.





In their letter, the Coynes stated, "It appears that some abutters and possibly some town officials desire to prevent the development of this land under any circumstance. They seem to believe that under the guise of government restraints to protect the environment they can prevent any type of development. We believe that the environment can be fully protected by the measures we have previously proposed. It is our desire to work with the conservation commission and the DEQE toward that end."

Officer comended

The Hingham postmaster has written to selectmen, commending animal control officer Bill Quigley for his recent presentation to the local postal workers.

Postmaster Paul Shea of Hingham said the animal control officers from Hingham, Cohasset and Hull recently made a presentation to the 105 postal workers in Hingham, on how to avoid dog bites. The employees appreciated the discussion about this serious subject, Shea said. The postmaster asked that selectmen pass along his appreciation to Quigley, who serves as a part time animal control officer in Cohasset.

Town hall plans to go back again

It's back to the drawing board for architect Brett Donham, as town employees voiced their displeasure over a set of revised plans for the town hall renovation project.

Town department heads and office employees crowded into selectmen's meeting Monday night to discuss their concerns with the town hall building committee and its architect. Although construction of the addition is scheduled to begin this fall, the architect said he will prepare a second set of revised plans in time to hold a subsequent hearing with the employees. According to a timetable submitted by the architect, the renovations and addition should be completed ten months after construction begins.

In the meantime, selectmen suggested that the building committee solicit more opinions from the town hall workers before submitting a revised plan for their approval.

Selectman Burt Pratt suggested that an area be provided on the first floor of the town hall for a receptionist to direct residents coming into the building. He suggested the receptionist could share some of the 16-foot-by-20-foot floor space allocated to the recreation department. The receptionist, Pratt suggested, could also be a central switchboard operator for the town offices. Selectman Rooco Laugelle agreed that such a change should be made now in the planning stages rather than after the renovations are completed.

Selectmen James Gallagher and Martha Gjesteby disagreed on the need for a receptionist.

Recreation director Jack Worley noted that for the past ten years he has served as an unofficial receptionist to the building. He explained that although there is a need for a receptionist, the recreation department needed all of the office space allocated in the revised plans.

Patricia Walsh, secretary to the sewer commission, objected that the "part-time boards" such as planning, conservation, zoning, historicial commission and the council on aging, would have to share office space, two desks and have their file cabinets stored in the hallway. She explained that in their current Bates building offices, the conservation commission often asks residents to wait outside until a specific hearing is held because there is not enough room to accommodate them inside. The proposed 25 and one-half - foot by 15 - foot town hall hearing room will not be large enough to hold the more than 30 persons who often attend the commission's hearings, she said.

Selectman Laugelle disagreed. Building committee member Anthony Fasciano suggested that the architect look into renovating the basement of the town hall for additional meeting rooms.

Sewer commission chairman Charles DeSantis asked that selectmen, who have final approval of the town hall plans, delay any decision to vacate the Bates building on Elm Street. Currently, several town offices, including the health board, sewer commission, conservation and planning board are located in that building.

DeSantis said in the remote chance that the sewer treatment plant is converted into a septage receiving facility, the Bates building will be needed as a checkpoint and office. The building also houses the only toilet facility for employees of the sewer treatment plant. During construction of the on-site septic project, DeSantis suggested the Bates building could be used by project engineers to discuss plans with affected homeowners.

Wiring inspector Stephen Wigmore raised considerable concern that a full sprinkler system will not be installed in the addition, and a fire alarm pull system will not be included. He also noted that the smoke detection system, which is outdated in the present building, will not be updated, according to the architect's plans.

Architect Donham assured selectmen that according to state code, a pull alarm system is not necessary in the addition, and that all secluded areas including the basement will be sprinkled, as required by state code. It was the building committee's recommendation that the addition not be fully sprinkled, he said. Fasciano said the cost of a full sprinkler system would be an additional $47,000.

Other concerns raised by town employees included the lack of adequate space in the board of health's proposed office area. According to Health Agent Joseph Godzik, there is not adequate table space to review maps and plans with engineers. Town Clerk Frances Marks noted that her office is proposed without a free-standing counter space. That is a necessary component, she said, for people who want to review legal documents and plans that can not be taken from the office.

Architect Donham promised to consult individual department heads before the plans are revised for a third time. After the plans are reworked, they will be presented for another hearing before selectmen.

Chittim doesn't understand vote to oust Easton

By Jane Lane
Mariner Staff

Cohasset's representative to the South Shore Regional school committee would like to see a reconsideration of the vote taken last week to oust Supt. Clifford Easton after June 30, 1988.

The vote taken last week succeeded by a slim margin. Four members voted not to renew Easton's contract after its June 30, 1988 expiration. Three members, including Cohasset's David Chittim, did not support that motion. One member, Scituate's representative, Breida McDonough, did not attend the meeting.

"I don't know if we can take a vote to reconsider," Chittim said this week. "But when she (McDonough) returns, which I understand is fairly soon, then maybe we can do that." A tie vote on a motion made by the board would nullify any previous action.

"The next regional school committee meeting is July 15," Chittim explained. "I think that people from the eight towns can appear then, including the school's advisory committee, students, parents, and alumni. I think they should let the school committee know how they feel.Afterall, we represent the people."

"I would like to see a vote to reconsider," he added. "If there are areas we would like Mr. Easton to improve in, we can talk to him about it. Since I have been on the board, I have made suggestions to him and he has been responsive."

Chittim has been Cohasset's representative to the vocational school committee for the past three years. During that time, he has found Supt. Easton to be "an excellenet educator. The things we express to him that we want changed, he has responded to," Chittim stated. "He's been improving all along with the committee's suggestions and others suggestions made to him."

The vote taken by the committee to oust the suyperintendent baffled the Cohasset member. Just prior to the vote last Wednesday night, the committee members reported on an evaluation of the superintendent. Although only six members filled out the evaluation (one member, McDonough, was absent), Chittim said it was a "very positive rating. But apparently it didn't have much weight," he noted.

Easton has been the superintendent of the regional high school for the past six years. Each year, Chittim explained, the school committee voted to renew his contract, one year at a time. This time, the majority of members voted not to renew the contract which expires June 30, 1988. Chittim supported a three-year contract for the superintendent.

Aside from the positive evaluation given to Easton just prior to his ouster, another problem perplexing to Chittim was the committee vote last week to increase Easton's salary by six percent. "I was very surprised by the vote not to renew his contract, I think some of the members knew exactly what they were going to do that night," he stated. "I figured we would be extending his contract, based on the high evaluation he received. And I wanted to proposed the three-year contract.

"I can't justify their vote to increase his salary," he continued. "The first vote was to give him a four percent raise, and I motioned for a six percent and they voted it. How can that be justified?"

Cohasset currently has seven students at the vocational school in Hanover. Since Chittim has been on the committee, there has been a high of 12 Cohasset students at the Hanover facility.

Every year, Chittim and Cohasset High School guidance director John O'Leary review the number of students who may be interested in attending the vocational school. Meetings are then arranged between the students, their parents, and guidance counselors at both schools and Chittim.

"There is a need for this school," he stated. "Every year, about 15 students graduate from Cohasset High and go straight into the work force. Some of those students may have benefitted from South Shore VoTech."

Chittim described the school's superintendent as a "well respected educator. He is well respected by his peers, and has held leadership roles in the Massachusetts Association of Vocational Administrators. He is recognized by his peers. At no time did I feel the school committee didn't want him to continue."

VoTech superintendent ousted

By Kelly Williams
Mariner correspondent

The regional school committee voted last week not to rehire the superintendent of the South Shore Vocational Technical High School, when his contract expires next spring, despite high satisfactory performance scores on his evaluation.

"I was very surprised," Hanover representative, Dennis Blackwell said last week.

"He did very well on all the questions of his evaluation. It just doesn't make any sense."

The committee voted 4-3 against rehiring Clifford Easton as the superintendent after reviewing the annual evaluation report of Easton's performance. The 23-page report gave Easton 108 points in the commendable category, 145 points in the satisfactory category, and only 41 points in the unsatisfactory category.

Blackwell, chairman of the evaluating committee, said that only one of the members had indicated in the evaluation a desire not to rehire Easton.

"I was totally caught off guard by the vote," he said.

Blackwell and Cohasset committee member David Chittim, and Whitman representative, Lloyd Patriquin, voted to rehire Easton. Both Patriquin and Blackwell said the evaluation shows that Easton has improved in many areas the committee had been concerned about.

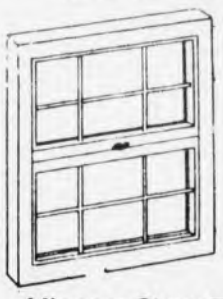
"I think he is a controversial figure, but he's made the school more effective," Blackwell said.

But a majority of the board felt differently.

Committee members John Doyle, of Rockland, chairman Robert Molla, of Norwell, Hanson representative James McDermott, and Walter Easttey of Abington voted against the renewal of Easton's contract. Committee member Breida McDonough of Scituate was in California and was unable to attend the meeting.

"I was totally shocked. Why in the world some of my colleagues voted in the manner in which they did is such a surprise, that I'm still recovering," Easton said last Friday.

Easton said that none of the committee members had given him any indication that there was a problem and that they were not in favor of rehiring him. He said the high scores on the evaluation had indicated that he had improved in his relations with the committee but he feels there may have been some personal animosity involved.



"It leads me to believe that some of the men may be carrying grudges which I think is unfortunate because they are a very good group," he said.

Solons: Towns must approve nuke evac. plans

By Bruce Kauffman
Mariner staff

The special legislative panel studying the Pilgrim nuclear power plant has voted that the facility not restart unless emergency evacuation plans are approved by both the selectmen in Plymouth and neighboring towns and the governor, as well.

According to Rep. Lawrence Alexander (D-Marblehead), a member of the Pilgrim committee, this may mean that the various boards of selectmen can veto the re-opening of the plant.

Rep. Frank Hynes (D-Marshfield) made the motion on this issue.

The panel, called the Special Joint Committee on the Investigation and Study of the Pilgrim Station, is also calling for the release of a 12-year-old General Electric report that exposes flaws in the design of the reactor used in Plymouth.

The legislative panel only has advisory power, though the legislature could pass a bill banning the opening, Alexander said. He added, though, that such a law could touch off a legal battle that might reach all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Alexander, who also serves as House chairman of the Joint Committee on Energy, reported, too, that the Pilgrim panel will urge studies of the health effects of living near the plant. It is also calling for studies of the health of people living near other nuclear plants in the state.

Finally, the Pilgrim panel voted, by a 7-6 margin, that the Pilgrim plant should not be restarted if sufficient alternative sources of energy are available.

Sen. William Golden, the Weymouth Democrat, worked closely with Alexander on the power plant panel.

"If there are cost-effective alternatives," Alexander said, "then why take the risk of Pilgrim power?"

Writers honored with Author's Party

Two weeks ago, the second graders at Osgood celebrated the completion of their collaborative writing projects with an Author's Party.

Mrs. Tewksbury's class received copies of their book "Jenny's Science Project" as well as award certificates for having been the Best Class and returning all books on time to the library during the same month. Mrs. Collins' class received their books, "The Hawaiian Trip," while Mrs. DiBenedetto's class wrote "Summer Vacation: The Sharks Attack." Mrs. Clark's class wrote "Super Pickle." All books were presented to the students by Marilyn Pope, children's librarian at the Paul Pratt Library.

Mrs. Miller, library aide at Osgood, presented the award certificates and a book for each class who won library awards. Mrs. Janice Batts, from the high school library, captured the moment on video tape.

Congratulations also go to Mrs. Alcott's 3rd grade class for having won a book for their class and certificates for "The Best Class" award. Extra copies of the children's book may be found at the Osgood School Library and also at the Paul Pratt Public Library in the children's room.

Happy summer reading — if you should find an Osgood Library book at home, please drop it off at the school office during the summer.

Cohasset woman issues plea for housing...

the modest income people who live in this town," she stated.

Her first course of action will be to request that selectmen rescind the sale of the Independence Building in Cohasset Village. That structure, she recalled from the days when it was used as a police station, can be converted into a residential apartment in a shorter time, and for less money than finding other property, developing plans, and constructing new low income rental units.

"This week I will send a letter to selectmen, requesting they rescind the sale of the building, and asking that the Government Island property be put on an income-related basis and that the residents be given a 30-day change of occupancy notice. If they do not respond," she said, "I will go to superior court and enjoin them from the sale of the Independence building. Then, it will really cost them something."

Selectmen have entered into a purchase and sales agreement with F. Noel Collins to buy the Elm Street property for $86,579. The town-owned building was put up for sale after the Historical Society vacated the gown museum there.

The building is planned for use by the attorney as a first-floor office and second-story residence. According to Executive Secretary Donald Andrew, the sale "will probably go through very soon." The property, which was never deeded, has been surveyed and recorded.

Selectmen, he said, feel they have an obligation to go through with the sale, following a mandate voted by town meeting two years ago. The property was put up for bid last year by selectmen, and Collins' bid was the highest of five submitted to the board.

Monday night, selectmen attempted to sway Klein's opinion about the property. "I'm sorry," she stated. "Their arguments do not work. They say there's no parking. Well, my car is about to fall apart, and besides, most of the high-priced apartments in Cohasset Village also have no parking. As for being too close to the street, well, the Bates Building which they are considering for housing units is just as close to the street and that's a very busy traffic area, too.

"And then they said it was in delporable condition," she continued. "It's certainly a lot better than no roof over our heads. A little paint and some renovation work will help. It was a very functional building 40 years ago."

Klein has lived in Cohasset since the age of four, attending school here and graduating from Cohasset High School in 1958. She received a Cohasset Rotary scholarship that year, which helped to finance her freshman year at Wheaton College. She graduated from that school, often working between 40 and 60 hours a week to support herself and pay tuition. She is a graduate of the Harvard Business School, and is one credit shy of a law degree from Suffolk, she said - something she worked for part-time, at night for five years.

She lived away from Cohasset for several years and moved back to the area 15 years ago. Two older daughters are attending college at Yale and at the Fashion Institute in New York.

"We are," she said, "respectful, nice people without a home. We aren't the only ones in this predicament. There are many people here in Cohasset without large incomes. We have no options now. We can go to shelters in Weymouth or Hingham or Boston. But I want to stay in Cohasset. There are a lot of people here in the same situation. Ninety percent of the people living here couldn't afford to live here if they had to buy their home now. They'd be forced to live in Weymouth - that's reality.

"But I'm intent on staying here in Cohasset," Klein continued. "It's nice to see your seventh grade teacher walking down the street and for her to recognize you. This is home and my child knows that. It's a very comfortable, loving feeling here."

She added, "if this town simply dealt with the needs of the modest-income people who live here with a rational approach, we could solve this problem. The answers are here. There is no need for consultants and committees. We have the needed housing here. The former police station needs renovation work, but it could be moved into this summer."

Klein is confident the Independence building sale can be stopped. "The sale has not taken place. Selectmen can back out of this agreement because the need for this building was not apparent at the time of sale. The town can pay back his money and his loss of interest and rescind the sale," she explained. "I don't see how he can gain one dime for damages. The state is putting pressure on this town - and the town needs to respond quickly.

"Residential use is a priority here that was not apparent at the time the contract was signed by selectmen," she continued. "Yes, the buyer will likely be mad. But there's plenty of commercial property for rent or sale here. And this property is a potential residential place. That is the highest and best use of the property and the town should have that in mind."

If selectmen do not back away from the Independence building sale, Klein said she will propose a class action suit on behalf of all low income people in the town. "By far the lesser of the two would be for the town to fight this individual to whom they could pay out-of-pocket damages," she noted.

The Cohasset woman added that even though the building has been deemed to be "in deplorable condition," Klein noted, "to me it is a palace compared to the camp site or shelter my daughter and I will be forced into.

"I'm afraid our only alternative at this time will be to camp out on town land somewhere or maybe in a town building," she stated while sitting on a bench at the common.

Noting that thousands of dollars has been recently allocated to the renovation of the duck pond, Klein mused, "They take better care of the ducks, than for the people who are trying to stay here."

'Odd Couple' features Cohasset actresses

Three local actresses will be featured in the female version of Neil Simon's The Odd Couple July 10, 11, 12, 17 and 18 at Christo's II Dinner Theatre—Molly Hochkeppel of Cohasset; Doris Herzberg and Joyce McDonough of Hingham.

Hochkeppel will play Olive Madison, a television producer and unrepentant slob. Sarah Polen of Boston will play the hypochondriacal clean freak Florence Unger. The parts were created on Broadway by Rita Moreno and Sally Struthers.

For twelve years, Hochkeppel has appeared with several area theatre groups, in summer stock and in dinner theatre.

She has been featured in Not Now Darling and the male version of the Odd Couple at Dunphey's Hyannis Dinner Theatre; and in Plaza Suite, Cheaters, No Sex Please We're British, Shut Your Eyes and Think Of England, Love Sex and the IRS, and Not Now Darling at Christo's II Dinner Theatre.

In this version of the play, the guy's poker game has been replaced with a weekly session of Trivial Pursuit among six longtime female friends.

Herzberg will play Mickey the cop, the most common sense member of the sextet. She is making her debut at Christo's, but has been associated for many years with Hingham Civic Music Theatre and Young at Heart Theatre.

Herzberg played the nurse in Sunshine Boys at Braintree's Pro-Am Theatre.

McDonough will play Vera, a delightfully dense character who bears the brunt of the other players' quips.

She has also acted with Hingham Civic, Young at Heart and the Pro-Am Dinner Theatre, and was featured in Christo's production of Sunshine Boys.

The other players include Audrey Abrams of Randolph and Fran Bothelo-Hoeg of Brockton.

The $18.50 tab for the evening includes the show, a meal with choice of three entrees, taxes and gratuities.

Christo's II is an air-conditioned function hall on Route 27 in Brockton. Fridays and Saturdays, cocktail hour begins at 6:30 p.m.; dinner at 7:30 p.m.; and the show at 9 p.m. Sundays, everything is one hour earlier.

Whittemore resigns as accountant

Town accountant Jo Ann Whittemore has submitted her resignation, effective July 30.

Whittemore, who had a three-year contract with the town has served 15 months as town accountant in Cohasset.

She will be going to work for Peat, Marwick and Mitchell, an auditing firm in Boston, where she said she will receive a 43 percent increase in pay.

"I will still be doing accounting work for municipalities," Whittemore added. "Peat, Marwick and Mitchell has a contract with the state to convert 11 cities and towns to the new U. Mass. accounting system.

"Switching to the new U. Mass system is mandated by the state for the cities and towns," she explained.

"I'm not really leaving municipal accounting," she stated. "I would not have left if if it weren't the same kind of work."

Whittemore said she realizes this is "a critical time" for Cohasset and said she has offered to continue servicing the town through her new employer, until the books are closed. She said she does not know whether the town will exercise that option.

"I heard one of the selectmen say the town will begin to advertise for a replacement immediately," she noted. "But I have had no contact with the board, not that that's something new."

Businesses asked to sponsor team

A unique opportunity exists for local businesses and individuals who wish to sponsor a town official for this season's softball games, and at the same time make a tax deductible donation to the Jimmy Fund.

Sponsorships are $30 each for the 5 to 10 game softball series. Team players will wear T-shirts with the sponsors' names printed on the back. Games, involving town officials from Cohasset, Scituate, Norwell, Marshfield, Hull and possibly one other town, begin on Sunday, July 12, in Scituate. Each town will play each other at least once, and very possibly twice. A play-off series is also scheduled for early September. Obviously, with this many games, sponsors should receive a good amount of public exposure.

Sponsors to date are: A.P. Fasciano Construction; Lenny Davis, Locksmith; Spensley Chevrolet, Inc., and the Cohasset Permanent Fire Fighter's Local #2804. We are trying to generate 24 sponsors from Cohasset.

Should you be interested in making a Jimmy Fund contribution and sponsor a Cohasset official, please contact Jack Worley at the Cohasset Recreation office, first floor Town Hall, or call 383-6791.

around town

☐ We sure send get well wishes to Mrs. Ron Beal, who is home from the hospital.

☐ Norma Nathan's column in the Boston Herald, THE EYE, was full of Cohasset news last week . . . in case you missed it, she talked all about the Witches of Eastwick and made mention of Faith Bowker and the Chamber of Commerce "dinner and flick" that was held this past Monday. Wayne Sawchuck was also quoted (he was disappointed that no stars would be present, even though they were invited. Jack Nicholson had his ticket delivered to him at the Celtics game last week!! Oh, my . . .

☐ By now everyone knows that Dick Fessler passed away last week, after a long illness. Everyone in our town sure loved him, and he will surely be missed! The Fessler family is going to hold a Memorial Service for him at the Second Congregational Church on Saturday, June 27th, at 2:00 p.m.

☐ CHS is certainly making use of computers,and this time the students and guidance department both benefit. Now all a student has to do is complete a college preference profile, then the data from the profile is fed into a computer where it is transmitted to College Counsel, and that night a selection of colleges for the student will be transmitted back to the school. Now all we need is a computer to pay for the tuition . . .

☐ Karen D. Pompeo was among those graduates of Bentley College that heard Gov. Mike Dukakis stress integrity in business at the commencement held recently. One of the things he stressed was to measure yourself by the "Contribution you can make to the greater good." Karen is a member of the work force now, and we are sure that she will do just that. Good luck in your new job, Karen.

Cohasset Travel celebrated an Open House last weekend, in honor of new owner, Robin Osborne. Among the associates who shared in the celebration were: (bottom) Margie Ruffino, (l to r) Suzanne Thompson, Linda Kent, Nancy Rose, Robin Osborne, Fran Winch and Karen Klein. (Chris Edwards)

☐ Our town will certainly miss Ed Sheehan, who died last week. Having taught in the Cohasset School system for the past 28 years, he surely touched many of us in so many ways! A man that set an example for a lot of people, and sure did his share of teaching, he was wonderful! His dedication to students and fellow man should be an inspiration to us all. Mr. Sheehan will never be forgotten.

☐ You can be sure that its summertime, it will appear on the Common in a few weeks time! The first Cohasset Recreation Department/Federation of Musicians Concert on the Common that is. It will be held on June 27th at 7:30 p.m., and will be conducted by Richard Whitmarsh. The band will be a 30-piece South Shore Concert Band. So, gather your beach chairs or blankets and be sure to grab a seat to what will be a wonderful evening.

☐ A nice farewell party was held for Al MacDonald this week at the home of Ginny Burbank. A lot of Al's fellow teachers were there, as well as his friends. There aren't words to describe this man, be thankful if he has touched your life in any way.

☐ Congratulations to Susan Hobson, daughter of Rodney and Marilyn L. Hobson of 31 Deep Run, Cohasset. Susan was awarded a bachelor of arts degree at Wellesley College on Friday, May 29 when Elizabeth Dole, United States Secretary of Transportation, addressed 540 members of the graduating class and their guests at the college's 109th commencement exercises. Susan is a 1983 graduate of Cohasset High School and she majored in English Literature at Wellesley. She graduated Cum Laude, and her undergraduate activities included co-editor of the college literary magazine, was awarded first prize for Sternberg Poetry competition, and sang in the college choir. With a background like that going for her, she should have no trouble in the business world!

A welcome addition

The sandy-colored, shingled building looks even nicer when it is filled with people.

The new South Shore Art Center at the corner of Ripley Road and Pleasant Street, opened last week. Now, instead of crews of workmen, the structure will be surrounded by children, artists, audiences and artwork.

Seeing this building for the first time last week, almost completed and filled with admiring patrons, we must all agree that Cohasset is indeed lucky. We are fortunate that the art center decided to, and was allowed to remain in our town.

Raising alomost $1 million towards this building, and now attempting to gather $300,000 more is an astounding effort. These people who worked for many, many years to build a new art center are volunteers. But through their dreams, vision and drive, the non profit organization succeeded in their ambitious efforts. They should be congratulated.

The former art center, located at the familiar red building on Ripely Road, was filled with charm and character. But the one thing it lacked, aside from straight floors and doorways, was space. It was a wonder that the art center thrived for so many years in such cramped quarters.

But it did thrive, while directors and officers acknowledged that more space was needed to accomodate the growing number of art center fans throughout the South Shore.

For a while, it appeared that perhaps the center would pack its belongings and move to a new location. Although Cohasset is considered "home", there was a limited amount of centrally-located land available.It took a lot of imagination and fortitude to envision an auto body shop replaced by a sophisticated, cultured center of art.

Last week's annual summer arts festival was a time of celebration. Beautiful expressions of color and mood filled the common under the expansive tents. Childrens' activities overflowed the town hall auditorium. And new exhibits of abstract artwork inagurated the ceremonial opening of the new art center.

There is more room in this art center - room for popular childrens' workshops and classes, and classrooms for art programs for adults. There is a photo darkroom for all the budding professionals on the South Shore, and even his and her bathrooms - something that was noticeably lacking in the former building.

Looking at the simple but elegant decor of the new building, we can't help but appreciate the toil and trouble of hundreds of people. It was their simple vision of a new art center for the entire South Shore that made this lasting dream a reality.

We hope everyone, not just from Cohasset but from many other South Shore communities, take advantage of the opportunities that will abound in this new building. This structure, the people who operate it and the children and adults who will make it thrive, is destined to become a respected landmark of the South Shore. We offer our congratulations to the people who worked so long and hard to uncover this treasure, and we applaud their determination to share it with us.

More student aid available

There will be a record $84 million in state student aid funds this fall to help Massachusetts students who want to go to college and need financial aid, according to Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray.

Massachusetts students attending independent colleges and universities will be eligible now to receive from $200 to $3100 in state scholarship funds, depending upon their financial need.

Commentary: A tale of two meetings

By David A. Mittell, Jr.
Mariner political editor

There is an hilarious car chase in one of W.C. Fields' movies—I think it was The Bank Dick —in which W.C. sideswipes a man's car, the man gets out and stands in the middle of the road with his arms extended wide in appall and alarm.

At that moment two motorcycle constables race by the man in pursuit of Fields. The first clips the man's right arm, spinning him counter-clockwise like a top. Then just as the man regains his equilibrium, the second bike dick clips his left arm, reeling him clockwise into movie obscurity as the scene shifts back to the antics of Fields.

Cohasset played the part of the reeling man last week in a farce that remarkably parallels the comedic genius of old W.C. At a meeting on Tuesday morning one Clark Zeigler of the Executive Office of Communities and Development materialized to announce that whereas Cohasset is believed to have been dragging its feet in the creation of low-income rental housing, a plan for the same would be forthcoming or the state would withhold discretionary funding for Cohasset's sewer treatment facility and other vital projects. Zeigler's ultimatum, delivered with more vigor than tact, left many natives present reeling.

But then on Tuesday evening Ana Perez of the Massachusetts Housing Partnership came to a second meeting, and in a friendly, constructive way outlined a variety of state plans through which communities can create special needs housing, family housing, elderly housing, first-time buyer subsidies, and so forth. She stressed that the state would be flexible in helping create subsidized housing that meets Cohasset's special needs.

But in response to a question she made it clear that since Cohasset is seen as an "unbalanced" community, 12 or more units of low-income family rental housing is what is actually going to get built. It may come as part of a larger plan including market-rate housing, but Cohasset will get a low-income project,and as far as the state is concerned the viability or appropriateness of the project is not negotiable. Like the fellow in the Fields movie, natives who had attended the morning meeting felt spun in the opposite direction by the events of the evening meeting.

The non-native reporter does not wish to get the nice people of Cohasset into deeper do-do with the bureaucracy than they already are. But he would observe that these bureaucrats are the nicest extortionists you will ever meet. They intend to enforce their non-negotiable demand for the project that has been decided upon (bureaucrats always use the passive voice) with such sweep syrup that, unlike Joseph P. Kennedy, Sr., they could probably talk their way into joining the Cohasset Country Club.

But the bottom line of their sweet talk is an arrogant and unreasonable rigidity born of ignorance and prejudice. The ignorance is of Cohasset, its needs and its particular housing problems. The prejudice is the perception of Cohasset as a rich town, a snob town, and an "unbalanced" town, as Ana Perez kept putting it.

What the bureaucracy has done is to take some figures about average income and average home prices and concluded that what Cohasset must have is a low-income project. Therefore they are going to give Cohasset a project, and one senses in their attitude an element of the glee with which some people use the A.I.D.S. menace as license to go around waving condoms in people's faces.

What is Cohasset to do? The answer is simple. Play along and do what we are told and recognize that for the time being home rule is dead. Twelve units of three-bedroom low-rent apartments may not speak to Cohasset's real housing needs but on the other hand they may. (The pity, the insult, and the real ethical issue is there has been no dispassionate assessment.)

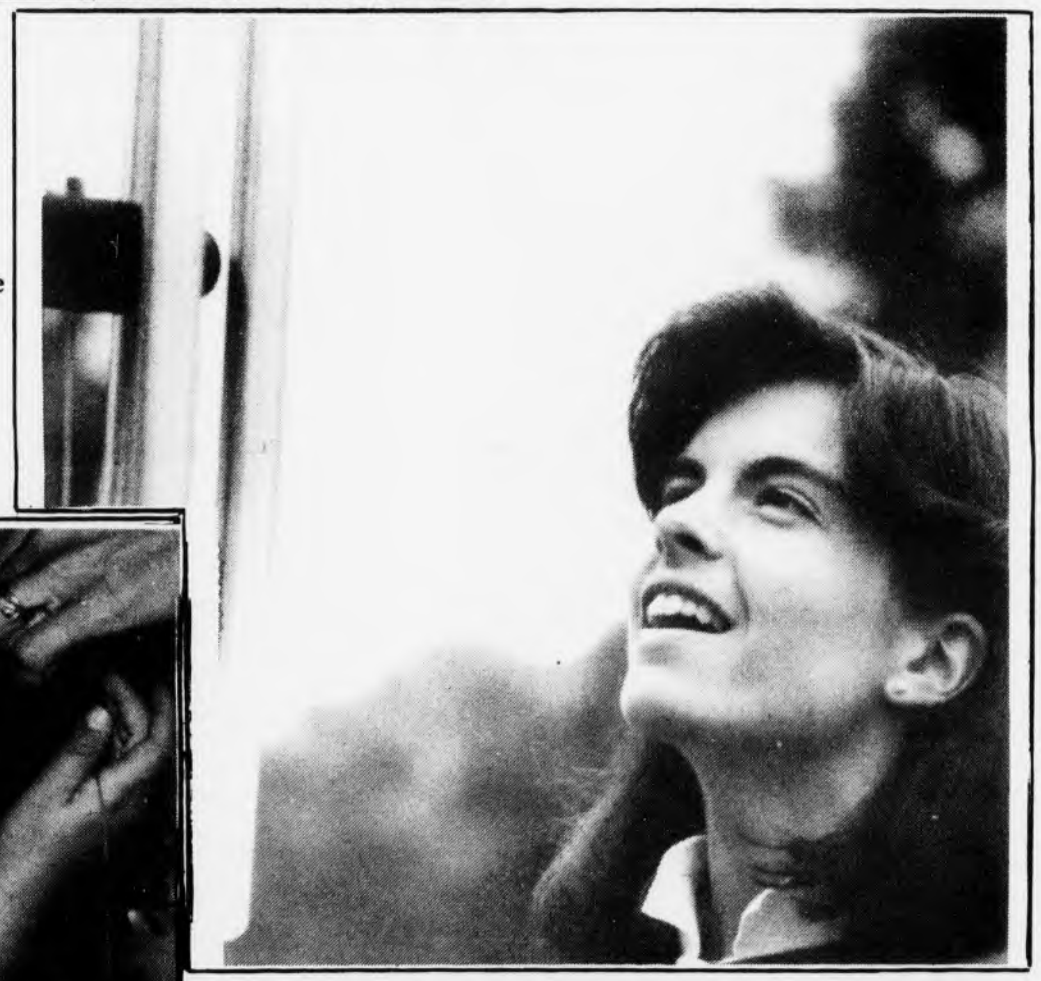
Moreover, the principle of home rule aside, there is no harm in it. The spectre of the Columbia Point Housing Project metastasizing on Jerusalem Road, which the reverse snobs who invented anti-snob zoning may have had in mind, and which a few of our people may be silly enough to worry about, is not going to come about through 12 probably scattered units, many of which will probably be occupied by current residents.

One way to keep the bureaucrats at bay and at the same time help some of our hard-pressed home owners might be as follows: There are many homes in Cohasset that are run-down because of high taxes, the high cost of repairs, and the fact that (despite the bureaucratic prejudice to the contrary) there are lots of low- and middle-income people in Cohasset.

Why not look for a dozen or more home owners who would volunteer to let the state build a family apartment in their home or on their property in return for the rental income that would help them survive as home owners? Lord knows if the state could be talked into such a simple plan, but history records that Armand Hammer talked Lenin into a few things.

This 12-unit tempest in a teapot will be resolved. It will be resolved because if Cohasset showed bad faith in the past, and it may have, it is showing good faith today. Under the capable and utterly a-political leadership of the Rev. Clifford Cutler and a number of others, the town is now saying to the state: "Tell us what you want us to do and we'll do it." If the state responds to such sincerity and to so much freely donated time with more threats, it means we're in a worse state than even your skeptical reporter believes.

But when the tempest subsides, Cohasset, the Commonwealth, and the poor will continue to have a housing problem that will not have been dealt with by tweeking Cohasset's beard over the family housing issue. In Cohasset the elderly on fixed incomes can't afford to keep their lifelong homes due to rising taxes. Cohasset High graduates of the '60s and '70s can't afford to live in town. Middle-income home owners can't afford to keep their homes up. Town employees can't afford to live here. All these problems came about of trends that were years in the making, and it will take all our intelligence to bring about interim solutions and countervailing trends.



As to the poor, they are being squeezed everywhere—probably more in a place like Jamaica Plain where I own property that has appreciated six-fold in seven years, than in Cohasset. In fact, if I were a bureaucrat I think I would try to get some affordable housing in the Jamaica Plains of this world where real job opportunities for the poor are a subway ride away, rather than spending my energy and the state's money beating Cohasset into submission over twelve units of low-income housing.

Senior Center report...

Although gender distinctions have been virtually eliminated from the Social Security law, there are still some rules that women need to be especially aware of in order to protect their rights under Social Security as workers, widows, mothers and spouses.

Social Security provides benefits to the spouse and children of a retired, disabled, or deceased worker. The annual earnings test in the law limits the amount of earnings a person can have and still receive benefits. Since more men, with generally higher earnings, are excluded from benefits by the earnings test than women, there are more wives, mothers, and widows on the Social Security rolls than there are husbands, fathers, and widowers. This situation is slowly changing. Recent studies show that about 60% of married women who retire are insured for benefits as workers in their own right. Thirty years ago, most women were eligible to receive benefits only as dependents of their spouse.

As a worker, a woman may become eligible for retirement at 62. If she stops work before she earns enough Social Security credits, no benefits will be payable on her Social Security record. However, the credits she earns stay on her record so she can always go back to work and accumulate the necessary credits for benefits. The amount of the credit she needs for disability benefits ranges from at least five out of the last 10 years at age 31 and older, down to as little as 1-1/2 years during the last 3 years if disabled before age 24. She will need credit for at least 10 years of work for retirement benefits if she reaches 62 after 1990 — somewhat less if she reaches 62 before then.

A wife can receive benefits at any age if she is caring for the worker's child who is under 16 or disabled and entitled to benefits. Otherwise, she may receive benefits at 62 when her husband retires or becomes disabled. A wife's benefit amounts to 50% of the worker's benefit if she gets benefits at 65, less if she gets benefits earlier.

A widow can get a widow's benefit at any age if she is caring for the worker's child who is under 16, or disabled and entitled to benefits. Otherwise, she can receive a widow's benefit at 60. Widow's benefits range from 71-1/2% of the deceased husband's amount if they begin at age 60, to 100% if they begin at 65. If she becomes disabled, she can get widow's benefits as early as 50 (71-1/2% of the deceased worker's benefit.)

A divorcee is entitled to the same benefits she would be entitled to as a wife or widow if the marriage lasted 10 years or more immediately prior to her divorce from the worker. This is true even if the worker has remarried. However, she may lose those rights if she remarried.

She can receive benefits when her ex-husband starts collecting retirement or disability payment if she is (1) unmarried, (2) 62 or older, (3) not entitled to a retirement or disability benefit based on her own earnings which equals or exceeds one-half of the worker's full amount, and (4) was married to her ex-husband at least ten years. Even if her ex-husband is not actually receiving benefits, she can get retirement payments at age 62 provided her ex-husband is eligible for benefits and she has been divorced from the worker for at least two years.

A woman should also be familiar with the government pension offset if she gets a pension based on work in public employment not covered by Social Security and expects to get a Social Security benefit as the wife or widow of a worker covered by S.S. The Social Security benefits payable may be reduced. There are a number of exceptions to this rule, and a woman can get more information if she applies. The leaflet, "Government Pension Offset — How It May Affect You" is available at the Quincy Office of Social Security call 773-7411 and ask for Mr. Ed Molley.

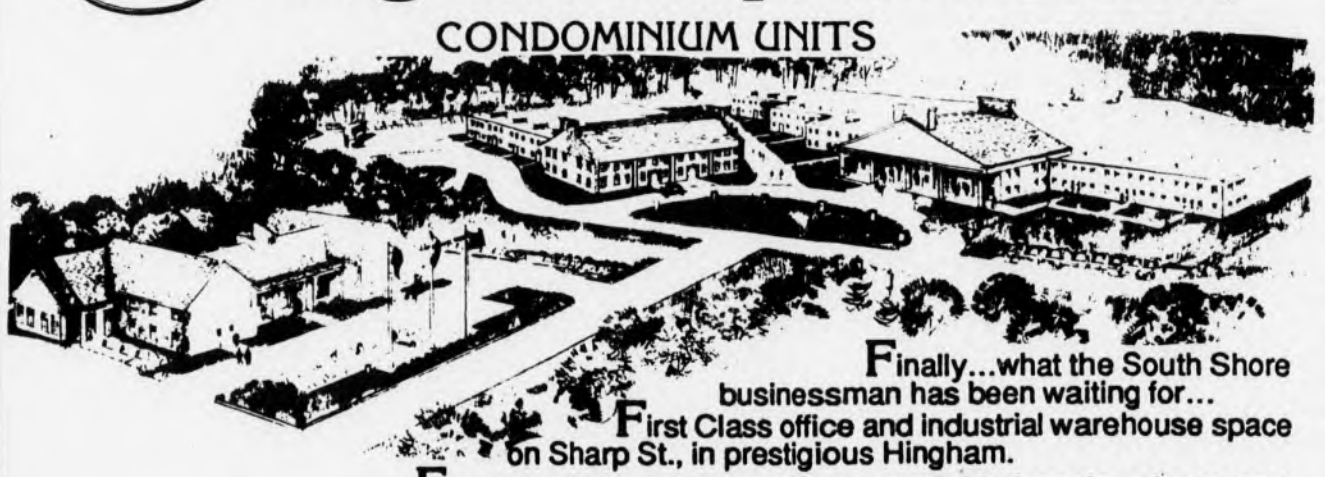
The program will be from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday, and the Saturday time will be announced during the week. North American supplies all their instructors from Great Britain. The cost for camp is $79 for the first child in a family, $74 for the second, and $69 for the third or more in each family. Each participant is also provided a camp T-shirt and soccer ball. Parent coaching clinics will be held on two evenings during the week and exact days and times will be announced.

If you have not registered, but wish to do so, a few openings remain, but a cut-off point has been established, and will be enforced.

PLAYGROUND

Parents, please, for safety purposes, adhere to the turn around system at the playground for drop-off and pick-up. In order to be certain children and vehicles are kept apart, the system must be followed by everyone.

Each year at the playground we generate a large lost and found department. Children meet with their counselor's at the end of each playground day, for a few minutes mainly to be certain everyone has their own belongings. This probably helps the situation some, but many items seem to be left behind on a daily basis anyway. Please help your child to remember belongings. Most often it is towels, shirts, bathing suits and sneakers that are left behind. Lost items are generally hanging on the chain link fence by the 4 and 5 year-old group area, and if something is missing, you should look there first.



Remember, your child will need a self-addressed, stamped postcard for the Balloon Flying Contest to be held on Tuesday, July 14. The address side should say: Cohasset Recreation Dept., 41 Highland Ave., Cohasset, MA 02025. On the message side: This card came to you via balloon from Cohasset, MA released on July 14, 1987. Should you find it please indicate on space below where and what day you found it. I may be eligible for a prize. Thank you, child's name. (Parents: Please print this card in black ink, or type).

COHASSET HISTORICALSOCIETY—Volunteers are needed to help cover hangers for our children's garments. We have learned we are one of the few museums who have a collection of children's garments. We must take proper care of this precious collection. Please call Lothrop House, 383-6930, or Leona Pratt, 383-0391, if you can volunteer a few hours. Thank you.

FOOD COLLECTION for the Quincy Crisis Center will be an on-going concern throughout the summer. Try to remember from time to time to bring a bag of food and place it in our Crisis Corner (Bates Hall) as we share from our abundance with those who know what it truly means to be hungry.

CONGRATULATIONS to Robby MacNeill, elected to master Counselor in our local Demolay Chapter.

A NOTE OF SAD NEWS: It is with regret and good wishes that we accept and acknowledge the resignation of Ellen Fryling from her position of choir director organist for the Second Congregational Church effective August 31, 1987.

Ellen feels and obviously is correct, that after sixty years of loyal and devoted service, she is entitled to relax her duties and obligations. This is a loss to both the congregation and her choir. Her shoes will be impossible to fill. She coerced us, encouraged us, was patient with us, demonstrated a sense of humor and made us believe that we could perform as a choir — even though some of us can't read music! She never missed a rehearsal or Sunday, (although each of us took our turns at rolling over in our beds and sleeping through church on a Sunday.) She will be sincerely missed at her assigned seat in the front of the congregation.We wish her only the very sunniest days — her friendship is valued by all who know her and we will all miss her constant and consistent presence. Miss us and we will miss you! And come to church and if you can't be our leader. Be our audience to see what you've taught us!

Phone company postpones fix

After listening to strong objections raised by several abutters, the New England Telephone Co. decided to postpone plans to locate a transmission box along Joy Place, adjacent to the Central Cemetery.

Company officials met with selectmen and residents Monday night to discuss plans to locate a transmission box on Joy Place. The five-foot structure will contain cable for the transmission lines in the Red Gate Lane, Depot Court, South Main, Spring and Elm street area. The serviced neighborhood will also include a portion of Atlantic Avenue to Jerusalem Road, they said. It is part of a $350,000 telephone service renovation project in Cohasset.

But several neighbors, including Daniel Cotton of the Central Cemetery committee, voiced strong objections to the location. Reading a letter from the committee, Cotton said, "This cemetery is the oldest of all town landmarks. It is a hallowed ground where town leaders and ordinary citizens are buried," including the town's first minister and a Civil War veteran who was posthumously awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor.

When asked by Selectman Rocco Laugelle where the box should be located, Cotton quipped, "that's like asking me where I should locate a sizeable boil on my face."

"We have to be reasonable," Laugelle countered. "We have to put it someplace. You're saying they can't place it anywhere." This was the second time telephone officials appeared before selectmen for the Joy Place proposal, saying they attempted to locate the box along Jerusalem Road but homeowners would not grant the company an easement.

The telephone company officials asked that the plan be withdrawn without prejudice, noting that the neighborhood will soon witness the effects of the project's delay. Selectman Burt Pratt agreed, saying that on rainy days he experiences difficulties placing calls from his Ripley Road home.

In other action Monday night, selectmen granted permission to the Rosano family to widen a right-of-way on Rosano Way. Ross Rosano plans to build ten houses with access off the 50-foot right of way. He must receive approval from the planning board, conservation commission and zoning board of appeals before the construction plan is approved. Town meeting must also vote to accept the road alterations.

By a four to one vote, selectmen granted the Rosano's the right of way, subject to approval by the other town boards.

Selectmen met briefly with new harbormaster Steven Osborne. He will officially begin his duties July 1, alongside Harry Ritter who will be retiring at the end of the month. Osborne received a standing ovation by the town officials and residents attending the meeting. Selectmen appointed three asisstant harbormasters: Tom Wigmore, Kurt Weisenfluh, and Neal Peterson.

They also made two reappointments to the zoning board - Myrna Putzinger and Mark DeGiacomo. Mary Muncey was named as the recreation commission's delegate to the harbor study committee.

Little League update

June 15 — June 26

The Red Sox played three games in this period and came away victorious twice. The Sox were able to clip the Mets both games of a home and away series, but lost a superbly played 2-1 contest to the Braves.

The pitchers were the story in this one. Andy Kuhn again registered 15 K's and issued only two passes, but failed to come away with the victory because John Maynard matched him pitch for pitch. John issued only one pass and set eleven Sox down on strikes. A key defensive play came in the fourth. The Sox had just tied the game 1-1 on a solid single and good base-running by Peter Fahey (1 for 2) and were poised to take the lead with Kuhn on third. However, Andy was erased at the plate in an attempt to steal home.

Kondrat led off the next inning with a single and came around to score what proved to be the winning run. Johnny Maynard held the Sox in check the rest of the way in a real "All-Star Effort."

Monday, June 21, the Sox and Kuhn (15 K's again [must be his quota]) scored a 9-0 knockout over the Mets and a host of pitchers. In a balanced attack, the Sox divided their hits among six different players and their RBIs among seven. Michael Riley contined his sharp play in centerfield and chipped in offensively with an RBI single. The Mets picked up only two singles (Michael Burns, David Leahy) in this Kuhn masterpiece.

Thursday night, the sox used offensive balance again to secure a 13-8 win for starter Greg Lowenhagen. When Grigs arm tightened up in the third, Nicky Welz came on with a superlative relief effort and picked up a save.

The Mets parlayed doubles by Chris Rolandelli and Brian Buckley, singles by Spencer Henderson, David Leahy and Mikael Burns, and nine base-on-balls into eight runs. But the Sox countered with eleven hits and manufactured 13 runs with the aid of eight Mets freebies (walks).

The previous week the Mets and the Yanks split a pair, but there are no statistics from those games. Friday, June 26, although the details are somewhat sketchy, the Braves beat the Yankees, 20-7. Tim Conroy hurled for the Braves and looked pretty sharp. A trio of Braves: Greg Pyle, Chris Kondrat, and Peter Collins, had extra-base hits to lead the way offensively. Matt O'Leary and John Ford had extra base hits for the Yanks but the Braves had too much fire power on this night.

Jerome R. Tosi

Jerome R. Tosi of Winchester, formerly of Cohasset, died last week at the New England Rehabilitation Center, Woburn, after a long illness. He was 71 years old.

Tosi was chairman and chief executive officer of Pastene Wine & Food, in Somerville.

A memorial service was held June 28 at the First Parish Church.

Mr. Tosi, a cousin of the Pastene family who founded the company in Boston in 1874, joined his father in the business after graduating from Dartmouth in 1938.

At Dartmouth, he majored in music and sociology. He wanted to be a professional musician, and played classical-jazz trumpet with the Barbary Coast, a Dartmouth-based orchestra, on banana boat cruises during summer vacations.

Mr. Tosi was born in Ridgewood, N.J. on May 27, 1916, to Charles A. and Edith Tosi, the second of two sons.

He worked for Pastene first in New York, and came to Boston in the mid-1950s to take responsibility for the company's business in wine and food importing, wholesaling and distribution, working with small, high quality producers. Under his direction, Pastene became one of the early importers and distributors of quality wines from throughout the world.

In a recent profile of Mr. Tosi in the Winter 1987 issue of The Quarterly Review of Wines, he told the interviewer: "...we buy wine we like, we buy on taste, we buy what we want to drink ourselves."

During World War II, Mr. Tosi was a flight commander in the U.S. Airforce, stationed to England in 1943. He flew 49 missions, and ended his tour in Holland in 1945. He is the recipient of the Silver Star, Purple Heart, Distinguished Flying Cross and nine Air Medals.

Mr. Tosi served on the Finance Committee in Cohasset where he lived for 21 years before moving to Winchester in 1986. At the time of his death, he was a director of the National Association of Beverage Importers. Earlier, he served as director of the Wine & Spirits Wholesalers of America.

Mr. Tosi leaves one daughter, Laura L. Tosi Chu, a peadiatric orthopedic surgeon in Washington, D. C.; three sons who are all associated with Pastene, Jerome R. Jr., of Weymouth, Mark G. of Charlestown, and Christopher of Winchester; and one granddaughter.

Donations to the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute are requested in lieu of flowers.

Adam McClay

Private funeral service were held for Adam McClay, 94, who died June 24 at a Scituate nursing home. Burial was private.

Born in Ireland, Mr. McClay lived in Weymouth and Wayland before moving to Cohasset. He was a member of the Irish Hussars, a mounted division of the British Calvary before World War I.

Husband of the late Phoebe L. (Spear) McClay, he leaves a son, Adam McClay Jr.; a daughter-in-law, Helen Louise McClay, and a granddaughter, Bonnie Louise Ford, all of Cohasset, and several cousins.

this year to Nevis.

Large windows surround one wall of this room, allowing sunlight into the corner of the building. This room contains a blue-grey carpet, set off by the bare, textured wallpaper.

On the second floor of the art center are the classrooms and workshops. An elevator will be constructed so the building will be completely accessible to the handicapped. There is a students' gallery and two large, airy classrooms on the second level. One of the work areas is specifically designed for children, with small sinks and cabinets installed for the younger artists. The floors were wisely painted a neutral grey and will not be covered with carpeting.

Allen Weisenfluh, director of the center's capital campaign, noted that the $950,000 goal had been attained. With that accomplished, he quickly added that a second fundraising goal is now set to begin.

"We began to cut back in our first phase of work, afraid we may not be able to reach our goal for construction," he explained. "But later we got going and we just about reached that number. So we now decided that to completely finish off the second floor of the building, we would immediately begin a second phase to our fundraising. We didn't want to stop, knowing that construction costs would double if we waited."

As community business people, town officials and South Shore residents admired the work in the President's Choice Exhibit, capital campaign worker Karin Bartow stated,"The fundraising campaign went public a year ago in May, although it's been many years that we've been in the process of finding a new space and looking around for one.

"I think it's so exciting - the potential is exciting to everyone - for shows that we couldn't hold in the other building, more classes and more art that we can bring into the community," she added. "There has always been a lot of spirit and willing in the art center, but our space limitations kept a cap on our growth. The South Shore Art Center is an important regional center. I think we will be gaining more nationally-known artists from here."

Robin Suhrbier, a member of the center who is responsible for the public relations, commented that without "that little red building down the street that we used for so many years, we could never appreciate so much what we have right now."

Art center president Williams aknowledged the help of many people, including architect Vccevold Strekalovsky of Hingham, and Peter Travi, head of Travi Construction, the company that constructed the new center. Williams also praised the building committee's Tom Hamilton who worked on the outside of the building, and Chris Rifkin, who coordinated the interior design.

Hamilton praised the contractor, acknowledging the building sits upon a difficult site, and that it was a successful team effort by many people.

Williams also thanked assistant director Joni Jensen and Marion Bush, head of the volunteer staff at the center.

Director Margaret Dillon told the gathered crowd that the second capital campaign was officially begun, with a target of $300,000. That money will be used to complete the building and to furnish it accordingly, as planned when the first campaign was initiated. Charles W. Dean will head the capital project, she noted.

"I want to thank all the members of the capital committee," she said. "It has been an exciting adventure and now we can see the completion of all our hard work.

"This journey to our new home had taken nine or ten years. It is an exciting dream we've all had, and all these people made it come true."

Patsy Welsh of the Massachusetts Council of Arts and Humanities, congratulated the center "on behalf of its new home, and we look forward to new programs in the future."

Several awards were given to the art center volunteers, some of whom worked several days a week at the center. The 1987 volunteer of the year honor was awarded Diane Kelson.

Following the award ceremony for the artists in the juried shows, the 1987 Festival was officially begun. The weekend events included arts and crafts exhibits on the common, and several performances throughout Saturday and Sunday. Children's art workshops were offered at the town hall through the weekend.

Town vows to develop new housing policy

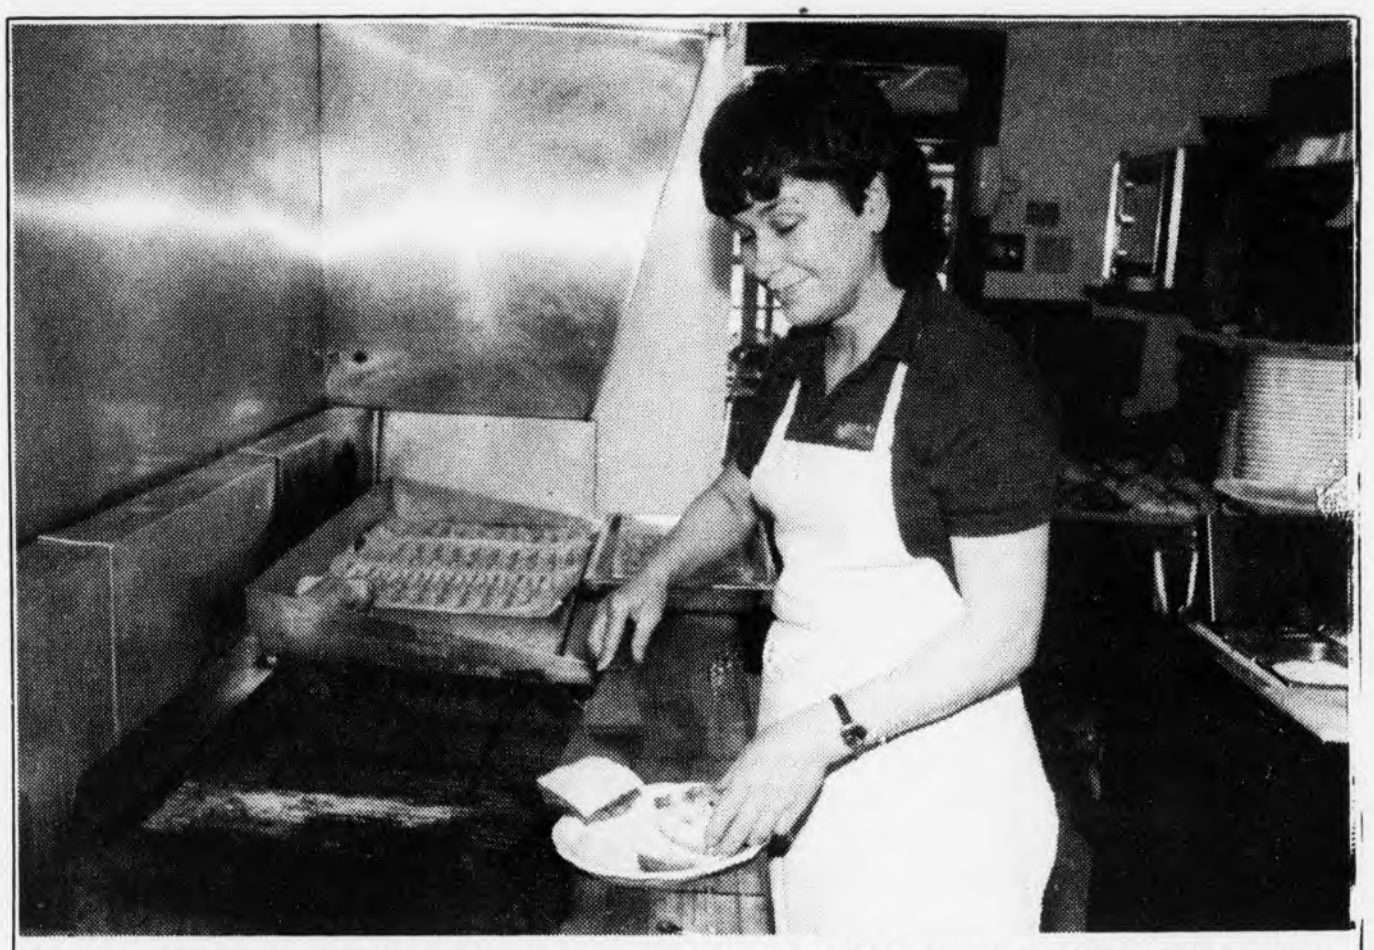
By Jane Lane
Mariner Staff

Selectmen denied a request to suspend the impending sale of the town-owned Independence building on Main Street.

Mary Klein asked selectmen last week to stop the sale of the vacant building, and proposed that the two-story structure be converted into low - income housing units. Klein explained to the town officials that she and her young daughter cannot afford to purchase or rent a home in Cohasset, and that as of next week, they will be without shelter.

Klein said this week she is preparing to stop the sale in court. She has asked selectmen for a specific date of sale, which she will bring to court as evidence. "I intend to go forward," she said. "They won't give me a specific date of the sale, which I need as evidence. As soon as I get that date, I will act as my own counsel and enjoin the town from completing the sale."

The longtime Cohasset resident has asked selectmen to stop the sale of all town-owned property. The Independence building and the Bates building on Elm Street, can be converted into middle - and low - income housing, she explained, without the need for further construction and development.



Last week, the town's fair housing committee members unanimously agreed to recommend that selectmen discontinue the sale of town-owned property in the future. The recommendation, which was not a formal vote of the committee, suggested that selectmen consider use of town-owned vacant buildings or property for the construction of low and middle income housing.

Selectman James Gallagher, who is a member of the fair housing committee, agreed with the recommendation. "I see the value of having housing in this town that is affordable for everyone. I've always worked hard for what I have, but I don't see how single-parent families can make it here. I couldn't do it. I'll work hard to promote the need for affordable housing in Cohasset," he stated.

"This is something every town in the state has to look into," he added.

Judy Kulturides, co-owner of the popular local restaurant, the Log 'n Line, prepares lunch for a lucky customer. (John Magadieu)

A second home to hungry locals

The aroma of freshly-brewed coffee is easily distinguishable, even from across the street. Customers enter and exit, allowing the distinct smell to waft through the heavy summer air.

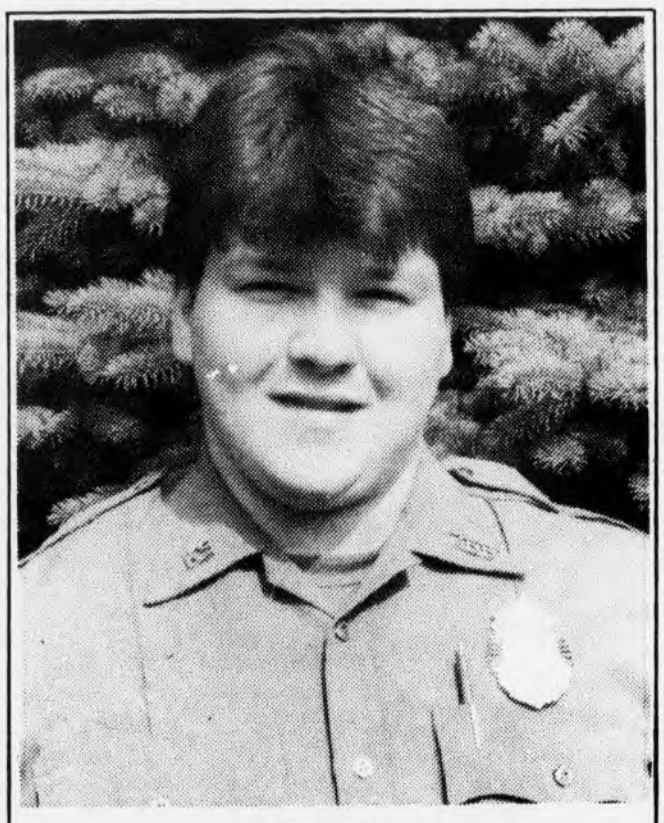
Beginning at six each morning, commuters and hometown laborers park their cars along Ripley Road. Wives join husbands, friends sit down together and neighbors congregate for a quick meal and a long conversation.

The Log 'n Line is a tradition in Cohasset among townies and newcomers. It is a comfortable, relaxed room - "a second home" to a cast of regulars who couldn't consider starting their day without breakfast at "The Log."

This small, family-owned restaurant attracts a diverse clientele - from judges and doctors to house painters and housewives.

Judy and Peter Kulturides have owned the Log for the past 15 years. They purchased the former deli-bar and package store and over the years have made major renovations to the restaurant.

It is a tough business, Judy acknowledged one weekday afternoon. It was nearly three in the afternoon, and she had almost completed her 12-hour work shift. Judy and her husband, and their two sons, Christopher, 20, and Peter, 17, do the cooking. Particularly in the summertime, it is a long, hot way to earn a living.



The doors to the Log are opened at 6 a.m. seven days a week. The remain opened until 4 p.m. during the week, and close at 3 p.m. each Saturday and 2 p.m. Sunday.

The Kulturides awaken at 4:30 or 5 a.m. each day. It is a three-mile drive from their home to work. Muffins are baked fresh each morning, and preparations begin for the day's menu. Specialities include the breakfast special, "the soup-to-nuts" entree which includes everything from juice to coffee. Other favorite meals include dropped eggs, Texas style French toast, all varieties of omelets, eggs Benedict and corned beef hash. Everything at the Log is made to order by the owners.

If he picks up your pooch, you pay

Bill Quigley

By John Magadieu
Mariner Staff

If you let your pooch run free in Cohasset, prepare to meet Bill Quigley, and pay.

"Many people are not aware there is a control law in Cohasset," the town's new Animal Control Officer said. "Dogs can roam free on your property and on your neighbor's property if you have permission, but they are not allowed on your neighbor's property without permission and they are not allowed on town property."

Quigley has spent many summer weekdays at Sandy Beach this year, but he hasn't been there to catch rays. He has been there to catch your dog.

"We've had a lot of problems at Sandy Beach," he said. "I take in about six dogs per day down there.

"Remember, I'm not a dog catcher," he said emphatically. "I'm not out there with a net. I only take a dog in if it's a problem; that's why I'm called an animal control officer.

"The beach is private property," he explained. "It's owned by the Sandy Beach Association and dogs are not allowed. The lifeguards call me all the time about dogs defecating on the beach."

Quigley noted, if he picks up your dog, you will have to pay the town $10 to get it back. Your dog also must be licensed.

"The dog has to be licensed before I let it go," he said. Spayed and neutered dogs cost three dollars to license, while their fertile counterparts cost six dollars

Backyard pipe instigates feud

Shortly after Charles and Helen Donaldson moved to Cohasset June 18, they got a rude welcome message from the Conservation Commission.

They learned that actions they had taken to improve wet conditions in their new back yard were prohibited by the state Wetlands Protection Act.

To improve the situation at 24 Bates Lane, Paul Laugelle, the contractor who was hired to solve the problem said, "We put in a six-inch pipe so the water flow would not be obstructed."

An enforcement order informed the owner of the property the commission found that the filling of a swale on his lot was in violation of the Wetlands Protection Act and in violation of the order of conditions it issued to the company which built the subdivision in 1979 and the trust which acquired it in 1983.

The order informed its recipients, "The Cohasset

Speeding vehicles

More residents of King Street have complained to selectmen about the "frightening traffic situation" caused by speeding vehicles on King street near Beechwood Street.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Garrison of King Street joined several of their neighbors, including Dr. Bud Matteson, in requesting that selectmen take action before a serious accident occurs on the street. They asked to meet with selectmen and that the town officials consider prohibiting heavy trucks from traveling on King Street to Beechwood.

They also recommended that selectmen consider a speed zone of 30 m.p.h. The Garrisons suggested that selectmen allow King Street residents "to have some say and input into the eventual traffic patterns which wil be engendered by the new traffic lights on 3A by the new Stop and Shop. It would be totally unacceptable if they should, by their plan for those lights, encourage unwanted traffic to travel down King Street."

In their letter, the Garrisons noted that four weeks ago a car drove into a utility pole near Peppermint Brook. In January, a pick-up truck demolished a twenty-foot section of their front fence. The investigating police officer informed the Garrisons they driver was traveling about 90 m.p.h. at the time of the accident.They concluded, "King Street has become terrifyingly unsafe. A very few changes could make it safe again for its residents."

Recreation revolving account

Recreation Director Jack Worley detailed the recreation department's fiscal 1987 revolving account, noting that each year the money collected into the account is increased, allowing the number of programs paid from the annual budget to be decreased.

All programs, trips, and events that are conducted through the revolving account, he said, are entirely participant-supported through per capita fees. Instructors, who according to law can not be paid from the revolving account, act as independent contractors.They are paid in a lump-sum, one-time payment for services rendered.

Worley reported, "three factors determine the amount generated through the revolving account. The number of programs conducted, the number of participants registered and the per capita fee charge." Those fees range from $3.25 to $79 per person, for the summer soccer camp.

The average fee is around $15, he reported, making the cost of the recreation programs affordable for all residents. Worley noted, "a surplus is usually carried in the fund, for use should a family find it difficult to pay for a child's program, ski trip or what have you."

Facility permits generated $22,597 during fiscal year 1987. This figure is fairly steady each year, he said.

Through small program fees, the recreation department generates $8,052 for the general fund. Those programs were available through the department's $12,000 annual budget. "Hence," Worley stated, "our

Three local restaurants were awarded the distinguished "A" rating for cleanliness and sanitation by the Board of Health. (L to R) Mark Cronan, Co-manager of Bergson's, Francine Ethier, manager of Mr. Donut, and Judith Kulturides, owner of the Log 'n Line, accepted their award from Dr. John Burns, chairman of the health board.

Watershed, flood plain district questioned

By John Magadieu
Mariner Staff

The proponents of an eight-lot subdivision off North Main Street are challenging the accuracy of the town's flood plain and watershed protection district.

Brian Davis and Ross Rosano went before the zoning board of appeals Thursday, seeking a special permit which would allow them to put in a road and utilities on a parcel predominantly below the 40-foot topographical contour line, which is officially the town's flood plain.

"There have been recent additions to the zoning bylaws to protect watershed areas and areas that flood," noted Michael Leon, attorney for developers. "I submit that the eight lot subdivision at Rosano Lane had been laid out and is therefore a pre-existing, non-conforming use.

"It is recognized by the town as a private way," he explained, "and has benefitted by the town's recognition in such ways as snowplowing in the winter.

"Brian Davis and Ross Rosano propose to make a series of improvements to the site," Leon said, "however, much of the property in their plan is within the flood plain and watershed protection district."

The attorney argued that when the town laid out its 100-year flood zone plan in 1975, the plan was laid out on a contour in 10-foot intervals, with everything below the 40-foot contour line included in the flood plain.

"Subsequent plans were more exact," he said. "We have determined that the actual 100-year flood zone is at the 35.4-foot contour; that is what the zoning board of appeals should view as the flood plain."

In such a view, Leon told the board, the land we plan to alter is not subject to flooding, except for one point at a culvert, which is below the 35.4-foot level."

Gary James, an engineer representing the developers said he determined the flood plain level for the area by studying levels at the adjacent Sanctuary Pond and James Brook.

"I did calculations for the 100-year storm, which I found to be significantly reduced from the previous map," James said. "The maximum water elevation behind the dam at Sanctuary Pond was 35.4 feet. The water is usually at 32.8 feet."

The developers said they plan to bring in "a small amount of fill" and provide a compensatory flood storage area. "The site has already perked," Davis commented.

Another "improvement" they plan is the construction of a 2,200 square foot retention basin, lessening the rate of discharge in the area. "The residential area will have no detrimental impact on the flood plain," Leon said.

A number of abutters spoke in support of the Rosano Lane proposal.

Joseph Laugelle of King Street, who owns a parcel of land at 371 North Main Street told the board such an addition to the town would benefit him, but he added that he remembers most of the area did not flood during Hurricane Carol, a storm which swamped some areas downtown.

Richard Abadessa, a Cohasset policeman told the board he believes development of Rosano Lane "could eliminate an eyesore and add to property values in the area.

Davis and Rosano not only have asked the ZBA for a special permit, but have asked the planning board for a number of rules waivers.

In fact, the developers have asked waivers on "the location of all permanent monuments, whether existing or proposed."

Such "monuments" include: waterways; wetlands; detention ponds; trees more than 12 inches in diameter; drainage courses; large boulders or ledge outcroppings; stone walls; fences; buildings; retaining walls; existing on-site disposal systems on the property or within 50 feet of any proposed drains; and site distance requirements at the intersection with North Main Street, for the purpose of rounding the corners at the road's entrance.

The developers also asked for a waiver on an environmental impact evaluation and "will submit an environmental impact statement "to help the board determine methods for the applicant to promote the environmental health of the community and minimize adverse effects on the town's natural resources."

Autohaus Inc. to take appeals board to court

By John Magadieu
Mariner Staff

The board of appeals revealed Thursday it has been sued by Autohaus Inc.

Autohaus, a car dealership at 742 Chief Justice Cushing Highway charges in the suit that the appeals board decision to grant it a special permit with eight conditions "exceeds the authority of the board."

According to Autohaus, "The decision of the zoning board of appeals is arbitrary, capricious and otherwise not based on substantial evidence."

The plaintiff is demanding from the Superior Court that the ZBA's decision be annulled and that the town pay the costs and expenses of the suit, including attorneys' fees and "such other and further relief as the court may deem appropriate."

When Autohaus first went before the board Dec. 4, 1986, seeking permission to expand operations to the old Bergson Restaurant building next door, it wanted some assurance Route 3A would not become another "Automile."

Myrna Putziger, chairman of the appeals board told the Autohaus representatives the board is interested in the beautification of the Route 3A area and that Autohaus had to submit a landscaping plan before the board would approve a special permit for the car dealership to use the lot.

Charles Humphreys, Autohaus' attorney argued the car dealership's expansion to the adjacent site would benefit the area because "it would relieve incredible congestion on the Autohaus lot."

He noted, the dealership has suffered from the overcrowding, as cars have been damaged and trucks have been turned away.

Traffic movement at the new site will be four or five times less than the traffic generated by the restaurant business there previously.

Board member Terrence Farrell noted the area is all paved and there was no plan for screening and green space. He criticized Autohaus for its "lack of responsiveness to the town."

When the board pressed for addition of bushes and trees, the Autohaus representatives rebutted, saying the site will be used for displaying cars, "making them visible to the traveling public."

The board was not satisfied.

"Would you prefer we propose a landscape design, or will you submit one?" Putziger queried.

Much to the annoyance of the board, Autohaus did submit a landscaping plan January 15. It called for minimal green space, with one bush at either side of the driveway entrance.

Board members decided the dealership's action left them with two alternatives: They could deny Autohaus' expansion and wait for the appeal, or they could approve the expansion and impose restrictions.

Allowing "a sea of cars" at the old Bergson site will create safety hazards, said board member Barbara Power, suggesting that automobile ingress and egress, as well as pedestrian activity on the lot would be hampered because of the congestion.

She suggested approving the special permit with "a credible amount of restrictions" with regard to buffering and density of vehicle population.

"To do a credible job will cost them big bucks," she added.

"The automobile industry is a big-bucks business," Putziger responded. "That doesn't bother me. But no matter how well we craft our regulations, we can't enforce them and they won't comply. I think if we grant this permit, even with conditions, they will abuse it."

Farrell suggested imposing a three-year renewal on the special permit, to help keep the car dealer accountable. Putziger was swayed by the idea.

"If we deny the special permit," she noted, "Autohaus would appeal and the judge would look at the previous use of that site. It was a restaurant, with cars going in and out of there all the time."

She predicted, "They probably would not appeal if we approved the special permit, even with restrictions. We can make them do some major landscaping which will stay there even after they leave. Let's make it real pretty!"

Power consulted a landscape engineer and devised a plan to go along with the grant of a special permit.

In its written decision March 5, the board explained, "The highway business district in which the Bergson premises is located already contains a substantial number of locations dedicated to the sale of new and used automobiles.

"In evaluating a request for a special permit," it said, "the board must determine that the proposed use is not detrimental to the public welfare or convenience."

Judging whether the proposed use would be would be compatible with adjacent properties, the board concluded, "The expansion of the sale of new and used automobiles onto the Bergson premises is not in the long-term best interest of the community.

"There is a limited amount of space zoned for business use in Cohasset," it said, "and an over-concentration of automobile sales within the town does not serve the local economy to the fullest extent possible."

Power's plan called for the construction and maintenace of landscaping, including a 900 square-foot shrub-surrounded display platform at the front and center of the parking lot, just inside the entrance. The landscaped area would have displaced five cars.

The board also stipulated that the special permit must be renewed in three years, that a chain-link fence be replaced by hedge, and that Autohaus could not service cars on the site nor be allowed to sell cars from the site until the landscaping is complete.

Apparently, the board's decision planted only seeds of discontent at the facility on Route 3A and the question of who will come out smelling like a rose will be left to the Superior Court.

"People are relaxed about letting their dogs run," Quigley commented, "but some of them get very upset when they have to pay; they ask me, 'Is this a new law?' and they want to find out who hired me."

William Quigley, 19, of Hingham has been enforcing Cohasset's six-year-old animal control law since April 16, when he was hired to replace Richard Yocum by selectmen's unanimous vote. He was the only applicant for the job.

A 1987 graduate of Hingham High School, Quigley has been fully trained by the Animal Control Officers Association of Massachusetts and served as assistant ACO in Hingham before taking the job here.

Although a few dog owners have been disgruntled about paying for Rover's return, Quigley's bosses are "very happy" with his performance. "He's doing a fine job," said Don Andrew, the selectmen's executive secretary.

Quigley described his training. "I took two-and three-day seminars," he said, "that addressed things such as animal first aid, civil liability and how to deal with people whose dog was just killed, as well as wildlife trapping and how to handle vicious dogs."

In the fall, he will attend classes at Massasoit, where he will study law enforcement.

Referring to his law enforcement activity in Cohasset Quigley added, "It's been fun so far; I would like to see this develop into a full-time position."

As an animal control officer, Quigley noted, not all his days are dog days.

"I had one resident call and tell me she had six-foot and 12-foot snakes in her yard," he recalled. "But they were not there when I arrived. I get calls about raccoons on people's roofs, skunks in people's garages and houses... You name it!"

If you have similar problems, call Quigley at 383-0037.

One of the saddest incidents so far in Quigley's young career in Cohasset involved a dog that had been struck and killed by a motorist.

"This person left his dog hit on the road," Quigley said. "It was there for four days, despite the fact that the owner had knowledge of it. He just thought it wasn't his responsibility anymore.

Through his enforcement of the animal control laws, Quigley indicated that he hopes to teach pet owners here to be more responsible for their pets.

"If you are going to the beach or to the shopping plaza during the summer, leave the dog home. It's not good to bring the dog for a ride during the summer, because invariably you will stop for something. It only takes a couple of minutes for a dog to pass out in a hot car. Remember, he's wearing a fur coat."

Quigley has a thermometer in the back of his van, which only has windows in front and is not air-conditioned. "Sometimes it gets up to 115 degrees back there," he said. "If it's that hot, I won't even pick up animals." He's presently looking for van doors with windows.

If a stray dog is friendly, many times Quigley will put it in the passenger seat next to him and take it home.

Vicious dogs ride in back and often go to Hingham, where they are taken in by Paul Murphy, Hingham's ACO and Quigley's mentor. The dogs are taken to Hingham, because Cohasset has no facility for confining canines - or other animals.

Quigley said he looks forward to the day when Cohasset will be part of a regional animal shelter planned for Hingham.

"I can't effectively do my job without it," he said.

Although it's not the Ritz, overnight lodging for the family pet costs the owner $15.

Of course, if pet owners use common sense in caring for their furry friends, that would save them money and make his job easier too.

"Make sure if the dog is chained up, it's in a place with shade and fresh water and has enough chain to move," Quigley advised. "And be careful!

"In Hingham, someone tied up his dog on a deck and it fell off and hanged itself. Make sure there's nothing around it can tangle and choke on."

But if you don't chain your dog to your lot and the pooch isn't trained to stay home, it's a good bet you will meet Bill Quigley. It's probably just as well...

"If you have a dog that will stay on your property, great!" he commented. "But if you have a dog that likes to go to the neighbor's house across the street, it may be that one day it will get hit.

"If a dog is hit and causes damage," he said, "you are liable. If a car swerves to avoid hitting your dog and hits a tree, you're liable.

"If your dog goes to your neighbor's clothesline," Quigley added, "and it chews up their clothes, you're liable. And if your dog bites people, they could sue you. You are responsible for your pet."

Cohasset swim team defeats Aqua-Dux 307-305

The Cohasset swim team got off to an incredible start last Friday by defeating the Duxbury Aqua-Dux, 307-305.

The Aqua-Dux are one of the toughest teams in the South Shore league along with Hanover, and defending champions Cohasset. The Cohasset swimmers, with only five days of practice to their names, used their depth and overpowering team spirit to wash over Duxbury, which has over 20 U.S. swim club members who swim all winter.

The meet started with Jane DeLima and Amy Hobbs capturing first and third in 16 and under diving while Johanna Horn and Colby Lawrence followed up with a second and a third in 12 and under diving.

After many exciting races Cohasset had obtained a 13 point lead at the end of freestyle but this was quickly chipped away at, resulting in a tie at the end of butterfly with 123 apiece. The lead changed hands many times bringing this dual down to the final two events, the boys and girls 16 and under medley relays.

The boys relay was dramatic as the Duxbury team dominated until Matt Buckley turned a 15 meter deficit into a 15 meter lead. The boys went on to victory, but the girls would not be outdone. The Cohasset girls relay waited until the final leg of the relay before Amy Hobbs blew away the second Duxbury team to gain a second place which is all Cohasset needed to win.

Cohasset's team is led by two new coaches this year, Eric Karcher and John Jackson. Eric and John, both being seasoned swimmers at C.S.C., plan to base this season on a tougher work ethic and strong team spirit.

"It's really a display of the talent and depth we have when we can walk in a place and down a bunch of year round swimmers," Eric and John concurred.

The coaches also said this was their way of sending a message to the rest of the league. Subsequently, Cohasset was without two of its top swimmers, Becky Golden and Niffy Jackson.

First place winners in individual events were: Jonathan DeLima (2), Caroline DeLima (2), David Leahy (2), Chip Anderson (2), Sarah Bishop (2), Lauren DeVito, Katy Carrol, Ben Redfield, Dawn Meehan, and Chris McLaughlin.

Next Friday, Cohasset faces Plymouth Y.M.C.A. at C.S.C. starting at 1 p.m. Cohasset predicts an easier meet than last Friday and the coaches plan to swim most everybody who did not compete in Duxbury.

Nevertheless, the team will still be in high spirits with their chant, "It's time to get ill." For those of you unfamiliar with that saying it means, "It's time to get psyched!"

Editorial

A desperate situation

Last week, one woman stood up from the crowd and boldy proclaimed that she could not afford to live in this town.

She was alone, but eloquent. Very likely, Mary Klein spoke for many people in this community - people who can barely afford to hold onto their homes, never mind make repairs or needed additions.

Cohasset, contrary to whatever the state may think, is not an affluent town. We have our professionals and our inheritances, but we have a lot of Mary Kleins, too. It's not something most people want to jump up and scream about. But when the need arises, there must be someone willing to call attention to this sensitive and desperate situation.

The state is keeping a close watch over this town. But perhaps that is unnecessary, given the fact that we now have a hard-working Fair Housing Committee working to resolve the situation. There are many people interested in the solutions that will be proposed this year by that committee.

And then we have the Mary Kleins of this town. People who by circumstances, not by choice, are limited in income and are barred from the housing market here. She is surely not alone. There are many, many like her in Cohasset. She was pushed into the forefront because of the immediacy of her situation. She and her daughter will be without a home by next week.

Her solution seems practical and expedient, although not entirely painless. She has requested that selectmen stop the sale of a town-owned building. It will undoubtedly take court action to overturn the sale, and the town will likely have to pay the prospective owner some monetary damages. But Klein claims the building, which once housed the police station, can be converted into apartment units with relative ease. Two apartments would help Cohasset meet its goal of 12 middle-and-low income housing units - a mandate recently sent down from the state.

Here is an example of one local woman who uncovered her anonimity for the sake of exposing a tragic situation. She does not want to be known in this town as a homeless mother. And that is why she is fighting the town to help her and others in the same situation.

The town should not turn away from the Mary Kleins who are pleading for assistance. They certainly never intended to be in such dire straits. But for the grace of God go you and I.

This town is responsible for reaching out to its own. Before we welcome others to our town, are we not obligated to house the residents who have lived here and desire to stay?

The proverbial ball is in selectmen's court. They are the ones who must now decide how best to serve the immediate housing needs of many people in this community. We are not all affluent members of this society. The burden is on those who have, to share with those who have not. Whether the state mandates this or not, it is our civic responsibility and moral obligation.

Cohasset High School Alternative Education students, past and present, salute a very special teacher as he begins a leave of absence from teaching. (Elinor Gorman)

Alternative School makes difference

Letters

Dear Al,

Where to begin is the question...You've given a lot and helped so many more than I think you know. Our recent gathering of past and present students from the alternative program is only one way we could say thanks.

For a program that began in the early 70's, you've come a long way — at one point enrolling 50 students in a year. You never made strenuous demands but let us seek and find for ourselves. You gave us a challenge and we took it in different ways. Some of us tried the impossible and found out that it wasn't.

I remember our trip to the White Mountains in which I learned much about myself both emotionally and physically. My memories of that and many other experiences will live on, always.

As I begin my second year in college, I have found that Alt School has made all the difference. In it, I was able to be me and explore and develop my interests and abilities.

When we all got together to say thank-you, I recognized the talent and individuality in the students — past and present. Whether it was house remodeling, working with the handicapped or trying to make it as a professional dancer in this fast paced world, the strengths and values we learned to recognize and set for ourselves in alt school will be with us throughout life. So, I say thanks Al for being there and oh, Al

No landfill should be near water supply

(This letter was written to the zoning board of appeals. Ed.)

Dear Ms. Putziger,

Please find enclosed information from the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), Congressional Office of Technology Assessment (COTA), and the report-Contamination in Municipal Water Supply-of the Massachusetts Special Legislative Committee on Water Supply. These studies say repeatedly that it is an inappropriate land use to have any landfill near a water supply. They state with most landfills it is simply a matter of time before toxins are found in the leachate and if sited near a water supply, it is only a matter of time before that water is permanently contaminated. This has already begun to happen at Cohasset Heights Landfill (CHL). CHL's and the Town of Cohasset's engineers have both confirmed the presence of toxic substances, notably benzene and vinyl chloride, in the leachate at the property line of the landfill. This leachate is visibly entering the watershed in the area known as Whitney Woods. We must conclude that it is only a matter of time before that leachate contaminates our town's reservoir.

We the undersigned recognize that the leachate will continue to emit hazardous wastes over time whether CHL be a demolition or household refuse landfill. In reading the EPA's brochure "Does your business produce hazardous waste? Many small businesses do.", we realize that the risks of toxic contamination seem to be equal because many of the hazardous wastes are similar. We understand from the presentation of Contamination in Municipal Water Supplies that the water in many towns in Massachusetts has been poisoned by the presence of a landfill nearby. For the most part, when wells are discovered poisoned by hazardous wastes, they are abandoned because the cost of removing those poisons is simply too expensive. In Mass., 73.68% of all wells closed will not be reopened. We have to admit once again that Cohasset Heights Landfill is an inappropriate land use in Lily Pond's watershed.

In light of the information that we are presenting to you, and in light of Cohasset's Zoning By-laws (notably 12.4.1 #2 "The proposed use will not create any danger of pollution to public or private water facilities...") we see no other option than for the Zoning Board of Appeals to declare the siting of a landfill in the watershed of Lily Pond an inappropriate land use and, therefore, to revoke the permit for CHL's section 4a, and to deny the request for expansion into 4b.

Respectfully submitted for the

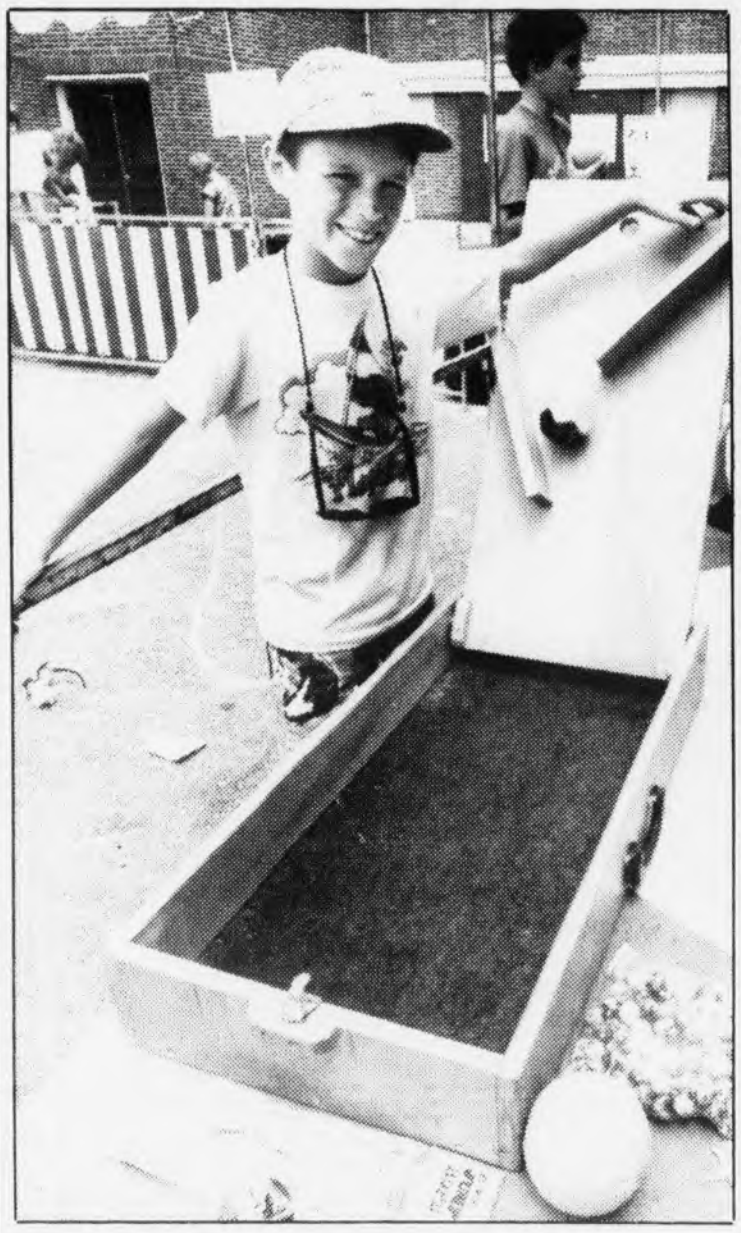
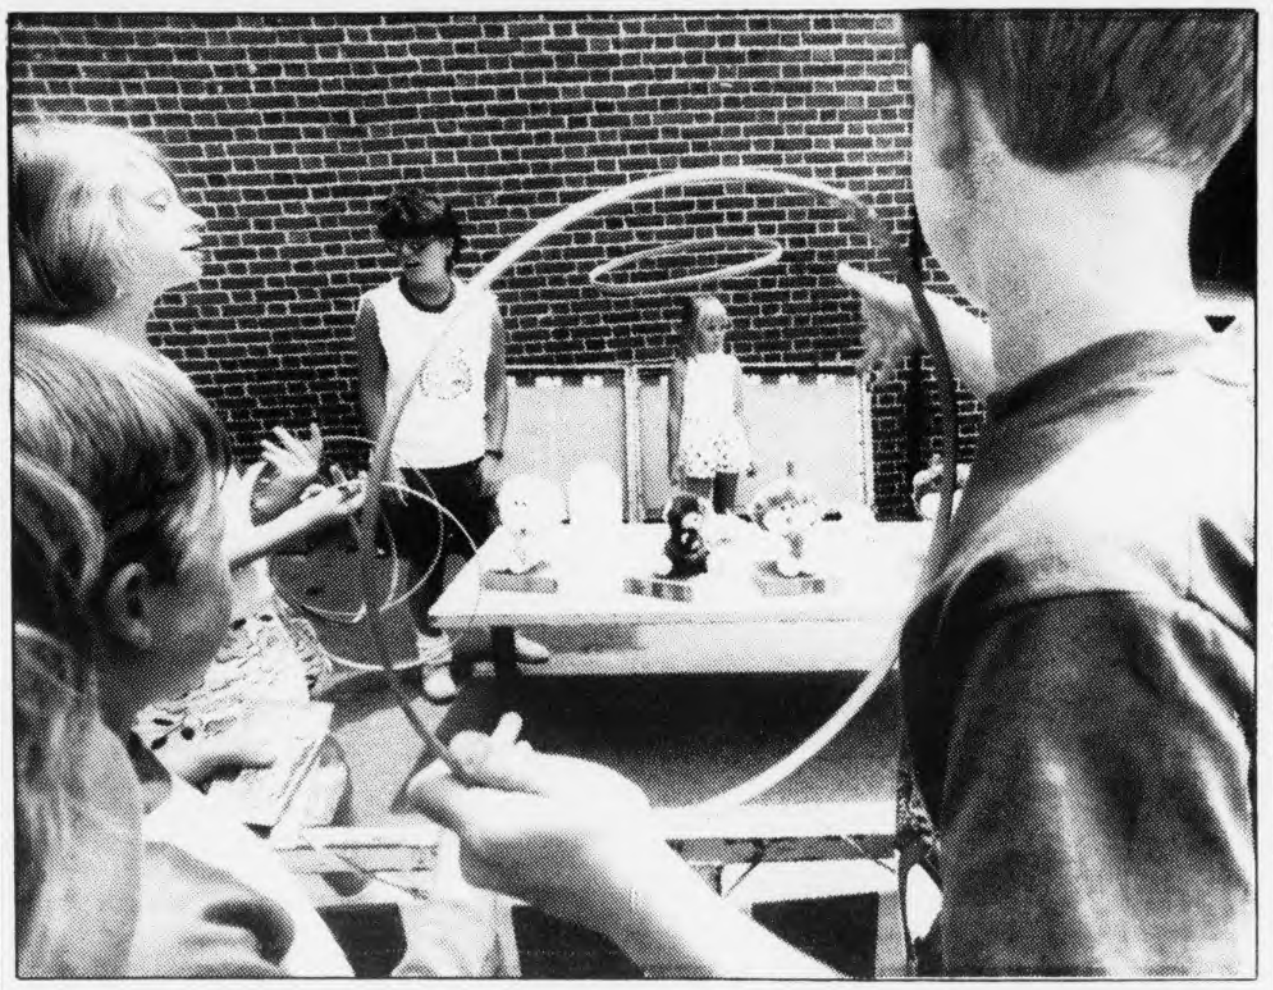
'How much can you drink and drive?'

To the Editor:

The Rockland Trust Company (and Mill Wharf Restaurant) have printed flyers on: How Much Can You Drink and Drive?—free for the taking. Help yourself and "give the info to a friend," as they suggest.



This is a practical, straight-forward pamphlet that tells how to gauge your drinks to keep them at a level safe for driving. Under the new Safe Roads Act of '86 the consequences for exceeding your limit will be tough.



The cost to you of drinking and driving can run from $800 to many thousands. The cost to society, incalculable!

Let's work together to save a life. It might be your own! Obey the law and live.

A few views about building inspector's statements

To the Editor:

We have some comments regarding the allegations made by Rev. Edward Atkinson and the building inspector in a recent edition of the Cohasset Mariner.

Several years ago a judge ruled that Kimball's, by virtue of holding an innkeeper's license, was required to serve the public in its dining room. To our knowledge, no additional parking requirements were mandated at that time.

One might assume that Kimball's use of its outside patios would be considered a continuation of use, as its non-previous floors were (we believe) on its footprint. In this case, the liquor control board's term—"extension of use," in regard to Kimball's, would be specious. By virtue of its footprint, Kimball's had the right to utilize these areas from Day 1 of its operations.

In its "Great Kimball's Awning Decision" the planning board stated: . . . "the permission granted in no way implies an expansion of the use or of existing floor space." Again, if in fact its non-previous flooring was on its footprint, Kimball's already had the legal right to utilize its patios and/or shield them.

Boards (local, state and federal) make all kinds of laws which are continually being overturned in courts of law. When John Czars first built Kimball's he agreed he would not serve the public in his dining room. Unknowingly, Mr. Czars agreed to something illegal . . . as an innkeeper he was required to serve the public. Citizens in this country cannot agree to do illegal things. For example, one can't be held to a contract in which one has agreed to commit murder. One can't agree not to sue. One can't sell one's children, even if one signs a contract agreeing to do so.

We were dismayed to discover the building inspector being quoted in the Mariner as having found Kimball's to be in violation of "several articles of Section 4 of the Town bylaws," particularly when he had not at that time (and has not as of this writing) investigated Rev. Atkinson's charges.

With regard to Rev. Atkinson's additional complaints about Kimball's, we would like to suggest that one seeking peace and tranquility not locate his or her residence between the police and fire stations, and Kimball's. Elm Street is one of commerce. . . with its bank, bread shop, gift shop, flower shop, hardware store, museum, and real estate and insurance industries. And just around the corner . . . the Legion, a busy liquor store, and traffic to Hugo's.

Recently, the supreme court voted 6-3 in favor of a very important zoning issue, with retroactive control. Relevant town boards and the building inspector should discuss its far-reaching ramifications with legal counsel, before deliberating on any zoning issues.

Minister: Gary A. Ritts — Secretary: Muriel Wheelwright, Office Phone: 383-0345; Parsonage Phone: 383-1422; Office Hours: Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. -noon.

News of the parish:

THE WORD FROM APPALACHIA, where Judy and Steve Ritts are working has it that all arrived safely to West Virginia, weather is hot and muggy, and work began Monday morning. Judy and Steve have joined the youth group from Fairfield, CT. (40 teenagers and 20 adults) for a home repair project and returned late Sunday afternoon with lots of stories!

Bachelor Gary would like to thank all of those helping him to feel less lonely! My what good cooks we have around here!!

The Parsonage Kitchen is now complete with the exception of the new floor. Gary is hard at work organizing and putting things into cupboards and drawers "just the way Judy wants them (?)!" We hope to have things all settled (wall paper, etc.) by fall - so watch for an open house sometime around Christmas!

Special thanks to Peter, Lindsey, Rich Silvia, and Brendon Mulcahy for their assistance last Wednesday (6/24) as we hauled out the stove, refrigerator and remaining cabinets from the kitchen!

A note from Liz Martin: To all of you on the Christian Ed Committee: Your thoughtfulness is greatly appreciated. The dinner was wonderful! The friendship moments heart warming and the years-past, unforgettable! Thank you so very much. Love, Liz.

Next issues we'll share some of the thoughts on other priorities, the committees who will be looking at them and some long range visions.

The Village Beacon - starting with this issue, will cover 2 weeks of news and happenings as opposed to our usual every week coverage. Throughout the summer, our calendar is not nearly so full and activities lessen; therefore the Beacon will arrive in your homes every other week (or so) for the months of July and August. Do continue to send notices, etc., and we'll include them in the earliest available issue.

News of the wider community:

Dear Reverend and Congregation,

We recently received the much needed packaged and canned food items which you collected for the Quincy Crisis Center Pantry. Your donations will be used to provide food to needy families through our emergency grocery delivery program.

Most of our emergency food requests come from the Quincy area, so you are helping your neighbor in a time of need.

Thank you for all of your hard work in collecting these groceries. Best wishes for a wonderful summer.

Beechwood Congregational

The Beechwood Congregational Church invites all friends and neighbors to worship Sunday mornings. Services begin at 9:30 a.m.; (summer schedule) there will be no church school. Children are invited to the worship service. There is a children's sermon after which child care is provided. The pastor is Stephen S.J. Hall.

An ecumenical meeting of the clergy of all the surrounding towns met last week and sent this message to the selectmen of each town: in effect they would ask that town and school-sponsored events not be scheduled during Sunday morning worship time. If you see a selectman or school committee person, mention the proposed policy to him or her.

Rev. William Sewell celebrated his 91st birthday this past week. Many of the parishioners chose to shower him with cards. Rev. Sewell is Pastor emeritus of the church having served here 12 years.

Our sympathy and prayers go to Flossie Cogill of Cohasset on the death of her brother, Everett Carl Wedgewood of Maine.

Dorothy Litchfield has returned home to Norwell but requires frequent trips to Boston for treatment. Cards would be appreciated. Dorothy Litchfield, 195 Summer St., Norwell, MA 02061.

Organist Alan Kinsley was surprised with flowers and birthday cake during last Sunday's service. He had to leave immediately after our service to play at another church so they were presented during worship. Many happy returns, Alan.

Two of our members, Carol Bestick of Cohasset and Cindy Magacs of Somerville recently received their masters of business administration: Carol from Anna Maria College in Paxton and Cindy from Northeastern. They received flowers, and a lovely cake was shared during coffee hour following worship.

We were pleased to receive two new members into our growing church. Janet Patricia Pratt of Scituate and Michelle Koed Coates of Cohasset.

P.S...God doesn't go on vacation during the summer...come and worship.

Col. Edward Graham retires after 34 years of service

Colonel Edward S. Graham, Jr. of 715-B Jerusalem Road, is retiring July 31 after 34 years of active federal service.

Colonel Graham assumed the position of Project Manager of the Distributed Tactical Test Network, Joint Tactical Command, Control and Communications Agency, Fort Monmouth, New Jersey in July 1985.

He became the Deputy Commander in January 1986 of the Joint Interface Test Force (JITF-JTC3A). This Department of Defense agency has been tasked to ensure that joint interoperability exists between tactical forces of the military services and DOD agencies when committed to tactical operations such as Grenada.

The Agency mission includes the development and maintenance of standard message information exchange, message formats, and interconnections of tactical data systems and communications links to provide enhanced command, control and communications on the battlefield.

Colonel Graham, a native of West Roxbury, graduated from Boston Technical High School, Boston, Massachusetts in1952. He has an A.A. Degree in Political Science from Los Angeles Valley College in 1973; and a Bachelor of General Studies Degree in Political Science and History from the University of Nebraska at Omaha in 1975, completing his Masters Degree in Public Administration, at Shippensburg College, Pennsylvania in 1981. He attended the Army Command and General Staff College in 1975, Army War College in 1980 and the NATO Defense College in Rome, Italy in 1981.

His military career began as an enlisted man in June 1953 completing Basic Training at Camp Atterbury, Indiana and Advance Infantry Training at Fort Carson, Colorado. He then served in various Air Defense Artillery assignments with the Army Air Defense Command in the New England area until February 1960, when he was assigned to the 38th Artillery Brigade, Okinawa.

He received a direct commission to the rank of First Lieutenant from Staff Sergeant (E-6) in June 1961. From June 1961 to May 1963 he served as a Fire Control Platoon Leader and as Executive Officer of Battery C, 2nd Missile Battalion, 61st Artillery. In 1963 he was assigned to the 3rd Missile Battalion, 5th Artillery, Quincy, Massachusetts, where he held positions of Assistant Operations Officer and Supply Officer.

In 1965, Col. Graham was assigned to the 6th Battalion, 56th Artillery, the first NIKE Operational Hawk Missile Battalion in Vietnam. He commanded Battery D, (Hawk) 6th Battalion, 56th Artillery. In June 1966 he returned to the United States and assumed command of Battery A, 3rd Msl Battalion (NIKE-Hercules) 51st Artillery, Old Bridge, New Jersey.

Col. Edward S. Graham

From 1969-1970 he was assigned to the 38th Artillery Brigade in Osan, Korea where he held two major positions. From Feb. 69-May 69 he was the S-3 Operations Officer of the 6th Battalion (Hawk) 44th Artillery and June 69-April 70 he was the 38th Air Defense Artillery Brigade's Supply and Logistics Officer.

Col. Graham returned from Korea and served as Operations Officer and Executive Officer of the 2nd Msl. Battalion (Herc) 65th Artillery (Los Angeles Defense) from Apr. 70 to June 73. In June 1975 he was nominated to become the Strategic Missile Officer on the Joint Strategic Target Planning Staff (JCS) at Offutt AFB, Nebraska. From June 1, 1976-April 4, 1977 he was selected to be the Chief of the Defensive Estimates Branch, JSTPS.

His military decorations and awards include the Defense Superior Service Medal, the Bronze Star, Meritorious Service Medal w/3-OLC, the Army Commendation Medal, National Defense Service Medal, Joint Service Commendation Medal, Good Conduct Medal w/3-OLC, Armed Forces Reserve Medal, Armed Forces Expeditionary Medal, Vietnam Service Medal, Vietnam Commendation Medal w/device, NCO Professional Development Ribbon, Army Service Ribbon, Overseas Service Ribbon, and the Vietnam Defense Campaign Medal.

Bryson Hall to test the trade winds of Cohasset

By John Magadieu
Mariner staff

Bryson Hall, a sailor and sail maker of high repute is testing the trade winds of Cohasset.

Having established an Ulmer Kolius service loft in the J.J. Henry building on South Main Street, Hall said he expects his business here to boom.

Hall, 38, who is originally from Wickford, Rhode Island said he sailed these waters in a 470 as a boy.

In 1979, he participated in olympics trials with his friend Steven Benjamin.

"We were too heavy together," Hall noted, "so I got off the boat." Benjamin went on to represent the United States in 1980 and 1984, and captured a silver medal for the U.S. in 1984.

"He would have won the gold, but he had a breakdown," Hall said.

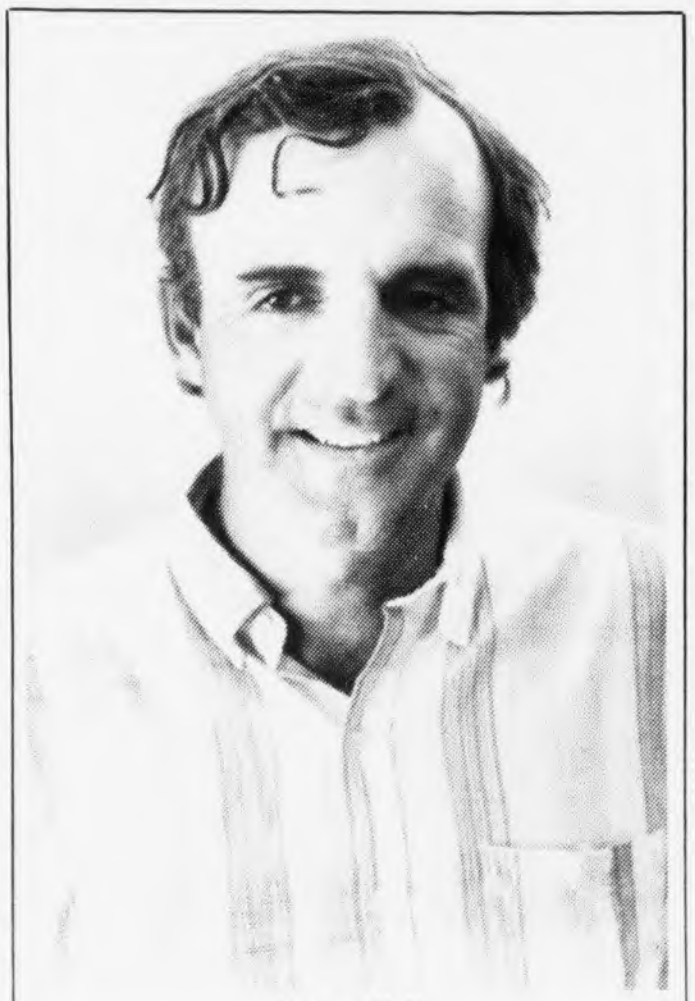
Hall went on to try boatbuilding. He set up a company in Connecticut, creating various designs before he moved to Florida to concentrate on building prototype racing boats.

His Florida concern was successful he said, sending two boats to challenge for Great Britain's Admiral's Cup and Class A boats for the Clipper Cup in Hawaii, where his boat "Shadow" was successful for two years.

Later, Hall helped Benjamin build a company, International Sailing Products in New York. "That's a big company," he said, "and getting bigger. but I was a silent partner. I didn't work for that company."

Hall sailed to victory aboard "Abracadabra" in the Southern Offshore Racing Conference in 1986, before coming to Cohasset to make sails for Ulmer Kolius, an international sail manufacturer.

"I had always been involved with Ulmer Kolius through Mark Ploch of Clearwater Florida," Hall said. "After I got tired of building boats, I opened a service loft in Florida and sold a bunch of sails up here."



Hall competed in the Performance Handicap Racing Formula in New England, where he won every race. And he decided to set up shop here in January, 1987.

"I had a choice," he noted. "Newport, Rhode Island had six or eight sail makers and Marblehead had six or eight sail makers. But there were not man sail makers in between. I just seemed to find this building; it's a good deal.

"I think Cohasset is a good place to have a sailmaker," he added. "This area is growing for sailing and my customers can go right down to Hugo's and have their sails repaired while they eat."

As they bite into their burgers, Hall's customers can rest assured that Supervisor Peter Oliphant and his crew at the UK service loft are providing superior service.

Oliphant, who came up from Florida with Hall is the shop's top sail builder. He has constructed sails for big name boats, such as: "Abracadabra," the S.O.R.C. champion in 1986; the Miami Vice boat; Walter Cronkite's boat; Peter Van Arsdale's boat "Espirit" and

Bryson Hall

Nicholas Emery's boat "Jubilation."

"Bryson is the hotshot," Oliphant concedes. "He has been sailing for 20 years; he knows what will perform. With his background knowledge, he can pick a sail for a particular boat.

"The company's success is based on his reputation," Oliphant explained. "And he has a very strong reputation."

In addition to the selling of sails, Hall spends much of his time at a computer, designing sails to fit custom boats.

"The most satisfaction I get, is when I win a sailboat race with a sail I designed," Hall said.

"There is always new information for those computer programs," Oliphant commented. "There are constant improvements."

According to Oliphant, the sail is designed to the specifications of a customer's boat, fed into the computer and printed on the kevlar fabric Ulmer Kolius uses to make sails. The designer has to know the weight of the boat, how much it will flex, how much it will give, how much the mast will bend and how the rigging conforms to the boat.

Assembly of a tape drive racing sail normally requires three to five days labor, he noted.

An average cruising sail will last five to seven years, Oliphant said, while racing sails should be replaced at least every two seasons if the racer hopes to stay competetive.

Currently, the UK loft on South Street does most of its business, about 75 percent, with boat dealers. "We have a reputation with dealers around the world," Oliphant explained.

He predicts "When people start learning we are here, then private individual customers will begin to outnumber the dealers."

Already, business at the South Main Street barracks is brisk, Hall said. "I can hardly keep up with what I'm doing. Right now, we are looking for good help. My only problem is finding experienced people.

"I think just by being here, we will get business," he said. "So far, the volume of business has been better than I predicted it would be."

Of his potential to be an empire on the south shore, Hall stated, "It doesn't happen overnight. We are conscientious about our product. It must be a quality product at a reasonable rate.

"We won't rush," he said, "because we want to be here tomorrow."

Pack 38 Cub Scouts

Earle Bestick, Pack 38 Webeloleader, recently hosted the "Pirate Treasure Hunt" for Pack 38 Cub and Tiger Scouts at the Deer Hill School.

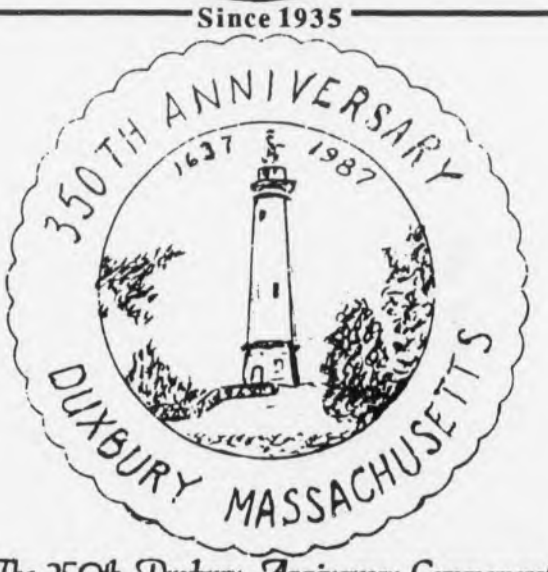
The scouts were given a treasure map and they had to go to different areas to try to solve clues to the treasure. The cubs received "golden-butterscotch pieces of eight" if they solved the puzzle and then proceeded to the next clue on their map.

The winners of the "Treasure Hunt" are:

First place: Josh Roth, Dan Silvia, Trevor Cook, Dean Volugnis.

Second Place: Tiger Cubs-Pat Leahy, Tom Leahy, Bob Moody, Matt Lewis and Aaron Sawchuck; Cub Scouts: Jerry Cogill, Joel Puorro, Paul Snow and Eric Snow.

Third Place—Bob Meehan, Doug Cameron and Jason Sullivan.



The Tiger and Cub Scouts did a fine job of their exploration of Pirate Treasure. Thanks to all the parents and Boy Scouts who assisted with the Treasure Hunt.

Senior Citizens news. . .

Message from the director — Whoever it was who told me that the Center is "quiet" during the summer months must have been thinking of a different center. So far the constant hum of conversation and activity has not let up for a minute. Perhaps it's our new air conditioning that makes it such a nice place to be. . .or the great schedule of activities offered. Whatever the reason, the Senior Center is the place to be this summer! Keep us in mind when you are looking for new things to do — like walking or going on trips.

Free foot care — fit feeling feet — Foot problems are nearly as common as colds and headaches. Four out of five adults experience them at one time or another. Podiatrists and physicians can treat a variety of foot conditions and bring relief from pain and discomfort. Regular personal foot care can prevent many problems and enable us to spot early symptoms of conditions which can be professionally treated.

Dr. Gary Count, Podiatrist from Scituate, will be at the Senior Center on Wednesday, July 22 at noon to offer his services to seniors. Call Kathy at 383-9112 for an appt.

Caldor Department Store Shopper Day — Every Wednesday Caldor Stores will now have "Senior Shoppers Day." Everything in the store including Sale & Clearance merchandise will carry a 10% discount for our Senior Citizens. If you are 62 or older, go to the customer service desk at the front of the store and present your driver's license, or any other I.D. that shows your birthday, as proof of age. You will receive a Caldor Senior Citizen's discount card. Every Wed., make your purchases and show your discount card to the cashier before sale is rung up, and get 10% off. The shuttle will go to Caldor's on July 8, 22 & 29, call a week before the trip to make your reservation on the bus.

Senior Shuttle Service — Every month we have various requests for shopping trips and when we can, we try to comply. Of course if a "reasonable" number of people do not sign up for any given trip the trip will have to be cancelled. If there is a shopping center that you would like to go to, call and speak to Kathy.

Our July special trips are scheduled for: July 8, 22 & 29 to the Caldor's shopping center in Norwell in the mornings. Same dates in the afternoons to Hull Band Concerts. Thursday, July 9 to Hingham & Weymouth Harborlight Mall; July 13 Monday to Braintree Mall. Call for seat reservation one week in advance — 383-9112.

Summer Boat Trip — Once again this year the Cohasset Council on Aging & the Scituate C.O.A. is hosting a three hour BOAT CRUISE OF BOSTON HARBOR. Special price of $15.50 per person. you get a hot buffet lunch, narrated tour, and entertainment. For reservations or more information, call Kathy at the Senior Center between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m. Call 383-9112.

Red Sox Fans — We still have a limited number of Reserved Grandstand tickets available for the Red Sox vs. Seattle ball game on Saturday, July 25. Bus from the Town Hall at 11:00 a.m. return about 5 p.m. The cost is $9 for ticket & bus. Call Fred Huntwork at 383-0984.

Walking Club — Walking is an ideal exercise for Senior Citizens. Walking is safe, simple, and natural. Walking requires no formal instruction, facilities, special equipment. We find walking to be GREAT FUN! During the month of July the Cohasset STRUTTERS will meet at 8:30 a.m. every Tuesday, Wed., Thursday, & Fridays at the Senior Center. Special walks will include trips to: Georges Island, World's End in Hingham, Pond Meadow in Weymouth, and Norris Reservation in Norwell. Remember, walking is the key to good fitness. It will influence your health & quality of life. Join us at the Senior Center for a great way to start the day!

Volunteers — Volunteers of all ages are needed! If you enjoy people and have a few hours to spare, you are encouraged to contact the Cohasset Council on Aging office, 3 No. Main St., or call 383-9112, we need your help!

Story hours at library

"Family Story Hour" has become a popular summer tradition at the Paul Pratt Library. Guest storytellers from the New England area will once again present a series of evening programs for family enjoyment.

The Children's Room is pleased to offer these story hours to school-age children and their parents Monday evenings, beginning July 13 at 7:30 p.m.

Carol Duhammel, Children's Librarian at the Montello Branch of the Brockton Public Library, will be our first guest storyteller. Duhammel is fondly remembered for her puppets, which assist in her storytelling. Her stories will include "Loudmouse," "Too Much Nose," and "Jim and the Beanstalk."

The audience will also be invited to participate. Duhammel's program will last about 45 minutes.

Log 'N Line a second house to locals. . .

was pulled away from the kitchen, explained the on-going popularity of the Log. "People know this is a family-run business and it's a convenient location for them. This is one of the few breakfast places in town, and they love the food here. It's a popular gathering place, whether it's the guys rushing off to work while grabbing a cup of coffee, or someone who wants to sit down and talk to neighbors while they have a leisurely meal," she stated.

There are local "regulars", she admitted - a cast which includes judges, lawyers, carpenters, lobstermen and bankers. "They're all varieties," she laughed. "We've had customers who have come here for 15 years. During the weekdays, it's mostly the people who work here. On the weekends, we get people from Marshfield, Scituate and Norwell."

One of those regulars is Sheldon Sladen, a local lobsterman who arrives at the Log every morning, seven days a week. "You can set your clock by him," Judy commented.

Sladen agreed. "I go there every day of the year," he laughed. "It's convenient because I get up early and can get my breakfast at 6 or 6:15 each morning. My wife's a late sleeper. There's always a lot of conversation going on at the Log. It's nice to meet people. I enjoy their breakfast and a little conversation. To me, it's tradition."

Judy said one secret of their popularity is that customers are never pressured to leave quickly. Most of their clientele, she noted, arrive each morning with their daily newspaper, or some business papers - even their knitting. "They feel at home," she explained. "People know they are free to come in and sit for a while, talk to their friends and have a good home-cooked meal."

She divulged that the Log has brewed the same brand of coffee for the past 15 years. It is also one of the few local establishments that brew decaffeinated coffee. She also admitted that caffeinated outsells its counterpart by a small 60/40 ratio in Cohasset.

The name Log 'n Line is a derivative of a nautical tool the logline, used to measure the depth of the water. Her husband Peter named the restaurant and a few years ago decorated the newly-renovated dining room with an overhead train track. The food may appeal to the adults, but the train track lures their children back here, Judy stated.

Seating capacity at the restaurant is 56, and in the busy summer months, that is not nearly sufficient for the numbers who would like to sit down for a meal. Aside from the annual summer rush, another hectic time is during local election campaigns.

Christopher explained that committee workers and campaign staffers spend hours at the Log, planning strategy. Although political activists are welcomed to the Log, Judy emphasizes she is neutral when it comes to local issues and candidates.

Aside from the campaigns, the Log regulars often receive telephone messages at the restaurant. "We take messages for people, although I discourage anyone from leaving anything important here. There's always the chance we could forget. If there's a problem with someone's boat in the harbor, or someone's looking for someone else, chances are they can locate him at the Log," Judy said.

As far as the Kulturides are concerned, any gossip that is generated in the dining room never enters the kitchen. "We don't take the time to listen in on anyone's conversations," the owner said. "We're too busy cooking.We really don't know what's going on - we've always the last ones to hear anything."

The owners would consider opening early evening hours "if I get some help from the angels." Judy admitted the biggest obstacle now is the lack of waitressing help, a problem shared by many restaurants and shopkeepers hungry for help.

"That's not to say I don't great help now - I do. But if I'm going to be open longer, I need more help. And, like everyone else, it's very hard to find good help," she said.

People come and go throughout the busy day at the Log. Friends stop in for a cup of coffee and a chat with an old friend, or a new acquaintance. "Some of these people are like clockwork. they arrive and leave at the same time," according to the watchful owner.

Someday, she said, tradition may end at the Log. No vacations, 12-hour, seven - day workweeks take its toll, Judy stated. She looks forward to an early retirement from the business, a time when she and her family will be together.

"We've worked hard," she said, savoring a long puff on her last cigarette before she joined her son once again in the kitchen.

Pipe splits property owners. . .

conservation commission hereby orders the following: The property owner, his agents and all others shall immediately cease and desist from further activity affecting the wetland portion of this property; wetland alterations resulting from said activity shall be corrected and the site returned to its original condition," the order said.

"Failure to comply with this order," it warned, "may constitute grounds for legal action. Massachusetts General Laws Chapter 131, Section 40 provides: Whoever violates any provision of this section shall be punished by a fine of not more than $1,000 or by imprisonment for not more than six months or both. Each day or portion thereof continuing violation shall constitute a separate offense."

A copy of the correspondence was first addressed to Bernard and Linda Hamill, the previous owners of 24 Bates Lane, from whom the Donaldsons purchased the property.

Bernard Hamill replied, "Please be advised that I do not own the property described in your letter to me... The property was transferred to a Charles Donaldson on June 12, 1987. He can presumably be reached at 24 Bates Lane."

The Donaldsons were "reached" with the same message, as well as with a copy of Hamill's reply, and were before the commission Tuesday to discuss the matter.

"When I received a copy of that letter," Charles Donaldson told the commission Tuesday, "it was my first inkling of trouble."

Paul Laugelle, the contractor hired to improve conditions in the back yard of the Donaldson's new house accompanied the young Virginia couple and told the committee, "The property's previous owner deceived these people."

He explained, "They weren't going to buy the house unless we would do this and Hamill said it was okay. But he was well aware they were not supposed to."

"That's not true," Hamill responded Wednesday, July 8. "That's ridiculous. "

Laugelle noted, "The swale had been filled and a pipe was put in. It was a four-inch pipe that was buried and surrounded by gravel so it couldn't be seen.

"These people are being punished for something they were misled about," Laugelle said.

Hamill argued, "Everyone knew the pipe was there; the house came with the pipe. This is something you could not miss if you looked at the property.

"It was here when I bought the house from a developer in 1984 and I never did any work on the back yard," Hamill added, saying he believes the town engineers supervised the project when it was first constructed.

"When I sold the house," he said, "that was the first time I heard from the conservation commission."

Sally Wood, the real estate agent who negotiated the transaction between the Hamills and the Donaldsons said Wednesday morning, July 8, she was aware there was a pipe in the back yard, but "absolutely did not know" the condition of the back yard at 24 Bates Lane was in violation of the Wetlands Protection Act.

"The back yard was unfinished, she said. From day one, the the back yard was a condition of their buying it. It was a condition of the sale that it be corrected."

According to Donaldson, specific resolutions to the back yard problem were agreed upon during the original offer, but were made general in in the purchase and sale agreement, which he said Hamill, an attorney, drew up.

Hamill disagreed with regard to what Donaldson said was their agreement.

Backyard pipe instigates property fued . . .

"I never even spoke to the man," he said. "I never said work would be done. All I did, was agree to knock $2,500 off the price of the house.

"If you're selling your house to someone," Hamill commented, "and they say they don't like the color of the house, that they want to live in a purple house, you don't go and paint the house purple, because if they decide to back out you're stuck with a purple house. You just chop $50 off the price and hope they'll be happy in their purple house."

Hamill said he wasn't sure the Donaldsons would purchase his house because of their complaints about the back yard.

"At one point, Donaldson backed out," Hamill claimed. "We gave him his deposit back. He was not a buyer we were terribly confident in."

Donaldson's portrayal of the transaction was somewhat different.

"We were pressured to sign the purchase and sales agreement," he said.

"At that time, I was traveling between Massachusetts and Virginia, working two jobs and house hunting," Donaldson explained. "I didn't have time to have a lawyer look it over."

The Donaldsons told the conservation committee, the one condition they insisted upon before buying the house, was that the condition of the back yard be improved.

"The drainage wasn't flowing, it was just sitting there," Donaldson explained. "We wanted our child to have a nice yard to play in.

"Bernie Hamill said it needed a bigger pipe," he said, "so we negotiated it so that part of the money from the sale would go for that work."

The selling price was reduced and part of the broker's fee went toward the repairs, according to Donaldson.

Roberta Sawyer, the attorney who was involved in finalizing the sale said had no knowledge of the condition or the agreement.

"I only handled the bank work," she explained. "I didn't review the sale. It was a private agreement between the buyer and the seller. I had no knowledge of it."

Now that the new six-inch pipe and headwall are in the ground, the board must determine whether it can stay or must be pulled out.

Members expressed concern that the pipe could become blocked, leading to flooding problems for neighbors.

They recalled a 1983 incident in which during grading of lots six, seven and eight of the subdivision, fill obstructed the natural downward flow of water along the swale in question. As a result of the blockage, Joseph and Pauline Carbone of 56 Church Street became owners of unwanted lakefront property.

"I don't think there will be a water problem there now," Laugelle insisted. "The water will flow smoothly and should not be a hazard to abutters."

Chairman Merle Brown added, "I don't know why the planning board said they couldn't put a pipe there. You may have to file an after-the-fact notice of intent, so we can issue a new order of conditions, including the condition that that pipe be kept clear."

Commissioner Pat Buckley added, "We wrote the order so that it has to comply with the planning board. There is no way around that."

The commission noted small fees would be required for such action. But the Cohasset's newcomers are prepared for either 'Yea' or 'Nay.'

"If we have to dig that pipe out," Charles Donaldson said, "we are going to sue somebody and Bernie will get his house back and we are going to leave."

around town

☐ Saw Nancy Anderson this past week...she is sporting two black eyes after taking a terrible tumble, but is feeling fine now. Just shows that she's in terrific shape, must be all of that walking!

☐ Speaking of walking, that's just what Mimi (Fran) Chatterton plans on doing soon! She is due to enter the New England Baptist Hospital on July 12 to undergo hip replacement surgery. She is scheduled to remain there for three weeks, we are sure that visits and cards would be most welcome. Knowing Mimi, she'll be doing laps around the Common by early September!

☐ Happy to report that Bob Jordan is home from the hospital! Here's to a continued rapid recuperation!

☐ Hope all of you saw the awesome fireworks display that Larry Eisenhower held in honor of his newly married sister-in-law!! There were none finer around, and it sure must have made the bride's evening a memorable one.

☐ Happy belated birthday to Larry Souza.

☐ The American Legion is planning its second annual clambake in September, and it promises to be even better than last year! They are having all of the delicious traditional food, a tent, a band, etc. It will be held on the 12th, so make plans to stick around so that you may attend.

☐ Bon voyage to David MacDonald as he leaves for a month in Hawaii. He will leave today, as part of the Naval Academy cruise program. Hope he sends postcards to all!

☐ Happy Birthday to Anita Bernstein. We won't give away any ages, just hope that she has a wonderful day.

☐ If you are looking for a nice evening out, why not head to Christo's II Dinner Theatre and catch the Odd Couple? You'll be able to see Cohasset's own Molly Hochkeppel, who will be playing Olive Madison. This is the twelfth year that she has appeared in summer stock and other theatre work, so she sure will be wonderful.

☐ Congratulations to the Social Service League, who recently celebrated its 75th anniversary. A super time was had by all that attended, and they also elected officers for the coming year. They are: President, Virginia Riley; Vice-president, Terry Cuaghey; Secretary, Jane Porter; Treasurer, Joan Bell; Chairman of Family Service Committee, Ann Hublitz; Director of Personnel, Mary Hartwell; Co-chairmen of Nursing Committee, Sally O'Neill and Judy Collins; and the Board of Directors who are: Donna O'Connor, Mary Ahearn, Maura Ditmar, Lee Drew, Kathy Morgan, Annellen Walsh, Mary Chittim, Taffy Nothnagle, Dianne Taylor, Adrienne Thompson, Helen Hooper and Eileen Corbett.

☐ You probably received a letter from our local AFS last week, asking that you donate what you can for their projects. Did you know that 11 CHS students are taking part this summer going to three continents? And that Kim Hunt will defer placement at the University of Vermont so that she can spend a year at a Turkish High School. Mary Beth McNamara will go to Belgium, Laurel Collins heads for Malaysia; Scott Caristo goes to Switzerland; Heather St. Onge, Finland; Margo Nedrow, Brazil; Kim Dwyer, Mariana Islands; Melissa Nothnagle, Indonesia; Cindy Dormer, Portugal; Felicia Bartow, Germany; and Andrew Rossi and Jennifer Martin will go to Greece. Hope all of these students send "Around Town" news of their travels, it sure would be fun to read all of their activities.

☐ Three CHS students spent a day with State Representative Mary Jeanette Murray with her day on the hill orientation to the legislative and Government Process at the State House. They were Marcella Luppinchini (AFS exchange student, so that he may go home and tell about the Democratic process), Margo Nedrow and Laurel Collins.

☐ Sharon Becker of the Cohasset Board of Health has completed the Title 5 Workshop Training Course. The Association is an organization for Health Board members, and represents appointed and elected officials across the State. The program was co-sponsored by the Association and the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering.

☐ James M. Replogle was awarded a baccalaureate degree at the fortieth commencement exercises recently held at New England College.

☐ Sean Farrell, the son of Mr. Terence J. Farrell of Virginia Lane and Mrs. June Farrell of Manchester, Ma., received the Most Improved Award for Varsity Tennis at Cheshire Academy in Connecticut.

☐ If you are a local businessman, why not consider sponsoring a softball game? Sponsorships are $30 for the series, and the team players will wear t-shirts with the business on the back. The games are played by town officials from Cohasset, Hull, Norwell, Scituate, and Marshfield and begin on Sunday in Scituate. Each town will play each other at least once, and there will be playoffs. All of this is for the Jimmy Fund. If you should wish to make a Jimmy Fund contribution and sponsor a Cohasset official, call Jack Worley at the Cohasset Recreation office at 383-6791.

☐ Happy Birthday to Tracy (Swain) Barrows.

☐ Of course we have to wish the special Independence Day Gal, Krissy Pompeo, a grand birthday. . .she's 20!!

☐ That's all the news that's fit to print for this week. Give a call or drop a line and tell us what is new with you.

Town promises to develop affordable housing worked last week to formulate a draft memorandum of agreement between the town and the state Executive Office of Communities and Development (EOCD). The draft was submitted to the state for comment last Friday, with a deadline for a final document by July 24.

The EOCD issued a stern warning to Cohasset last month stating that unless a memorandum was developed, the state would declare the town "unreasonably restrictive" and all discretionary state grants would be withheld. Since that written warning, town officials have met with EOCD representatives. As a result of those meetings, members of the fair housing committee decided to apply for a state grant which will allow a consultant to work with the town to develop an affordable housing plan.

The draft agreement promises that selectmen, working with the housing authority, planning board and fair housing committee, will draft a town housing policy. That policy will include the "actual development of housing specifically available to low - and moderate - income families, through both public and private channels."

The executive secretary and the building inspector will compile an inventory of all town-owned land and buildings. The list will include all developable land, "however, the initial list . . . will indicate any factors which they feel make the sites in zones other than residential, undesirable or unacceptable. After completion of the final list, the housing authority and the planning board will discuss potential sites where it would specifically recommend the development of housing available to low and moderate income families," the agreement states.

It also notes that selectmen and the planning board will attempt to attract private developers to design and construct low - and moderate - income housing on inventoried town land and other property.

In addition, selectmen will explore the possibility of converting the Bates Building on Elm Street into one or more units of housing for low - and moderate - income families, when the building is vacated by municipal offices. Selectmen will also review the possible conversion of two subsidized apartments on Government Island into two or more units of housing to be made available to low - and moderate - income people. This study will be completed by September 30, 1987.

According to the draft agreement, the planning board will re-examine the town's zoning bylaws to determine whether they impede or allow the development of affordable housing. The planning board, with selectmen's support, will propose revisions to the bylaws which will encourage the development of housing designated for low - and moderate - income families, or which will encourage the conversion of existing housing to multi-family units for low - and moderate - income people.

The proposed bylaw changes will be drafted by December 31, 1987 and will be presented to town meeting in the spring of 1988.

The agreement concludes by noting, "In light of the commitments described above, the Secretary of Communities and Development does hereby agree that the Town of Cohasset is not, at this time, unreasonably restrictive of housing."

Executive Secretary Andrew said this week that although a specific date has not been set, the Independence building sale will go through. "The survey has been completed and the plan will be filed with the registry. It's now just a matter of getting a date for the closing," he explained. "We're following a vote of the town meeting and will proceed with the sale. We have an obligation. If the prospective owner changes his mind, then we could take the matter back to town meeting. But he's made it quite clear he wants that building."

Attorney F. Noel Collins plans to purchase the former Independence gown museum building for more than $86,000. He plans to use the first floor as his office and will reside on the second floor.

Andrew denied the sale was accelerated because of the attention caused by Klein's request several weeks ago to suspend the sale. "We've wanted the survey plan to be drawn for months now," he answered. "It was just a matter of waiting for an engineer to come to do it."

Klein acknowledged her request to stop the Independence building sale was refused by the board. She has requested that decision in writing, hoping to arm herself with evidence when she files suit against the town in superior court.

"I'm doing this for myself and a lot of other people in this town," she said this week. Klein explained that she is without substantial income because of several factors. Although she holds a master's degree in public health from Columbia, and is one credit shy of a law degree, she admitted "maybe my skills aren't as sharp as they once were. I've been raising children for the past 20 years - that's been my occupation."

Klein also finds herself overqualified for many positions, noting that in a market saturated with eligible, 25-year-old professionals, a 44-year-old woman cannot find immediate employment security in the Boston area.

She believes she has a basis to stop the sale of the Independence building. "The horse may be out of the barn already, but I want to try to stop it," she stated. "My feeling is that the town is moving backward, except for the work being done by the fair housing committee. The town ought to stop selling its property while looking for other places to put affordable housing. I plan to move forward.."

Private driveway proposal under study

Paul Ferrini of 89 Ripley Road and his engineer, Robert Hannigan want to construct a private driveway, crossing wetlands, to three house lots off Route 3A. But they will have to wait through a battle of the boards.

The conservation commission told them Tuesday it favors driveways made of permeable substance, such as gravel. "We don't want road salt coming off cars and draining into our water supply," Chairman Merle Brown said.

The planning board has told Ferrini and Hannigan it prefers pavement to potholes.

The three lots, which are just south of the new Super Stop & Shop, and on the same side of the street, will each contain a single family dwelling and be connected by a common driveway (of as yet, unknown character), if the applicants are successful.

Along with their suggestion that the 15-foot wide drive cross a roadside culvert at its narrowest point, Ferrini and Hannigan have planned alterations of 3,000 square feet of wetlands, providing compensatory storage area.

The conservation commission said it will debate the pros and cons of permeable driveways with its planning board brethren and meet with the applicants July 21.

Developer proposes affordable housing units

By Jane Lane
Mariner Staff

As plans move along to develop a fair housing plan for the town, one developer has stepped forward with a proposal to begin construction of several affordable housing units.

A. J. Dougenik, project coordinator for Point Deck, Inc., has asked to meet with selectmen regarding plans to construct approximately 16 low and moderate income housing units off Rte. 3A. Dougenik has already initiated preliminary discussions with the health board and the housing authority.

"I really don't want to offend anyone in town," he explained. "I just want to discuss these plans with selectmen at their next meeting. The proposal as it stands now is to construct 130 bedrooms, 25 percent of which will be allocated for low income."

The proposed location will be 14. 5 acres on the west side of Rte. 3A. It is bounded by Whitney Hill Technology Center to the south, the state DPW to the west, land belonging to Crocker Lane Realty Trust II to the north, and King Street to the east.

The property, which is currently zoned light industry, would require a change to residential by the zoning board of appeals. "All I'm doing at this point," the Scituate resident stated, "is seeking to see how the town will receive these plans. We don't want to get into a long-term battle. If the town likes the plan, we can begin very soon."

The project manager explained that between 16 and 20 units will be allocated as low income housing. There will be approximately 64 two-bedroom units. Twenty-five percent of that total, or 16 units, will be set aside as low and moderate income units. From that total, Dougenik explained, eight will be sold for approximately $86,000 and eight will cost about $110,00.

"One-half of the 16 units will be very affordable for families with incomes up to $23,000," he said. "The other half will be affordable units, for incomes up to

Harbor committee: no more 'fiascos'

Members of the harbor study committee presented a list of prioritized needs to selectmen. Topping the list was a plea for no more "fiasco's."

John Pfaffmann, a member of that committee, reminded selectmen Monday night they had spent 18 months devising a harbor marina plan. At the urgence of the local fishermen, that plan was overturned by selectmen last spring.

"We have more important things to do," Pfaffmann said, adding that increased communication between the two boards is vital. Included in a list of priorities is the need to dredge the harbor channel, pay raises for the harbor patrols, and increased mooring space for the more than 300 persons on the waiting list.

Selectmen promised that a special meeting will be scheduled to discuss the needs and concerns of the harbor committee members.

According to Pfaffmannthe safety and security within the harbor should be beefed up, with channel signs finally replaced, and a pay raise for harbor patrolmen.

Regarding security he stated, "I'm saying they (harbor master and assistant harbormasters) need more authority. They don't need pistols. But if their actions lead to legal action, then there's a need for indemnification."

The harbor patrols, Pfaffmann continued, need to provide greater visibility. He suggested the committee investigate the pay rate for harbor patrols in neighboring towns, the regulations and their effectiveness. "We need a better handle on what other towns are doing," he stated.

Team teaching OK'd for seventh graders

The school committee voted Monday to approve the implementation of team teaching of seventh graders beginning this fall.

If the scheduling can be worked out, and Supt. Stephen Hart said he believes it can, Cohasset seventh graders will be taught under a "cluster" concept that officials hope will ease the students' transition from elementary school to high school.

The team teaching program, to be funded by a Horace Mann grant from the state, is expected to provide teachers more coordination and planning, as well as flexibility, while providing students greater individual attention, a closer student-teacher relationship and uniform standards for homework, discipline and daily class requirements.

"Before I assumed this position," Hart told the committee, "this was something I wanted to do. It has been a constant concern, both of parents and staff.

"The grade distribution has changed somewhat over the years with the declining enrollment," he noted. "At one time, the junior high was more separate than it is now; the junior high had its own principal, but that distinction has eroded."

AFS students seeing the world

By John Magadieu
Mariner staff

While most Cohasset High School students are enjoying "typical" summer vacations, eleven juniors and seniors are currently exploring faraway lands, meeting new people and experiencing foreign cultures through AFS.

Through recent phone calls and letters, the intrepid 11 have treated their families and friends to tastes of life from Brazil to Indonesia.

Karin Bartow just got a letter from her daughter, Felecia, who is now living with a family in the little village of Bellenberg, Germany.

Felecia, an 11th grader, has a "sister" named Sabina, who is her age, Bartow said. Both girls have spent some time at "gymnasium," the highest educational level.

"It is very rigorous," she added, "and when Felecia first arrived, Sabina was studying very hard for her exams."

While at gymnasium, Felecia accompanied her class on a trip to Berlin. "At first she assumed it was a normal school trip, but later learned it was sponsored by the German government," Bartow said. "She went to Berlin to see what life was like for Germans in the free west, as compared with the communist east."

Felecia and Sabina will be in school through the end of July.

Bartow reported that her daughter is happy with her German family and likes Germany, "although she senses a lot of anti-American feeling, because of the U.S. military presence there. It's not directed toward her."

In fact, the Germans have been quite hospitable, according to Bartow. "Felecia said she was impressed with the AFS club in Germany.

"She had to travel by train from her orientation site to Bellenberg," Bartow said, "and at one point there was a quick changeover. The AFS had a woman at the train station holding blue and white balloons, the AFS colors over there, and she made sure Felecia got on the right train."

One student way off the beaten track is Melissa Nothnagle. "Bogur, Indonesia is about as different from Cohasset as any place," said Melissa's mother, Taffy.

"Melissa says the traffic is incredible," Nothnagle said. "The streets are full of goats and bikes and smelly, little three-wheeled vehicles."

Nothnagle said her daughter finds the noise, heat and activity in this city south of Jakarta "fascinating." Temperatures average 90 to 100 degrees, and it rains hard for about 15 minutes every day.

Melissa has found her new family very hospitable. Though she studied the Indonesian language, and the bhasa dialect is easy for her to understand, her family, including five sisters speaks English.

While she has not had to adapt lingually, Melissa is living with a family of devout moslems who pray five times per day, starting at 4:30 a.m., her mother said.

"They are very home-oriented and also are well-educated," she noted. "The father is a professor at an agricultural college."

Melissa is sure to stand out when she attends school

Cohasset's week . . .

Gjesteby attends conference

Martha K. Gjesteby, a Cohasset selectman, joined more than 200 members of the National Association of Regional Councils (NARC) at its annual meeting May 16-19 in Reno, Nev.

Gjesteby, who was recently re-elected as secretary of MAPC, attended several conference sessions, including: the effectiveness of communicating regional priority to legislative bodies, and getting the business community interested in regional planning issues.

Gjesteby also attended workshops on the following: regional interest in the city; regional councils and the changing workforce and coordinating and utilizing activities by regional councils with the academic community.

"The conference was busy, with many valuable sessions," said Gjesteby. "Many of our MAPC issues were touched upon, including sub-regions, landfills, demographic changes and jobs, and also a plan to address issues for the year 2000."

MAPC is the regional planning agency for 101 cities and towns in Massachusetts.

Town Hall plans OK'd

Selectmen this week approved the architect's floor plan for the town hall addition and renovation project.

The approved plan will keep the computer room where it currently is located. The building inspector's office will be on the first floor and the selectmen's office will be located on the second level. The accountant, treasurer and assessor's offices will also be on the second floor.

The revised floor plan was a result of an informal meeting between selectmen, architect Brett Donham and several department heads. In a previous hearing on the proposed plans, several town hall employees discussed their concerns with the relocation of their offices.

Although Selectman Martha Gjesteby initially objected, selectmen decided their office should be located on the second floor. Selectman Burt Pratt, who attended the informal discussion meeting, argued that selectmen's administrative coordinator now spends "a lot of time directing people to other offices. I don't believe we need to be on the first floor." He noted the building inspector's office is often quite busy with contractors seeking permits and approvals for building plans.

Selectmen unanimously approved the revised floor plan.

Keim resigns committee

Selectmen this week accepted the resignation of Judy Keim from the Cultural Exchange Committee. The board approved terms for Deede Moore, JoAnn Chittick and Anne Moore. All current members were reappointed to that board.

Boat excise fine approved

Deputy Tax Collector Nancy Snowdale informed selectmen that state legislation was recently approved, allowing for a $20 fine for late payment of boat excise taxes.

Snowdale, in a letter to selectmen, noted that currently the harbormaster passes out boat decals only after the mooring fee has been paid. She suggested that a new police be established, enforcing the mooring fee and boat excise tax payment at the same time. The treasurer-collector's office could pass out the boat decals after consulting with their payment records.

Currently, she said, a $5 late payment is attached to the boat excise tax. She suggested the $20 penalty be assessed late payments.

Clean Water Day July 25

July 25 has been designated Clean Water Day in Cohasset. Selectmen this week voted to allow volunteers to solicit information about the event and its sponsors for a few hours that day.

Amy Goldsmith explained that Clean Water Day is a joint project between Save the Harbor/Save the Bay and the Clean Water Action Project. Volunteers will be located along Sandy Beach and Government Island from 1 to 3:30 p.m., disseminating brochures and information about the two organizations.

Selectmen previously approved the designation of July 25 as Clean Water Day. David Chittim of the Sandy Beach Association informed Goldsmith the organizations would be allowed to use the beach that day.

Historical harbor tour July 25

Saturday, July 25, the Cohasset Historical Society will sponsor a double feature event of historical interest for the public.

Starting at 2 p.m. at the Unitarian Church on Cohasset Common, a walking tour of some of Cohasset's historical homes will be hosted by John F. Cole of Cole & Associates of Ipswich.

Cole, an appraiser and marketing expert on historic and antique New England homes, is no stranger to the homes of Cohasset, having spoken at a joint meeting of the Chamber of Commerce and the Historical Society in February.

The walking tour will give guests the opportunity to hear Mr. Cole describe the distinctive architectural features of the buildings around the Common, along Elm Street, and in the harbor area.

The tour will arrive at the Minot's Light Memorial Park on Government Island at 3:30 p.m. where the second feature of the afternoon will take place. At this site of the preparatory construction of Minot's Light, guests will hear Joseph Tully, Engineering Liaison Specialist for the U. S. Coast Guard, describe the current repair work and renovation underway on our historic light house.

This project, involving the removal of the light itself and many of the granite stones at the top of the light house, should prove most interesting to people in the area who have been watching the work take place over the past few weeks.

There is no admission for the walk. Refreshments will be served following Tully's talk.

As always, any contributions to the Historical Society will be gratefully received.

Higher contamination levels worry health board

By John Magadieu
Mariner staff

The most recent test results of monitoring wells at Cohasset Heights Ltd., a private commercial landfill on Crocker Lane, had health board members voicing their concerns at a hearing, July 8.

"The board is concerned with the results of GHR Engineering's readings of monitoring well 3," said John Burns, health board chairman. "There has been a considerable elevation of volatile organic chemicals and there have been indications of some that were not present before."

According to the study by GHR Engineering, a company hired by Cohasset Heights to test monitoring wells at the landfill: the level of toluene in monitoring well 3 was 240 parts per billion, and eight times higher in May than it was in February; the level of ethyl benzene was 77 parts per billion, twice as high in May as it was in February; and the level of xylene was 140 parts per billion, 14 times higher in May than it was in February.

Furthermore, the chemical vinyl chloride, a known carcinogen, was found for the first time in monitoring well 3 at 7.7 parts per billion.

Six other chemical contaminants were discovered at various concentrations in monitoring well 3, while six chemicals were found in monitoring well 9 and seven were discovered in well 9A.

The board noted, some of the contaminant levels in monitoring well 9 have declined.

"Look at the historical perspective," urged William Norman, a GHR hydrologist. "The levels have fluctuated up and down.

"It's attribuatable to a number of factors," he explained. "Those factors include the fluctuating level of the water table beneath the landfill, the changes in the direction of flow of ground water and the amount of precipitation."

Norman noted the effects associated with precipitation have been improved, because CHL has worked to reduce infiltration at the landfill by grading.

"Looking at the conditions," argued Michael Leon, special counsel for the town, "we should expect steadily improving results. CHL has removed the suspicious orange liquid on the trustees' property and has done some grading, so we would expect less severe conditions.

"There is not as much precipitation this time of year as during the fall and spring," Leon added, "so we expected a decline, rather than an advance in the levels of volatile organic chemicals."

"The sampling time was a wet period of the year," Norman responded.

"But there has been an effort to intercept surface breakthroughs and to intercept leachate from under the landfill," Leon said, "so there should be lower levels of leachate in area wells. In light of these improvements to the site, I'm confused."

"It's too early to tell whether the new collection system is working," Norman said. "It will take a couple of samples to see if there is a downward trend."

Norman explained, there has been capping, seeding and grading at the landfill since June 1. "It may be a while before we see the full effects on the levels of leachate."

"There has been a significant elevation in levels found near the border of the landfill by the property owned by the trustees of reservations," Leon noted. "This board has expressed concern in the past about the levels of contaminants... How far downgradient does this contamination flow toward the Weir River?" he asked.

Norman told the board, "We don't have any wells in that area, but we would expect to see a similar decrease in the northerly direction as in the southerly direction.

"We have made recent calculations to determine the amount of water in the wetlands surrounding the landfill," he added. "The dilution rate of constituents released showed a 13 to one dilution ratio in the Great Swamp. So, if a certain level of chemical constituent went into the water, it would be diluted 13 times as it travels from the landfill to Route 3A."

Norman said he took into his calculations the total surface and ground water which flows through the landfill and the amount of water at the base of the landfill, through the total amount of water for dilution.

"It surprises me that the dilution factor is so low considering the size of the great swamp," Leon said. "If by the time leachate reaches Route 3A it has only been diluted 13 times, is there a possibility we could detect contamination in the zone of influence of wells in the Route 3A area or in Brass Kettle Brook? What is the dilution factor on the southeasterly side?"

"We haven't figured the dilution factor for the entire lower wetland down to Lily Pond," Norman commented, "but to Boulder Road, we believe the dilution ratio is about nine to one."

"Does this mean that because there were 90 parts per billion of ethyl benzene coming off the landfill, there were 10 parts per billion at Boulder Road?" Leon queried.

"We never determined the levels at Boulder Road," Norman protested.

"Well, the area north of the landfill is an estuary of the Weir River," Leon said, "and the state has named it an area of critical environmental concern. Considering the dilution factors in that direction, that is something the board should be concerned about."

Anton Moehrke, attorney for CHL argued that the pollution item was not on the agenda for the hearing and because one of the landfill's engineers could not be present, the subject be discussed at a later date.

"This is new information and it is right for the board to bring it up," board member William Baird retorted. "We had no reason to believe monitoring well 3 would be so contaminated. Vinyl chloride and benzene are just two of the volatile organic chemicals you've found there, and they are known carcinogens.

"At nearly eight parts per billion," Baird added, "the level at monitoring well 3 is eight times the drinking water quality standard for vinyl chloride and at 40 parts per billion benzene, four times the standard for benzene. If you add up the total number of contaminants, no one would consider that water to be healthy."

Baird agreed with Leon. "Since the Weir River is an estuary and it's obvious the contamination has gone beyond the landfill's property line," he said, "we should correspond with the regional engineer for the state Dept. of Environmental Quality Engineering and raise these concerns."

Contamination. . .

The landfill representatives noted, quarterly reports have been sent to the solid waste department of the DEQE.

"I'm afraid they're going into a file with hundreds of other reports," Baird commented. "And they're not even going to the water quality department."

He questioned whether contaminants could be flowing into Lily Pond through fissures in the bedrock, undetected by the monitoring wells surrounding the landfill.

"The bedrock does not have a significant amount of interchange," Norman responded. "The bedrock is fractured to a certain extent, but we have seen only low levels in the bedrock wells adjacent to the landfill and did not see any contamination downgradient off-site.

"There is a very remote possibility constituents flow through the rock," he added, "because the trend is for them to move upward to the surface water."

Norman said he believes the fractures in the bedrock are discontinuous and could not convey contaminants from the landfill to Lily Pond.

At this point, attorney Moehrke again registered his objection to the discussion of a non-agenda item, noting CHL previously filed a lawsuit against the health board for such activity.

"There's nothing wrong with discussing this subject matter," he told the board, "but it should be on the agenda in advance of the hearing, so our experts can be here to answer your questions fully."

Leon agreed, noting there will be further opportunity to discuss the issue of contamination, "and our consultants will have the additional benefits of further monitoring well results."

"We're not asking to come back this time next year," Moehrke added. "We will meet with the DEQE and representatives of this board, and if you want, we could all come back next week and start all over if we have the stamina."

The health board and CHL representatives were scheduled to meet with DEQE officials late this week for further discussions regarding the contamination.

Counsel to again review Heights insurance

By John Magadieu
Mariner staff

Michael Leon, special counsel to the health board agreed Wednesday to again review insurance policies covering a private local landfill to see if they provide adequate protection for the town.

Amid public criticism that the health board has delayed action on the insurance issue, board members and representatives of Cohasset Heights Ltd. danced around the question of who would win a legal battle over insurance if it went to court. And in the end, they agreed to continue the hearing again.

While the landfill's comprehensive policy was not renewed in October, 1986, both sides agreed that with a full exclusion clause the policies have a face value of $5 million and are "valid and claimable to this day."

But according to Leon, the board can weigh that insurance coverage against potential losses in a disaster.

"The lack of environmental liability and the lack of comprehensive insurance could constitute a public danger and a public nuisance," he said.

Cohasset Heights may have solved the comprehensive liability insurance part of the question, the board learned.

Leon said he was informed before the last session that CHL had obtained a comprehensive liabilty insurance policy worth $1 million, which will be effective through June 17, 1988. But the policy does have a pollution exclusion.

"There is a law in the commonwealth," explained Anton Moehrke, the landfill's attorney, "which excludes pollution of a gradual type; it does not exclude most instances that would occur at a landfill, such as sudden or accidental catastrophes.

"For instance," he explained, "if a truck rips the leachate tank, the policy would pay. The policy also would pay in non-catastrophic instances, such as the subsurface corrosion of a gas tank over 20 years old - That would be considered sudden and accidental by the courts."

Moehrke noted, the exclusion was designed to keep from covering pollution cases where there was "forseeability and intent."

He added, "Most states go along with Massachusetts on this one, though a couple do go the other way."

The policy, Moehrke told the board, was written so that if a claim is made in future years, the town could come back to it and collect.

Leon will review this new policy, as well as those covering garbage trucks associated with the site. "This covers some areas of concern," he commented, "but it is not a panacea; there are a lot of exclusions."

Water commissioner Ronald Goodwin blasted the health board for not revoking the landfill's site assignment after Leon reported last spring that a $10 million policy CHL submitted, covering the national activities of waste hauler Browning Ferris Industries (BFI) was not adequate coverage for the dump.

"You've had months to decide now," he said, "and I want to know when the board is going to act relative to the site assignement.

"If there is a problem," Goodwin commented, "do something, or get off these people's backs."

Leon responded that the site assignment provides for alternatives to environmental liability, coverage the landfill has been unable to procure.

The board, he explained, is trying to establish what requirements are acceptable to the board.

Moehrke cited "an insurance crisis so pervasive that it has kept obstetricians from delivering babies" for CHL's inability to find environmental protection.

"The issue of the BFI policy came up," Leon said, "when Cohasset Heights was unable to obtain the coverage required by us. We asked them to approach BFI to see if they might include the activity of CHL on their policy.

Cohasset Heights was added to the BFI policy. But upon reviewing that policy, Leon told the board he did not believe it provided adequate coverage for Cohasset, because he believed it was possible the $10 million could have been taken up in a claim against any of the waste hauler's national sites, some of which are hazardous waste facilities.

"BFI has been a valued client of Cohasset Heights for a long time," Moehrke retorted. "One could well make the argument that the landfill could well be a BFI operation, despite the title, ownership and operation by CHL... If $10 million is inadequate, what is good enough?"

Moehrke suggested the landfill could give the town notice about how much in claims have been made on the BFI policy as part of the site assignment, but urged the board not to make its determination based on the speculation that BFI's $10 million is inadequate to cover CHL.

"A problem,' Leon told the board, "is that for the past year, Massachusetts has been requiring landfills to have insurance that is not available - That rule has been suspended because of hardship."

Leon noted, "The board determined that the risk to the public health included the possibility of damage to public resources and the board required CHL to provide coverage and CHL did not dispute that.

"It is possible," he added, "that a judge may weigh that danger versus CHL's ability to get a policy."

Board member William Baird queried whether Cohasset could win such a case.

"There was good reason for our lack of challenge last year," Moehrke responded. "The operator has been endeavoring to work with the town, especially with the board of health..."

He noted, there is no statute of limitations on challenging the site assignment and CHL could appeal the board's decision, promulgating "an expensive lawsuit.

"We already have had a half-dozen lawsuits between us," Mochrke said; "another would not be of any use."

Leon suggested that CHL determine the likelihood of exposure, so the board could come up with an amount of coverage comparable to the risk factor.

"It will take years to assess the risk," Moehrke responded... "It's difficult to quantify something like this."

Auction and youth theatre July 25, 26

The Young People's Summer Theatre of Scituate is gearing up for an eventful weekend on July 25 and 26.

The group will hold a public auction on Saturday, July 25 beginning at 7 p.m. at St. Luke's Church on First Parish Road in Scituate. Goods and services will be auctioned, with a Silent Auction at 7 p.m. and the main auction starting at 7:30 p.m. The purpose of the event is to raise funds for the two musical productions the group is presenting this summer.

On Sunday, July 26, the group will present the first of two productions. Billed as a Showcase presentation, there will be three performances during the day: 1:30 p.m., 7 p.m. and 9 p.m., all at St. Luke's Church.

The Showcase has a cast of 15 YPST members, all chosen based on an outstanding audition at the beginning of the summer. The production will include drama, comedy, music and a variety of other talents in an "arena theatre" setting. There are limited seats available for each performance, and the public is urged to purchase tickets in advance. All seats will be $3.

Now these guys know how to take a vacation

By Robert Tis
Mariner staff

Now these guys really know how to take a vacation: a six-week exploration of the United States in a big red Chevy Van fully equipped for long distance travel.

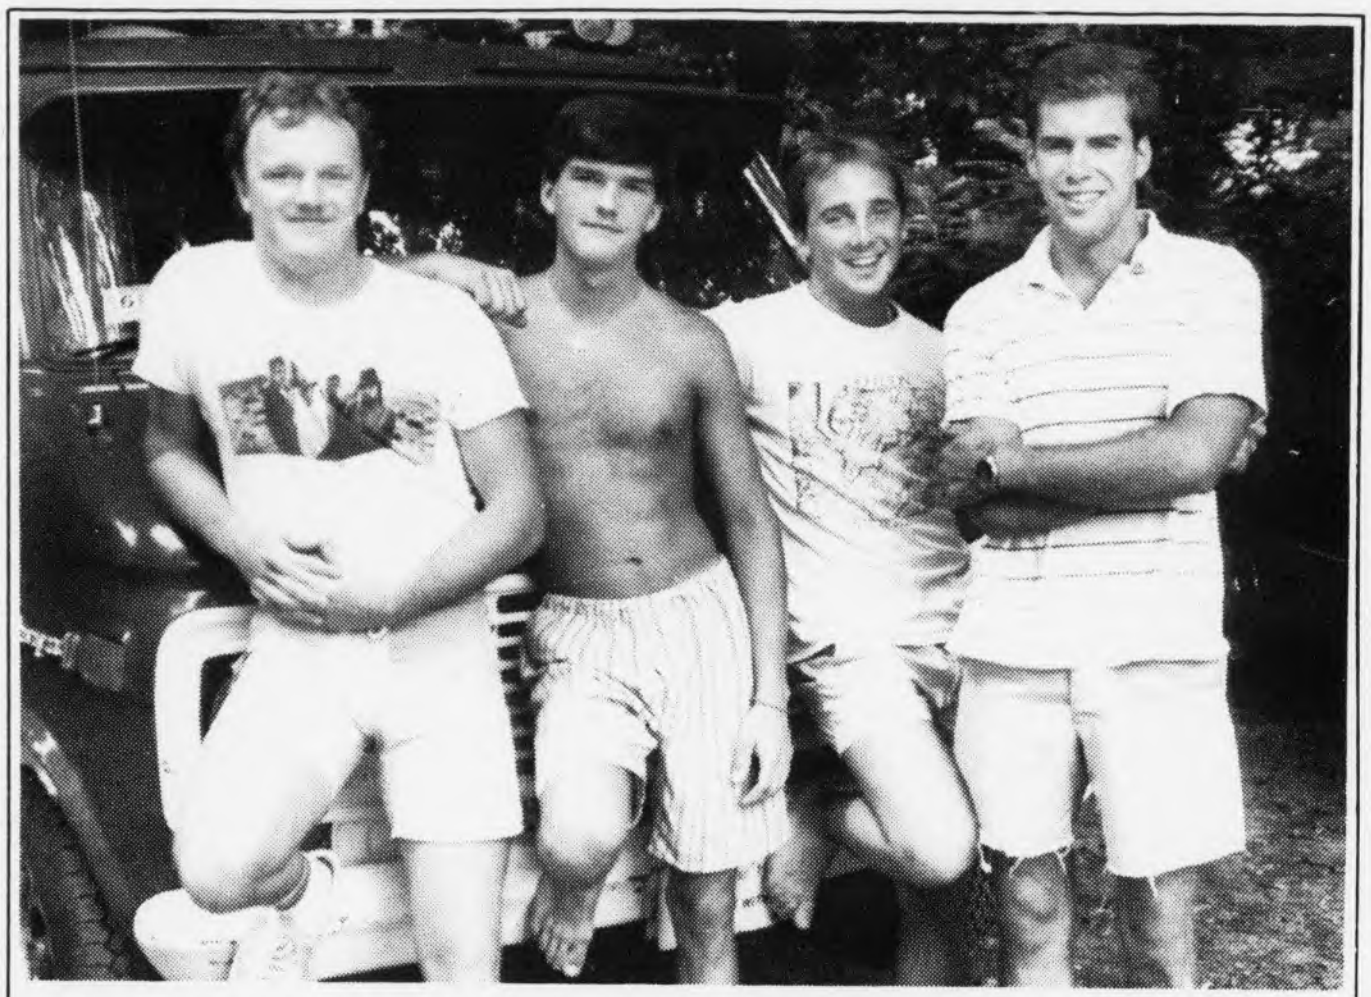
"We don't really know where we are going. We're just going to let the wind blow us around," said James Replogle. Accompanying "Rep" are four other friends, all members of Cohasset High School's class of 1982, Paul Sullivan, Pete Carlson, Dave Sargent and Ben Kennedy.

"It's really the only time in our lives that we can just drop everything and go off on a crazy trip like this, we thought we had better take advantage of it while we can," said Sullivan.

Sullivan, Carlson and Kennedy are all in the last stages of finishing their college education. Dave Sargent is a graduate of Mass. Maritime Academy and will be working as a Marine Engineer. Rep is a recent graduate of New England College and will be pursuing a career in sales.

The first stop for the boys will be Niagara Falls. "We will be looking to stop in Chicago and visit Cohasset Punch (an infamous Rush Street bar and grill noted for the signature drink concocted in our seaside community)" said Sullivan. It has not yet been decided whether our intrepid travelers will visit the city of Cohasset, Minnesota.

"We are presently taking it under advisement," said Sargent, "But we definitely plan on stopping in Boulder, Colorado, camping in the Grand Tetons, hiking in the Grand Canyon and exploring Badlands National Park."



"I'm looking forward to getting to know the people of small-town America," said Replogle, an obvious spiritual leader in this enterprise. "I want to buy some cowboy boots in Texas and go hiking around in the mountains of Washington and Oregon."

Although a definite route has not been planned, a giant map of the United States adorns one wall of the community-owned van.

"I want to see America, I want to be outdoors and see the country," said Carlson.

The van is equipped with a stereo system, a C.B. radio, a refrigerator, a gas grill, hammocks, chairs and just about everything else you might need for a month and a half on the road.

"What I picture," injected Carlson, "Is that a lot of people don't know anything about what other parts of the country look like, what the people are like, what kind of things go on. That is what we are out to discover."

The lucky travellers from Cohasset include: James Repogle, David Sargent, Paul Sullivan and Peter Carlson. (Chris Edwards)

The Mariner will be receiving correspondence on the continuing adventures of these local wanderers who will be departing Saturday at 9 a.m. sharp.

Hopefully, we will be hearing some insightful comments from the wild, wild west.

Best of luck, gentlemen, and Bon Voyage!

☐ Ledgewood Drive sure has a lot to celebrate this week, as two new members join their little community! Kathy and Stan Walsh have a new baby son, Andrew, born on Tuesday, July 7th. Andrew joins his sister Katie and brother Brian. The other new resident on the block is Rachel Garber, born on the 15th of June to Helena and Gary Garber. Rachel has her older brother Jeffrey to keep her company until she's old enough to hit the sandbox with Andrew! Congratulations to both families.

☐ Hats off to Laurie Steele, who just graduated from Dartmouth College, Magna Cum Laude and Phi Beta Kappa. She majored in Russian and spent one semester at the University of Leningrad in Russia as part of the program. She will continue on for her Graduate work at Columbia University at New York. Laurie is the daughter of Jeff and Don Steele, and the grand-daughter of Vi Tuthill, we'll bet they are all as proud as punch of Laurie!

☐ Doug Yeager and his wife Kathilynn have moved back to Cohasset and will be staying with Marilyn Adams for a while. Doug graduated from CHS in 1980 and is going to work for AT&T as a systems consultant. Kathilynn will be working for ABC Payroll as a District Sales Representative. She is originally from Malvern, Pa. They have been living in Virginia, so at least they are used to this heat wave that we are in the midst of! Welcome home Doug.

☐ Colby College, located in Waterville, Maine, sure had its share of Cohasset grads . . . those that received their degrees were William Peter Duncombe, Steven Barry Getto, Elaine Cynthia Mullen, Joy Anne Pratt and Kristin Amy Ralff. Here's hoping that your ventures into the business world are successful.

High school juniors Rich Redick and Steve Myers recently attended a day on Beacon Hill with Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray. They were introduced to the state government process at the state house.

☐ Hilary Diane Haynes has been named to the dean's list at Simmons College in Boston for the Spring Semester. She graduated from Simmons in May with a bachelor of arts degree in international business.

☐ Second Lt. Joseph W.A. Fox, brother of Robert E. Fox of Black Rock Road has graduated from US Air Force pilot training and has received silver wings.

☐ Ran into Sharon Burnell the other day, and was she ever excited . . . she had a whole package full of brand new baby pictures, her grandson that was born last week! She and Tom will sure be busy now . . .

☐ Don't forget that the summer preschool story hours are going to be held on Friday mornings at 10 a.m., not on Thursdays as was announced earlier. The first program was last week, and they will continue through August 14th.

☐ Congratulations to Jonathan Delima, Caroline deLima, David Leahy, Chip Anderson, Sarah Bishop, Lauren DeVito, Katy Carrol, Ben Redfield, Dawn Meehan and Chris McLaughlin, all of whom contributed to the Cohasset Swim Team win over Duxbury's Aqua-Dux. Always seems wonderful to beat Duxbury, right kids?

☐ I do believe this ends the lists that I have received of 1987 College grads, and here they are . . . Suzanne O'Rourke graduated from Mount Saint Mary College in New York; Maryellen Maurer graduated from Fairfield University in Connecticut; Susan G. Bryant graduated from Connecticut College in New London; Carol A. Bestick received a master of business degree from Anna Maria College for Men and Women; Amy L. Laue graduated from the University of Arizona at Tucson. When you read about all of the graduates that hail from Cohasset, it sure makes you realize what a fine start they had in our small town . . . hats off to all of the teachers in Cohasset!

A matter of priority

It's an expensive proposition to be a homeowner. First you have to pay an exorbitant price for the house, along with interest to the bank that holds the mortgage. Then on top of all that, there's the real estate taxes.

Our taxes are directly affected by the town's annual operating budget. If that budget goes up (does it ever go down?), then we see a reflective rise in our property tax bill.

That is why it is the responsibility of every tax payer in this town to be aware of how the local government is spending your tax dollars. If you are displeased with a certain expenditure, it is up to you to express that opinion. Your elected and appointed town officials are there to serve you, the individual homeowner and property tax payer.

Of course, it is the larger expenditures that most severely affect the tax rate. Improvements to Milliken Field, which are currently being designed by an engineer, will affect the wallet of every homeowner in this town. Although private solicitations are being sought, the engineering costs thus far have been paid by residents, the majority of whom believe this is a worthwhile plan. The project was approved by a majority of voters at the town meeting, and thus the Milliken Field renovation plans are going forward with the blessing of those who are paying for it.

The town hall project, which will cost more than $1 million, has also received the approval of the taxpayers here. Collectively, they voted to approve the project which will allocate more space to the town departments, and improve the offices they currently occupy.

And soon, voters will be asked to finance $1 million worth of repairs to the police and fire station complex. No one can argue that building is in deplorable shape. It needs immediate attention.

But as the chairman of the capital budget committee warned, if this project is improved, something is going to have to give. And that something will be the tax rate. There are four or five other big-money projects awaiting approval, including construction of the Milliken Field project, school repairs and continued purchase of town equipment to replace old, broken down machinery and vehicles.

As expensive as the project is, the renovations to the police and fire complex are necessary. The building, although only 26 years old, has never been properly maintained because no money was ever allocated for that proper cause. It is used 24 hours a day by men who are more concerned about perfoming their duties in an emergency, than for leaving the building in pristine shape.

The roof is leaking, the windows need major work, the doors must be replaced - all because this town has failed to maintain it through the years.

This points out the need to devise an immediate maintenance plan for all town buildings. It should be developed and implemented immediately, to coincide with the current repairs to town property. A budget will be needed to finance these maintenance repairs, but it is far past the time to ignore this need. Without such a far-reaching plan, future generations will only look forward to continued renovation projects that will reach unthinkable costs in 20 or 30 years.

Perhaps the $1 million price tag is too high. There is a possibility that the renovations can be trimmed, although the architect said his plans were designed around the study committee's continual insistence that he keep the costs down.

But the unfortunate truth is, these renovations are necessary. It can be argued that renovations to the crumbling building on Elm Street are just as vital as repairs to the athletic fields, or new offices for the town employees.

It is unfortunate that necessary endeavors must be thrown together for the inevitable comparison. But as unfortunate and unfair as that is, it is a wise move by consumers who must decide whether to pay for a product. It's a tough decision, and one that will affect both the wallet and the services provided to those consumers.

Homeless woman hopes for solution

To the Editor and Cohasset residents:

I am grateful to the staff of the Mariner for the honesty and tact of their article about our impending "homelessness." I only hope the Board of Selectmen of the town will put aside the town's pretensions of "universal wealth" and deal as honestly and promptly with the very real problems of a decent respectable portion of the town's population.

I continue to be dismayed by the selectman's pretextual reasons for moving backward (by pressing the sale of what is concededly potential low income housing now owned by the town and continuing to subsidize high income tenants chosen by patronage to occupy the four bedroom apartments at Government Island—for $350 per month!). This at the very time when the town is under a state mandate (under threat of withholding of huge sums) to move in the opposite direction.

It is ridiculous for selectman Gallagher to cite "lack of automobile parking" as a primary reason for denying housing for human beings at the Independence-old police building. Parking for automobiles has never been an objective of public housing programs, nor should it be. Moreover, the fifteen or so very pricy apartments abutting the housing in question apparently have dealt with the same parking situation without incident.

The "traffic" objections raised are equally pretextual as the Independence building is on the same traffic flow and speed density pattern as the community center, the common's duck pond and the candy store frequented by hundreds of adult and child pedestrians daily. Any objections to proximity to the street could be remedied by building a neat picket fence, similar to the one erected for decorative effect around the historic "Lothrup" house.

It is a curious example of the double standard imposed on all opportunities for low income housing in the town when this very week the Board of Selectmen unanimously approved the taking of town land enabling a private (16 unit high income housing development) at Rosano Way and North Main Street where the town's only child pedestrian fatality in my recollection took place some years ago!

The Board of Selectman's active resistance to the logical and easily implemented first steps to remedy the lack of low income housing have already brought us the critical review of state authorities and we are now subject to a deadline for action—not further resistance worsening the low income opportunities in the town. Because of this obdurate and obtuse resistance—a default of local initiative—the town will fall victim to the imposition of state or federal politically "balanced" remedies similar to the imposition of "busing" in Boston which has infinitely worsened that City's educational system because of default by local residents.

Hamill claims inaccurate article

To the Editor:

I strongly feel that I must respond to correct the inaccurate statements published in the Cohasset Mariner front page article that appeared on July 9, 1987 regarding the sale of 24 Bates Lane, Cohasset, MA.

The agreement between Mr. Donaldson and myself regarding the sale of 24 Bates Lane, Cohasset was defined in a standard Purchase and Sale Contract used by area realtors and it expressly defined all of the terms of the sale of 24 Bates Lane. There were no surprises nor were there any other agreements of any type between Mr. Donaldson and myself.

The backyard did in fact have water in it during the spring when Mr. Donaldson examined the property. He was told about the drainage pipe and stone that the town required the original developer to place on the property for drainage. He later indicated that he wanted to hire a contractor to perform work on the backyard. He negotiated a price concession from me to accomplish this and this was written into the Purchase and Sale Agreement.

With regard to Donaldson's assertion that he was "pressured to sign the Purchase and Sales Agreement" it should be noted that he took the agreement to look it over for approximately ten days. This occured after he had already withdrawn his offer once and I had given his full deposit back.

I am most disturbed however by your quotes (or misquotes) from Paul Laugelle, the contractor paid by Donaldson to perform the backyard work. Your quotes from him accuse me of deceit and intentional misrepresentation. Nothing could have been further from the truth. No transaction has ever been so thoroughly the subject of offers and counteroffers before a Purchase and Sale Agreement was reached to lay out the full and final terms of the sale.

The writer of the article John Magadieu called me the day before the article was published and told me about Mr. Laugelle's comments. I told him that Laugelle's comments did not sound accurate and asked if he was sure that Laugelle actually said them. He admitted that the meeting was "confusing" because of all that was said there. I requested that he double check his sources before publishing these remarks. He left me with the indication he would. He never did. When the Debate, details highlight summer convention

By David Wadsworth
for the Bicentennial Committee

This summer Americans nationwide are celebrating the 200th anniversary of our national Constitution, framed and signed at the Constitutional Convention held in Philadelphia from May to September, 1787.

Having begun its serious business of revising the government of the United States in late May at Independence Hall, the delegates of 12 original states spent the rest of the summer discussing, debating and finally deciding upon the myriad of details which together would constitute the frame and substance of a new national government.

July 6, a committee report proposed that the future House of Representatives should have the power to originate all bills for the raising or appropriation of money. By mid-July, after heated and sometimes angry debate, it was decided that the future Legislative branch of the government should be bicameral, having one chamber in which representation would be based on each state's population, and another chamber in which each state, large or small, would have equal representation. Thus the House of Representatives and Senate of today's national Congress were first defined, as the result of the first "great compromise" of the Convention, between the "large state" delegations and those of the "small states." Other matters of earnest debate soon followed, and a proposed new Constitutional document began to emerge, article by article, in its initial tentative form.

July 23, a method of amending the new Constitution was discussed, and on the 26th the question of proposed qualification for membership in Congress was discussed, along with qualifications for the office of the Presidency. By this time a preliminary draft of an entire Constitutional document was in process of being compiled by the special "Committee On Detail," chaired by South Carolina's delegate John Rutledge.

That committee was to present its finished preliminary plan to the Convention on August 6, and on that day Chairman Rutledge reported with the completed draft. The following day saw the Convention begin debate upon each of the 23 separate items contained in the draft, seeking consensus and further definition for each. The rest of August and the first half of September during that unusually hot Philadelphia summer were to be spent in giving final form to the preliminary draft of the proposed new national Constitution.

The Constitutional Convention itself had decided to take a "mid-summer" break during the time its Committee On Detail worked to prepare its preliminary draft. General Washington took the occasion to go trout fishing at Valley Forge where he viewed again the site of his Army's winter encampment of a decade earlier. Serving on the Committee On Detail were two New Englanders, Connecticut's Oliver Ellsworth and Massachusetts' Nathaniel Gorham, both of whom were to emerge as significant leaders at the Convention during the weeks ahead.

The Committee itself was a geographically balanced group of strong nationalist-minded delegates, eager to put into writing their principles of federalism and national union. It took its material from several sources beyond the resolutions and proposals of the Convention itself. Existing State Constitutions were perused for useful ideas, as were law books, and other pertinent documents. Even the old Articles of Confederation supplied concepts of value. The first rough draft of the preliminary document was written by Chairman Randolph, with a more polished finished draft written by Committee member James Wilson of Pennsylvania. When the entire Constitutional Convention reconvened on August 6 it read the first draft of the new document, and on the following day began debate on each of its 23 proposals.

Even as the Convention set about to examine the preliminary draft of the Constitution, the second major obstacle to confront the assembled delegates could be discerned upon the horizon, blocking the way just ahead, a matter so serious as to threaten the entire quest for a unified national government. About to step to the center of the stage were two men who, together, embodied the principals of regionalism found so strongly in the Southern United States. South Carolina's General Charles Cotesworth Pinckney and Pierce Butler, both confirmed nationalists, also were regionalists with a deep commitment to preservation of the uniquely Southern institution of slavery.

Although slavery existed in other parts of the nation beyond its southern states, nowhere else did it form as important a part of fundamental political philosophy and economics as in the southern states. If their votes were not to be recorded as "nays" when the time came to make the final count, the southern states would have to be listened to and heeded when they spoke of their particular regional institutions. General Pinckney and his fellow South Carolinian Butler would be the delegates to speak for the South, and the fate of the new Constitution would hang in the balance, until the second of the Convention's "great compromises" paved the way for further advance.

Thus, as the hottest days of that remarkable Philadelphia summer approached, the Constitutional Convention faced its most severe challenge and the need for statesmanlike wisdom never had been as great.

Hamill claims inaccurate statements in article . . .

article was published the next day, I called Mr. Laugelle. He stated to me that he never made any of those statements and that upon reading the article he too tried to call your newspaper.

It makes no difference to me now however because the damage has been done and false and defamatory statements have been printed about me.

It seems that none of this would have become an issue if the proper board had been notified of the work Donaldson or his contractor wanted done and permission or permits were received instead of doing work first and then clearing it with whatever town board controls these issues. I think that the Donaldsons will probably satisfy the Planning Board because Mr. Laugelle has indicated that the work he had done not interfere with drainage.
